NEW YORK CHILDREN GROWING BETTER?

Presiding Justice Franklin Chase Hoyt of the Children's Court in his annual report filed with the Secretary of State and the Mayor said in part: "There were 13,627 cases of individual children brought before the court during 1919. This is a decrease of 358 under 1918, when 13,985 children were dealt with. The following table shows at a glance the relative number of arrests and arraignments for each year since the establishment of the new Children's Court in 1915:

YEAR.	Juvenile Delinquency.	Improper Guardianship.	Total.	YEAR.	Juvenile Delinquency.	Improper Guardianship.	Total.
1915	7,927	6,208	14,135	1918	7,038	6,947	13,985
1917	7,232	7,287	14,519

Commenting on these figures, Judge Hoyt said: "It is curious to note that the decrease in cases of juvenile delinquency was slightly more marked than in those of improper guardianship, for higher wages and ready employment tend to reduce the number of cases caused by the neglect of the home. Possibly the high cost of living was partly responsible for this result, as many cases were reported to the court where both parents were compelled to go out and work in order to meet the expenses of the family and thus leave the children at home without any kind of care or supervision. In the past a great amount of neglect could be traced to drunkenness of parents, but it is too early yet to pronounce judgment on the effect of prohibition. If in the future intemperance can be eliminated it will undoubtedly result in reducing improper guardianship. Those who prophesied an outbreak of juvenile delinquency because of the war were fortunately mistaken. The children of our city as a whole stood the test most favorably. But they need every possible care and attention. The laws for their protection should be revised along broad progressive and humane lines to

SUBWAY AND "L" LINES IN NEW YORK CITY.

THERE are three subway systems and two elevated railroad systems in the City of New York devoted to local passenger rapid transit. There is also a fourth system, that of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which, by means of twin tubes extending under Manhattan at 33d Street, connects the Pennsylvania Terminal, at Seventh Avenue with Long Island City, enabling through all-rail passenger and freight traffic between New England and the South and West. This route is used by the New Haven Railroad trains between Boston and Washington. Of the three local subway systems in the city, only one, that of the Hudson and Manhattan Railway Company, is altogether under ground. The others run on elevated structures in the outlying parts.

Hudson Tubes—There are two sets of these tubes under the Hudson River, one connecting Montgomery Street, Jersey City, with the Hudson Terminal Station at Fulton-Cortlandt-Church Streets, Manhattan; the other connecting the Hudson tubes in Jersey City-Hoboken with Christopher Street, Manhattan. The main trunk-line tubes of the system run from Montgomery Street, Jersey City, to Park Place, Newark, emerging to the surface on Jersey City Heights, and connecting on the meadows with the Pennsylvania Railroad, at a surface station called Manhattan Transfer. In New Jersey, one set of tubes parallels the Hudson River, linking up the Pennsylvania, Erie, and Lackawanna railroad passenger stations, so that travellers may go to or from their stations, to or from downtown or uptown Manhattan. In Manhattan, the Hudson tubes connect Christopher Street with Broadway and 33d Street by way of Sixth Avenue.

Interborough Rapid Transit Company's Subways—There are two of these systems, the east side and the west side, with cross connections in Manhattan and also in Brooklyn, so that for one five-cent fare passengers may go to or from the eastern part of Brooklyn to the northern parts of Manhattan and the Bronx.

The west side system starts on an elevated structure at Livonia and New Lots Avenues, East New York (Brooklyn), goes on Livonia Avenue to Saratoga Avenue, then turns into the Eastern Parkway, where it becomes a subway. It runs through the Eastern Parkway to Flatbush Avenue, at Eighth Avenue, thence down Flatbush Avenue to Fulton Street, through Fulton Street to Clark Street; through Clark Street and under the East River to William Street, Manhattan; through William Street to Fulton Street; thence west to West Broadway; to Hudson Street; to Seventh Avenue; to Broadway; to St. Nicholas Avenue; to Amsterdam Avenue; to Broadway, to 242d Street, at Van Cortlandt Park. It emerges from Fort George Hill near Dyckman Street, and goes to 242d Street on an elevated structure.

Another branch of the west side system starts at Flatbush and Nostrand Avenues, Brooklyn, and runs in a subway through Nostrand Avenue to the Eastern Parkway, where it joins the other branch. Through trains run in both branches over the entire west side system. Transfers to the east side subway system are made at Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues, Brooklyn, and at 96th Street and Broadway, Manhattan.

At 96th Street and Broadway, the west side system has a branch (part of the original Interborough subway) that extends under the northwest corner of Central Park to Lenox Avenue, to 145th Street, thence under the Harlem River to 149th Street, where it joins the east side trunk line on Westchester Avenue and the Southern Boulevard. Just south of Bronx Park, an extension, on an elevated structure, branches off and goes along White Plains Road, to 241st Street, Mount Vernon. This extension also is used by Third Avenue "L" trains.

The west side-east side systems have an elevated extension on Jerome Avenue extending north from Mott Avenue and 149th Street, up through Fordham and Bedford Park, to a point between Van Cortlandt Park and Woodlawn Cemetery, ending at about 242d Street. This extension is also used by Sixth Avenue and Ninth Avenue "L" trains.

The east side system starts at Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues (Long Island R. R. Terminal), Brooklyn, goes on Flatbush Avenue, to Fulton Street, to Joralemon Street; thence under the East River to Battery Park, Manhattan; thence under Broadway, to Park Row, to the Brooklyn Bridge; to Lafayette Street, to Fourth Avenue; to 42d Street (Grand Central Station); to Lexington Avenue; to 130th Street; thence under the Harlem River to Mott Avenue, to 149th Street, where it emerges onto an elevated structure; to Westchester Avenue; to the Southern Boulevard to the southern part of Bronx Park (Bronx Zoo).

An extension of the east side system starts at Mott Avenue and 138th Street, and goes through 138th Street to the Southern Boulevard; to Whitlock Avenue; to Westchester Avenue, and through Old Westchester Village, to the Eastern Boulevard, at the west side of Pelham Bay Park.

The Queensboro Branch of the Interborough subway system starts at 42d Street and Lexington Avenue, and uses the Belmont tubes under the East River at 42d Street, to Long Island City, there emerging onto an elevated structure and going to the Queensboro Bridge Plaza. There it splits into two elevated branches, one going through Ravenswood, on Second Avenue, to Ditmars Avenue, Astoria; the other going on Queens Boulevard, Greenpoint Avenue and Roosevelt Avenue, to Alburtis Avenue, Corona. Both branches are used by the Second Avenue, Manhattan, "L" trains between Queensboro Bridge Plaza and the terminals of the branches.

All of the Interboro's subway lines are city-owned.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's Subways—There are three B. R. T. subways—the Fourth Avenue line, the Broadway line, and the Queensboro line.

The Fourth Avenue route starts at Fourth Avenue and 86th Street, South Brooklyn, and runs along Fourth Avenue to Flatbush Avenue, to the Manhattan Bridge, re-entering a subway at the Manhattan approach to the bridge, where it splits—one branch going through Canal Street, to Centre Street, thence south to the terminal, under the Municipal Building, at the Brooklyn Bridge and Park Row; the other branch going west by way of Canal Street to Broadway, where it joins the Broadway tubes of the B. R. T. Fourth Avenue traffic usually goes by way of the Montague Street tube and Broadway.

The Broadway subway line starts at Flatbush Avenue and Malbone Street (Empire Boulevard) at the Willinck entrance to Prospect Park; goes along Flatbush Avenue to Fourth and Atlantic Avenues, where it connects with the Fourth Avenue subway and also with the Interborough subway; thence on Flatbush Avenue to Fulton Street, to Borough Hall, to Montague Street; thence under the East River to Whitehall Street, Manhattan; thence under Trinity Place, Church Street, Broadway and Seventh Avenue; thence under 59th and 60th Streets, and by tunnel under the East River to a connection with the Queensboro lines. The Fourth Avenue route connects with the Broadway route at Flatbush and Myrtle Avenues.

The Brighton Beach line of the B. R. T. connects with the B. R. T. subway at Malbone Street, and the B. R. T. surface and "L" Coney Island lines connect with the Fourth Avenue subway at 86th Street, so that there are through subway trains by both subways between Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn, and the Coney Island district.

Owing to the many connecting and transfer points, the above grouping of Interborough and B. R. T. routes is arbitrary, intended for the reader's convenience, inasmuch as the trains are operated at times over other than the group routes indicated.

All of the B. R. T. subways are city-owned.

Under a contract between the city and the B. R. T., a 5-cent fare is assured by subway or "L" between Queens Plaza, Manhattan, or Brooklyn, and Coney Island. The B. R. T. surface lines, by resolving themselves into their old corporate identities, are able to charge a 10-cent fare to Coney Island, and on several of their other surface routes they charge 10 cents for through rides. The portions of new rapid transit lines placed in operation in 1920 are as follows:

May 1 (B. R. T.)—Portion of Culver line between Avenue X and Sheepshead Bay Road. This placed in effect the 5-cent fare from all points on the B. R. T. rapid transit system to Coney Island.

May 30 (I. R. T.)—Portion of Pelham line between Hunt's Point Road and East 177th Street stations.

ADDITIONS TO ROADS IN 1920—Continued.

Aug. 1 (B. R. T.)—Portion of Broadway-Fourth Avenue line between Malbone Street, Brooklyn, and Whitehall Street, Manhattan, with through service from Coney Island to Queensboro Plaza stations, via the Brighton Beach line.

Aug. 1 (B. R. T.)—Portion of Broadway-Fourth Avenue line between Lexington Avenue station, Manhattan, and Queensboro Plaza station, Queens, through 60th Street tunnel.

Aug. 23 (I R. T)—Portion of Eastern Parkway line between Atlantic Avenue and Utica Avenue stations and Nostrand Avenue line, including Franklin Avenue, Nostrand Avenue, Kingston Avenue, Utica Avenue, President Street, Sterling Street Winthrop Street, Beverly Road, Newkirk Avenue, and Flatbush Avenue stations.

Oct. 4 (I. R. T.)—Webster Avenue line.

Oct. 10 (I. R. T.)—Local track service, Eastern Parkway line, from Atlantic Avenue to Franklin Avenue, with stations at Bergen Street, Prospect Park Plaza and Eastern Parkway—Brooklyn Museum.

Oct. 17 (B. R. T)—Steel car train service on local tracks of Brighton Beach line between Prospect Park and Coney Island.

Oct. 24 (I. R. T.)—Portion of Pelham line between East 177th Street and Westchester Square, including Castle Hill Avenue Zerega Avenue, and Westchester Square stations.

The lines remaining to be completed in the Dual System are, for the Interborough Company, the extension of the Queensboro subway from Lexington Avenue (Grand Central Terminal) to 41st Street and Eighth Avenue and, for the New York Municipal Corporation, the 14th Street-Eastern and the Nassau Street lines.

ELEVATED RAILROADS IN THE CITY.

Elevated Lines in Manhattan and the Bronx—There are four elevated roads in these two boroughs, all operated by the Interborough.

Second Avenue L' starts at South Ferry, Battery Park, runs north to Pearl Street and New Bowery to the Bowery, to Division Street; to Allen Street; to 23rd Street; to Second Avenue: to 129th Street, where it merges with the Third Avenue "L."

Third Avenue 'L' starts at Park Row (old Chatham Street) and the Brooklyn Bridge, and runs on Park Row to the Bowery, at Chatham Square, where it bends into the Bowery; to Third Avenue; to 129th Street, where it crosses the Harlem River, and continues north through Willis and Melrose Avenues, to Third Avenue, the Bronx; thence past Crotona and Bronx Parks to Williamsbridge at White Plains and Gun Hill Roads There it connects with the White Plains Road elevated Interborough subway extension to Mt. Vernon.

At 149th Street, the 'L' connects with the Interborough subway elevated line that runs on Westchester Avenue, the Southern Boulevard, and White Plains Road to Mt. Vernon. The "L" trains use this extension along with the subway trains.

Ninth Avenue "L' starts at South Ferry Battery Park, and runs north through the park to Greenwich Street to West 14th Street and Ninth Avenue; on Ninth Avenue to 53rd Street, where it merges with the Sixth Avenue 'L," and the two roads jointly continue on Ninth (Columbus) Avenue, to 110th Street to Eighth Avenue, to 155th Street, where the road crosses the Harlem River, bearing east, connecting with the Yonkers branch of the N. Y Central R. R., at Sedgwick Avenue, and continuing east to Jerome Avenue, whence it uses the Jerome Avenue elevated extension of the Interborough subway that goes on up to Woodlawn Cemetery.

Sixth Avenue L' starts at South Ferry, Battery Park, and runs north through the park to Church Street; to Park Place; to West Broadway; to West Third Street; to Sixth Avenue; to West 53rd Street (where a shuttle train runs between 53rd Street and 59th Street, on Sixth Avenue); to Ninth Avenue, where it merges with the Ninth Avenue "L."

Elevated Lines in Brooklyn and Queens—The "L" roads in Brooklyn and Queens (except the Interborough's subway extensions) are operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. They run trains over the Brooklyn, the Manhattan and the Williamsburg Bridges across the East River. Thus these lines connect Manhattan with the Borough of Brooklyn and with the outlying districts, including Richmond Hill, Jamaica, Canarsie, Sheepshead Bay, Brighton Beach, and Coney Island. The East New York, Jamaica, Brownsville lines are all joined by a loop at Manhattan Crossing, East New York, so that trains can be operated via any L via any bridge between Manhattan, Jamaica, Ridgewood, and Canarsie, and the intervening districts of Brooklyn.

There are two main 'L' lines between Manhattan and Coney Island—(1) the Brighton Line, through Flatbush, which operates on all 'L' and open-cut line, as well as a combined "L"-subway route; (2) the Culver Line, through Borough Park, which also operates both 'L" and "L"-subway services. The Brighton Lines use the Fulton Street route for its "L" trains.

The Myrtle Avenue 'L" runs from the Brooklyn Bridge to Ridgewood.

The Fulton Street "L' runs from the Brooklyn Bridge to East New York.

The Lexington Avenue 'L" runs from the Brooklyn Bridge to Jamaica, via Myrtle and Lexington Avenues, and Broadway

The Broadway L' runs from the Williamsburg Bridge to East New York and Canarsie.

The Fifth Avenue "L" runs from the Brooklyn Bridge to Bay Ridge, with surface car extensions to Coney Island, and Fort Hamilton. At 36th Street the line has a surface-"L" extension to Coney Island over the new elevated on Gravesend Avenue.

SUMMARY OF RAPID TRANSIT DATA.

There are over 600 miles of subway and 'L" tracks in the city, of which 361 miles are Interborough lines, and 258 are B. R. T. lines. The Interborough subway roads total 222 miles; the Manhattan "L" system, 139 miles. The Interborough subway roads have cost over $300,000,000; the Brooklyn Rapid Transit subway roads over $193,000,000. The Interborough's share of the cost has been over $148,000,000, including $48 000 000 the company spent on the first East River tubes and the extension to Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues, Brooklyn. The city has put up the rest of the cost of the Interborough subways. Of the cost of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit subways the company has borne over $69,000,000; the city, over $124,000,000.

Under the Dual System of rapid transit all of the lines operated by the Interborough and the Consolidated Railroad Co. (the latter a B. R T subsidiary), including the first subway and the elevated lines of the two systems are combined in two great operating units, covering four of the five boroughs. Each company has lines which operate through the so-called community centre of the city, namely the section of Manhattan Island below 59th Street.

New York's original subway, operated by the Interborough, now denoted the First Subway, is an integral part of the Dual System. But under the operating conditions scheduled for the new lines, it will lose its identity and be merged for operating purposes with other lines assigned under the dual agreements to the Interborough.

The dual system was created when the city, through the Public Service Commission, on March 19, 1913, entered into an agreement (the dual contracts) with the Interborough and the Municipal Railway Corporation (the latter a B. R. T. subsidiary), providing for the construction and operation of new lines and extensions.

TUNNELS IN OPERATION IN AND ABOUT NEW YORK CITY.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD SYSTEM—Tunnels under Hudson River extend from Pennsylvania Railroad Station, New York, to Weehawken, N. J. There is no station at Weehawken, the electric trains from the Pennsylvania Station run to Manhattan Transfer, near Newark, N. J., without a stop. Work started April 1, 1904; completed in 1910. Two tubes of cast iron rings, 23 feet outside diameter and 21 feet 2 inches inside diameter; subaqueous portion 6,118 feet long.

Manhattan cross-town tunnels from the Pennsylvania Railroad Station, mentioned above, across New York under 32d and 33d Sts. to First Ave. Started July, 1905, completed in 1910. There are two tunnels, each with two tracks. The tunnels are built of concrete with the crown about 60 feet below the surface of the street.

East River Tunnels connect with the cross-town tunnels and extend under the East River to Long Island City. Started September, 1904; completed in 1910. Four separate tubes with rings 23 feet outside diameter, each tube from the Manhattan shaft to the Long Island City shaft, 3,900 feet long.

HUDSON AND MANHATTAN RAILROAD SYSTEM—North tunnels under the Hudson River from Jersey City to Morton St., New York. Started November, 1874; the first in New York, officially opened February 25, 1908. Two single track tubes, with a minimum inside diameter of 15 feet 3 inches, and approximately 5,700 feet long.

Up-town tunnels connect with north tunnels at Morton St. and extend to Christopher St. thence to Sixth Ave. and up Sixth Ave. to 33d St. Started March, 1904, completed in 1910. Section from Morton to 12th St. shield construction, remainder cut and cover.

South tunnels under Hudson River from Jersey City to the Church St. Terminal Buildings (Cortlandt, Church and Fulton Sts.), New York. Started May, 1905; opened for traffic July, 1909. Two tubes about 5,950 feet long with cast iron rings, 16 feet 7 inches outside diameter and 15 feet 3 inches inside diameter.

Tunnels (consisting of two single track tubes) extend from the Hoboken terminal of the Lackawanna Railroad to Washington St., Jersey City, with connections to the north tunnels and to the Erie Railroad Station. At Washington St. a branch runs to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station at Jersey City, where connections are made with the south tunnels. West from Washington St. to a point east of Summit Ave. is a double track concrete tunnel with a centre wall, dividing the tracks. Work started March, 1906; completed in July, 1911.

BELMONT TUNNEL under the East River from 42d St., New York, to Long Island City. Subaqueous portion two single track tubes with cast-iron rings 16 feet 10 inches outside diameter, and a clear inside diameter of 15 feet 6 inches. Through rock a horseshoe shaped concrete section is used and in other places a rectangular double track cross section with reinforced concrete lining. Construction started by New York and Long Island Railroad, July 12, 1905; practically completed January 1, 1908. (Commonly known as the Steinway Tunnel).

RAPID TRANSIT TUNNEL under the East River from the Battery, New York, to Joralemon St., Brooklyn, connecting the New York and Brooklyn subways. Started April, 1903; trains running January 9, 1908. Two tubes, 6,784 feet long, with a finished inside diameter of 15 feet 6 inches.

CLARK STREET TUBE—This tunnel underneath the East River, connecting the Interborough-Seventh Avenue subway in Manhattan with the Fulton Street-Flatbush Avenue subway of the Interborough in Brooklyn, was completed and put in operation the Summer of 1919.

The subway tubes from Whitehall Street, Manhattan, to Montague Street, Brooklyn, from East 14th Street, Manhattan, to North 7th Street, Brooklyn, and from East 60th Street, Manhattan, under Blackwell's Island to Long Island City, Queens, were still under construction during most of 1919, but will be in full operation early in 1920, according to the Rapid Transit Construction Commissioner.

WEST SHORE RAILROAD TUNNEL, WEEHAWKEN, NEW JERSEY—Commenced in 1881, and completed twenty-three months later, at a cost of $525,000. It is double-tracked and the original length was 3,983 feet. A steel and concrete portal, constructed in 1907 at the east increased its length to 4,273 feet. One-fourth of the tunnel is brick-lined, the remaining portion, unlined. The normal section is 27 feet in width and 19 feet high. 80,500 cubic yards of rock were removed, and five vertical shafts were utilized, giving ten working faces, and average progress of 173 linear feet per month was maintained. The average expenditure per linear foot of lined section was $200, and of unlined section, $110, and equivalent of $7.00 per cubic yard of excavation. The tunnel is a tangent, with the exception of the extended portion of the east end, previously mentioned, at which point the freight and passenger tracks divide. There is a grade of 0.30% towards the east, and 0.34% towards the west, from approximately the centre of the tunnel. It is ventilated by rotary fans, installed in 1911.

BERGEN CUT of Erie Railroad through Bergen Hill, Jersey City, parallel to the present tunnel, which is 4,700 feet long. The Bergen cut was started March, 1906, and completed July 1, 1910. It has five four-track tunnels, with open cuts between the tunnels, making a total length of 4,300 feet. Tunnel sections 58 feet wide at the bottom and 21 feet high.

HELL GATE ARCH BRIDGE.

The bridge spans the East River at Hell Gate, between Ward's Island and Astoria, Long Island. Designed and built by Gustav Lindenthal for the New York Connecting Railroad to connect the Pennsylvania and New York, New Haven systems. It is the longest arch in the world. The upper chord of the arch is 300 feet above mean high water at the centre and 180 feet at the ends of the span; the lower chord is 260 feet above mean high water at the centre and 40 feet at the ends. The arch carries four railway tracks (two passenger and two freight) on a solid concrete deck. It is the heaviest bridge in the world, weighing 52,000 pounds per lineal foot and carrying a loading of 24,000 pounds per lineal foot, making a total carrying capacity of 76,000 pounds per lineal foot. The steel work weighs 19,000 tons and the flooring and track weigh 7,000 tons. The heaviest single member weighs 185 tons and has a cross section of 1,384 square inches. The width of the bridge is 93 feet between railings and 60 feet between centres of trusses. The Long Island tower is 104 x 140 feet at the base and is founded on rock in open cut at 20 feet depth. The Ward's Island tower is 119 x 140 feet at the base and rests on 21 pneumatic concrete caissons, founded on rock varying from 58 to 120 feet below the ground surface. Height of towers, 240 feet. Total concrete in towers, 110,000 cubic yards. Total concrete in bridge towers and approaches, 500,000 cubic yards. Construction of arch commenced November, 1914. Arch was erected by cantilevering out from the towers, each half being held by connection to temporary backstays built behind the towers. The two halves were joined October 1, 1915. Entire steel work completed January, 1916.

COMMUTING BY MOTOR POPULAR AT NEW YORK.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission, and the Department of Plant and Structures report that 420,000 persons travel back and forth to the City of New York daily by automobile, referred to in the report, as equivalent to one-third of the travel daily on the Interborough subways. The 420,000 figure is not inclusive of those using autos within the city borders. Motor trucks to the number of 7,482, travelled on fifteen ferries in twenty-four consecutive hours. Bridge traffic is heavy, especially at certain hours, as many as 1,344 vehicles having been counted in an hour.

The number of cars and trucks entering and leaving the city daily is placed at 154,700. The average number of passengers per car is 2.7, while the average load per truck is 1.14 tons. The proposed vehicular tube between Manhattan and New Jersey will, it is estimated, greatly increase auto commuting.

NOTE, by the Tenement House Department: "According to the records of the Department, it is shown that the total number of apartments existing on Jan. 1, 1918, were 989,766. It can be fairly assumed that of this total 80 per cent. are apartments renting for $50 or less per month. Applying the average rate of four occupants per apartment, which is the factor used by the Department, the total accommodations in the City of New York as of Jan. 1, 1918, provided for 3,167,248 persons. On the other hand, the normal increase in population based on the years 1913 to 1916 inclusive, shows an average annual growth of approximately 107,000. Of this increase it can be reasonably assumed that 75 per cent., or approximately 80,000, are apartment dwellers, and that of this 80,000 80 per cent., or 64,000, pay rentals of $50 or less per month."

HISTORY OF THE ASTOR HOUSE SITE.

THE block fronting on Broadway, New York City, between Vesey and Barclay Streets, was a part of a farm granted in 1636 by the Dutch Governor Van Twiller to Roelofe Jansen and his wife, Annetje, known as Anneke Jans. After her husband's death she married the Dominie Bogardus, and the tract came to be known as the "Dominie's Bouwerie." He was lost at sea in 1647, leaving the widow with eight children. After her death all of the heirs, except Cornelius Bogardus, executed a deed back to Francis Lovelace, the Governor of the Province, vesting the property in the Crown and in turn, the Crown granted it to Trinity Church in 1705. The failure of Cornelius Bogardus to join in the deed was the basis of the Anneke Jans claim.

Adam Vandenburgh leased a portion of this farm, including the site of the old Astor House, and for many years kept an inn there. There is a picture of his house and gardens on a map made in 1742. In 1767 a lease was made of the northwest corner of Vesey Street (named after the Rev. William Vesey, Rector of Trinity Church), to Walter Rutherfurd. He built a house on a lot 32 feet wide, and this lease came into the hands of John Jacob Astor in 1813 for $22,500. William Axtel had a lease of the 43 feet adjoining on the north; but his house and leasehold were confiscated during the Revolution and sold to Abraham Bates for $16,800. Trinity bought back this lease and conveyed this portion of the plot as well as their fee interest in the corner lot to John Jacob Astor, March 13, 1832, for $33,000. The 71 feet next adjoining on the north had been sold by the church in small parcels to various owners. This had been accumulated before 1792 by Mr. Rufus King, first Minister to Great Britain. On this plot Mr. King built a residence, with a garden to the south and rear, and stables on Barclay Street.

During Mr. King's absence abroad in 1803 Mr. John Jacob Astor purchased this plot, including the house, and occupied it as his residence, calling it No. 223 Broadway. The price was $27,500. The two lots completing the block to Barclay Street belonged respectively to David Lydig and John G. Coster. Mr. Astor purchased them prior to January, 1834, paying $32,560 for the Lydig property and $60,000 for the Coster house.

CIVIL SERVICE RULES IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

SYNOPSIS of regulations governing the admission of persons into the Civil Service of the City of New York. Information may also be had by applying to the Secretary of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, Municipal Building, 14th floor.

Under the White Civil Service Law, Chapter 370, Laws of 1899, April 19, the rules apply to all positions in the service of the City of New York except officers elected by the people, all legislative officers and employés, heads of any department, or superintendents, principals, or teachers in a public school, academy, or college. This requires "examinations, wherever practicable, to ascertain the fitness of applicants for appointment to the Civil Service of said city." The Constitution requires that these examinations shall be competitive, "so far as practicable."

The entire Administration of the City of New York is divided into two general services, namely: The Unclassified Service and the Classified Service. The Unclassified Service includes all elective officers; the officers and employés of the Board of Aldermen; members of the Board of Elections; the head, or heads, of any department of the City Government; or any person appointed by name in any statute.

The Classified Service includes all positions not in the Unclassified Service.

The Classified Service is divided into four classes, namely:

EXEMPT CLASS—The Exempt Class includes the deputies of principal executive officers authorized by law to act generally for and in place of their principals; one secretary of each officer, board, and commission authorized by law to appoint a secretary; one clerk and one deputy clerk, if authorized by law, of each court, and one clerk of each elective judicial officer. In addition thereto there may be included in the Exempt Class all other subordinate offices for the filling of which competitive or non-competitive examination may be found to be not practicable.

NON-COMPETITIVE CLASS—Includes all those positions of a minor nature, in the city institutions or elsewhere, that it is not practicable to fill through competitive examination.

THE HARBOR OF NEW YORK.

NEW YORK BAY is the principal entrance to New York City. It is divided into two parts, the Lower Bay and the Upper Bay, by the Narrows, a passage about five-eighths of a mile wide at its narrowest part. The entrance to the Lower Bay is between Sandy Hook on the south and Rockaway Point on the north and is about seven miles wide. The Upper Bay extends from the Narrows to the Battery. The principal entrance channels to the harbor of New York are the Ambrose Channel and the Main Ship-Bayside-Gedney Channel.

Ambrose Channel, which is the newer and more important channel, was completed April 17, 1914. It has a comparatively straight course in a northwesterly and then northerly direction from deep water in the ocean through the Lower Bay. It is 38,000 feet in length and 2,000 feet in width, and has a depth of 40 feet at mean low water. The mean range of tide is about 4.5 feet.

Main Ship-Bayside-Gedney Channel is the route formerly used by deep-draught vessels. It extends westward past Sandy Hook and then northward through the Lower Bay. It has a depth of 30 feet at mean low water and a nominal width of 1,000 feet, which has decreased in places to 500 feet. The Main Channel in the Upper Bay leads between Jersey Flats and Gowanus Flats and has depths of 40 to 90 feet and a width of about one-half mile. Within the harbor there are several channels connecting the different sections. Bay Ridge, Red Hook and Buttermilk Channels lie in Gowanus Bay along the Brooklyn shore of the Upper Bay and form an easterly channel that extends from the Narrows to East River and is separated from the Main Ship Channel by a broad shoal off Gowanus Bay and by Governors Island. By means of these channels the extensive terminals of the Bush Terminal Co. and of the New York Dock Co., as well as the municipal terminals in South Brooklyn, are directly accessible for large ships and have easy communication with the other sections of the inner harbor.

Bay Ridge Channel has a minimum depth of 35 feet at mean low water for its full width of 1,200 feet and of 40 feet for the middle 800 feet of that width. Red Hook Channel is approximately 1,200 feet wide and has a minimum available depth of 33 feet at mean low water throughout its length and of 40 feet through about one-fifth of its length. The combined length of these channels is about 4.5 miles and the mean range of tide is about 4½ feet. Buttermilk Channel has a depth of 30 feet, but at places along the sides the depth does not exceed 27 feet. The channel is broad, having at its narrowest point a width of about 800 feet.

Rivers, Creeks and Bays.—The Hudson (North) River empties into Upper New York Bay at the Battery, the southernmost point of Manhattan Island. The width of the river between established pierhead lines is 3,900 feet at the Battery and gradually decreases to 2,750 feet between Castle Point, N. J., and West 14th Street, New York City, and 2,725 feet opposite West 59th Street.

A vessel drawing 40 feet can be carried at mean low water up to West 19th Street through the eastern, or New York side of the river; from West 19th to about West 50th Street, through the western, or New Jersey side; and between West 50th and West 75th Streets, in the middle of the river, and thence, generally near the east shore, to the north boundary of the city. The mean range of tide at the Battery is 4.2 feet.

The East River is a tidal strait about 16 miles long and from 600 to 4,000 feet wide, exclusive of bays and estuaries, and extends from the Battery in New York City to Throgs Neck at the head of Long Island Sound. This river separates the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx from the Boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn.

The Chief of Engineers of the United States Army reports that on June 30, 1914, the through Main Channel from the Battery to Long Island Sound had a least depth of 30 feet at mean low water and a least width of 550 feet, except in Hell Gate, off Hallets Point, where the width is but about 200 feet for a stretch of about 300 feet. The mean range of tide in the East River is 4.4 feet at the Battery, 4 feet at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and 6.6 feet at the east entrance to Hell Gate.

Harlem River and Spuyten Duyvil Creek together form a waterway about 8 miles in length, which extends from the East River to the Hudson River and separates the Borough of Manhattan from the Borough of the Bronx. The East River entrance to the Harlem River is about 8½ miles by water northeast of the Battery and the Hudson River entrance to Spuyten Duyvil Creek is about 13½ miles by water north of the Battery. The improved channel in Harlem River has a width of 150 to 400 feet and a depth of 15 feet at mean low water, except at Macombs Dam Bridge, where ledge rock projects at a point 12 feet below mean low water.

Bronx River is a short and narrow stream that empties into a shallow bay or estuary on the East River at Hunts Point, about 11 miles northeast of the Battery. The navigable portion of the river consists of a channel extending from its mouth to a dam at East 177th Street. This channel is about 2½ miles long and from about 50 to 300 feet wide and has a depth of 8 feet at mean low water in the lower section. The mean range of tide in the Bronx River is about 7 feet in the estuary and 6 feet at the dam.

Westchester Creek is a small stream lying wholly within the limits of the city of New York. This stream extends northward from an estuary in the north shore of East River about 14 miles northeast of the Battery. The estuary is about 1 mile long and from 500 to 3,000 feet wide. The portion of the creek now under improvement is 2⅔ miles long from deep water in the East River and from 110 to 500 feet wide. The lower section has a depth at mean low water of 8 feet, while the upper section has a mean depth of 6 feet.

East Chester Creek is a shallow stream that empties into East Chester Bay on the north shore of Long Island Sound about 12 miles west of the Connecticut State line and about 21 miles northeast of the Battery. The lower two miles of the navigable portion of this stream lie wholly within the limits of the city of New York and have a depth of 4 feet at mean low water, or 11 feet at high water, while the upper section has a depth of about 5 feet at high water.

Flushing Bay is on the north shore of Long Island, about 12 miles from the Battery. The bay is about 1 mile wide and 2 miles long. Flushing Creek, which flows into the head of the bay, is a tidal stream navigable for a distance of about 3.5 miles from its mouth. The total length of dredged channel through the bay and the creek is about 5½ miles and the mean low water depth is about 6 feet in the lower portion of the channel and about 7 feet in the upper portion. The mean range of tide is about 7.1 feet.

Newtown Creek is the inlet of the East River that separates for a distance of about 4 miles the Boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn. The improved channel has a width of about 125 feet and a least depth of about 14 feet at mean low water. The mean range of tide is about 4 feet.

Wallabout Channel is a channel in Wallabout Bay, an inlet of the East River adjacent to the United States Navy Yard in Brooklyn. The channel consists of a waterway extending in a half circle around the inside of the island known as Cob Dock and is divided into two parts by a stone causeway connecting the mainland with Cob Dock. The eastern section of the channel is about 2,000 feet long and from 250 to 350 feet wide and has a depth of about 20 feet at mean low water. At the head of Wallabout Channel are two bodies of navigable water, Kent Avenue Basin and Wallabout Basin, which are 2,200 feet long and 1,300 feet long respectively.

Jamaica Bay is situated on the south shore of Long Island and lies wholly within the limits of the city of New York. It is about 8 miles long and 4 miles wide and covers an area of approximately 32 square miles. The bay is connected with the ocean at Rockaway Inlet by a shifting channel having a least depth over the bar of about 11 feet at mean low water. An entrance channel 17 feet deep at mean low water has been dredged through the north end of the bars. The bay contains numerous small low-lying islands. A channel 2½ miles long is under joint improvement by the Federal Government and the city of New York.

The United States is to provide and maintain the entrance channel and to reimburse the city for dredging the main channel in the bay; while the city is to dredge the other channels within the bay, bulkhead the shores of the bay, and fill in behind the bulkheads. On June 30, 1920, an entrance channel had been completed to a width of about 200 feet, and a depth of 17 feet at mean low water.

The New Jersey Portion of the Harbor.—Newark Bay is a large estuary extending from the confluence of the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers south to Staten Island, a distance of about 6 miles. It is about 1½ miles wide. At Staten Island the bay is connected on the east with Kill van Kull and on the west with Arthur Kill. The navigable channel in the bay has a dredged depth of 20 feet at mean low water and the range of tide is about 5 feet.

Passaic River is a tidal stream which is navigable for vessels drawing 6 feet of water as far as the city of Passaic, 16 miles above its mouth. In the lower portion of the river the depth of the navigable channel is 20 feet to within 800 feet of the Jackson Street bridge at Newark; thence 16 feet deep to the Montclair and Greenwood Lake railroad bridge; thence 6 feet deep to Passaic.

Hackensack River is a tidal stream which merges with the Passaic River at the head of Newark Bay. It is navigable to New Milford, 20½ miles from its mouth. At mean low water, 12 feet can be carried to Little Ferry, 12¾ miles; thence 10 feet through the highway bridge at Little Ferry; thence 12 feet to Hackensack, 2¼ miles; thence quite shoal to New Milford.

Arthur Kill separates Staten Island from New Jersey. It is about 12 miles long. This channel, together with Kill van Kull, forms Staten Island Sound, and, with the lower end of Newark Bay, forms the inland waterway between New York and New Jersey, the boundary between the two States following the centre of the waterway. Vessels drawing 19 feet can be taken at mean low water into Newark Bay via Lower New York Bay, Raritan Bay and Arthur Kill. Vessels drawing 23 feet at mean low water can be taken through Upper New York Bay, Kill van Kull and Arthur Kill to Perth Amboy, N. J.

Kill van Kull, a connecting waterway about 3 miles in length, lies along the northern shore of Staten Island and extends from the lower end of Newark Bay to Upper New York Bay. Vessels having a draught of 25 feet can be brought at mean low water into Newark Bay through Upper New York Bay and the channel in Kill van Kull.

Raritan Bay lies at the southern end of Staten Island and forms the western portion of Lower New York Bay. Its greatest length from north to south is about 5 miles and from east to west about 7 miles. The Raritan River empties into the bay at its western end and the Arthur Kill extends northward from its western end. Vessels enter the bay by way of the Main Ship-Bayside-Gedney Channel, but a draught of not more than 19 feet at mean low water can be carried through the dredged channels at the head of the bay.

Raritan River empties into Raritan Bay at Perth Amboy. At mean low water vessels with a draught of 16 feet can be carried to the Washington Canal at Sayreville, a distance of 6.7 miles; thence 10 feet to New Brunswick, a distance of about 5.3 miles.

Elizabeth River is a small stream that empties into the Arthur Kill near its junction with Newark Bay. The navigable channel in the lower portion of the river has a depth of 7 feet at mean high water for a distance of about 1½ miles.

THE STATUE OF LIBERTY.

THE Statue of Liberty was unveiled on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor, Oct. 28, 1886. Soon after France became a republic a movement was inaugurated there to erect some suitable memorial to the fraternal feeling between the two Governments. Frederic A. Bartholdi was the artist selected to do the work. $300,000 was raised in America to build the pedestal of this statue on Bedloe's Island. The statue was formally delivered to the American Minister at Paris, July 4, 1880.

The statue weighs 450,000 pounds or 225 tons. The bronze alone weighs 200,000 pounds. Forty persons can stand comfortably in the head, and the torch will hold 12. Height of statue from base to torch is 151 feet 1 inch, and from foundation of pedestal to torch is 305 feet 6 inches. Number of steps from pedestal to head is 154. Ladder leading up through the extended right arm to torch has 54 rounds.

SOME FACTS ABOUT CENTRAL PARK.

The great park of New York extends from 59th St. to 110th St., being over 2½ miles long, and from 5th Ave. to 8th Ave., being over half a mile wide. It covers 843 acres, of which 185 are in lakes and reservoirs and 400 in forest, wherein over half a million trees and shrubs have been planted. There are 10¼ miles of roads, 5½ of bridle paths, and 31 of walks. The landscape architects of the Park were Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux. Work was begun on the Park in 1857. The following fanciful names have been officially applied to the several entrances to the Park: 5th Ave. and 59th St., Scholar's Gate; 6th Ave. and 59th St., Artist's Gate; 7th Ave. and 59th St., Artisan's Gate; 8th Ave. and 59th St., Merchant's Gate; 8th Ave. and 72d St., Woman's Gate; 8th Ave. and 81st St., Hunter's Gate; 8th Ave. and 85th St., Mariner's Gate; 8th Ave. and 96th St., Gate of All Saints; 8th Ave. and 100th St., Boy's Gate; 8th Ave. and 110th St., Stranger's Gate; 5th Ave. and 67th St., Student's Gate; 5th Ave. and 72d St., Children's Gate; 5th Ave. and 79th St., Miner's Gate; 5th Ave. and 90th St., Engineer's Gate; 5th Ave. and 96th St., Woodman's Gate; 5th Ave. and 102d St., Girl's Gate; 5th Ave. and 110th St., Pioneer's Gate; 6th Ave. and 110th St., Farmer's Gate; 7th Ave. and 110th St., Warrior's Gate.

Union Square was purchased by the city in 1833 for $116,051; Madison Square, in 1847, for $65,952; Tompkins Square, in 1834, for $93,358; Washington Square, in 1827, for $77,970, and Manhattan Square, in 1839, for $54,657.

The first park space in the City of New York was that now called Bowling Green Park. In 1732 this plot of ground was leased by citizens for playing the game of bowls. The plot was originally square and in the middle there was erected, in 1770, a lead statue of George III. After the Declaration of Independence the statue was torn down by a mob and the lead used for making bullets for the American army. In 1786 Bowling Green was first laid out as a park. At that time it was the centre of the fashionable residential district.

Open water existed originally where the Staten Island Ferry houses now stand, and the site of the Aquarium was under water until about 1800. State Street was not laid out until 1789, and was then bounded by the Bay on one side. A ledge of rocks stretched across Manhattan Island, and facing these rocks along the edge of the water there was built in the early days a line of defensive works known as "The Battery."

These works extended from Whitehall Street to what is now Rector Street, and cannon were mounted behind them. About 1723 the first steps were taken to fill in to the present water line, but many years passed before this was actually accomplished.

The present City Hall Park constitutes a part of what was known in the latter half of the seventeenth century as "The Common Lands," which stretched from the site of the Post Office northward toward the Tombs and from the line of Broadway across what is now Park Row. This land was originally used for the grazing of cattle and, at its northeasterly end, was what was known as "Fresh Water Pond." The land originally comprising The Commons was gradually reduced by the laying out of streets and the construction of buildings. At the close of the Revolutionary War improvements were begun in City Hall Park. The erection of the present City Hall was authorized in 1803 and it was ready for occupancy in 1811. During the Civil War the present site of the Post Office Building was occupied by sheds where the soldiers were supplied with food. After the war it was ceded to the United States Government as a site for the Post Office.

LAFAYETTE STATUE UNVEILED BY MARSHAL JOFFRE.

In Brooklyn the unveiling of a bronze panel of Lafayette on May 10, 1917, was a historical occasion. Marshal Joffre, hero of the Marne, unveiled the statue, which was accepted for the city by Mayor Mitchel. Former Premier Viviani, who headed the French Commission to the United States, spoke briefly, as did Marquis de Chambrun, great-grandson of Lafayette. Others of note present were Vice-Admiral Chocheprat, George T. Wilson, Frederic R. Coudert, Frank L. Polk, Ambassador Jusserand, R. A. C. Smith, and H. A. Watkins. The work cost $35,000, the gift of the Henry Marteau estate. The sculptor was Daniel Chester French. The monument consists of a panel of bronze about 12 feet long and 10 feet high, against which is a figure of Lafayette in the uniform of a General in the Continental Army, with a negro holding his horse's head. The panel rests against a structure of granite of Italian Renaissance design.

THE WATER SUPPLY OF NEW YORK CITY.

(For THE ALMANAC; by Merritt H. Smith, Chief Engineer.)

Manhattan and Bronx—The Boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx, prior to the introduction of Catskill water, were supplied entirely from the Croton watershed and from the Bronx and Byram watershed, the latter being now part of the Catskill system. Croton water was first introduced in 1842. Water from the Bronx River was introduced in 1854, and from the Byram River in 1896. The Croton watershed furnishes about half of the present supply for Manhattan and Bronx, the other half being supplied from the Esopus watershed. The Esopus watershed in the Catskills, from which the Catskill supply is obtained, has an area of 257 square miles. The water from the Esopus watershed is collected in the Ashokan Reservoir, about fourteen miles west of the Hudson at Kingston, N. Y., and about ninety-two miles from the northern city boundary. The available supply from the Esopus watershed is increased by the rainfall and run off on some twenty-two square miles of watershed (the Bronx and Byram watershed) tributary to Kensico Reservoir, which lies east of the Hudson River, and about seventeen miles from the northern city boundary. Under average rainfall and run-off conditions the available supply from the Esopus watershed is 375,000,000 gallons daily, and from the Bronx and Byram watershed about 20,000,000 gallons daily, making the total available supply of water from the Catskill system, 395,000,000 gallons daily; the safe minimum yield from these two sheds is 315,000,000 gallons daily.

The Croton watershed, which lies some 22 miles north of the city line, has an area of 375 square miles and a safe minimum yield of 336,000,000 gallons daily. Under average rainfall and run-off conditions the yield of this shed is 400,000,000 gallons daily. The water from the Croton watershed is collected in twelve reservoirs and six lakes and ponds.

Brooklyn—The Esopus watershed furnishes the entire supply for the Borough of Brooklyn, with the exception of the Twenty-ninth Ward, which is supplied by the Flatbush Water Works Company, a private water company, the source of supply being ground water collected from driven wells. The supply from the old Brooklyn system, which yielded about 150,000,000 gallons, and which is now held in reserve, was obtained from driven wells, infiltration galleries, and small streams, south shore of Long Island. This supply was first introduced in 1859.

Queens—The city supplies only the First and Third Wards in the Borough of Queens. The Esopus watershed furnishes the entire present supply to these wards. The First Ward was formerly supplied from the Brooklyn system, supplemented by a small amount derived from the municipal driven well pumping stations in the First and Third Wards. The Third Ward was supplied by two pumping stations, now held in reserve, one station drawing its supply from driven wells and the other obtaining about half its supply from wells and one-half from a small lake, the water being filtered. The combined yield of the two plants is about 6,000,000 gallons daily. The Second, Fourth and Fifth Wards, Queens, are supplied by private water companies, the source of supply being entirely ground waters, collected by means of driven wells. There are four of these private companies, with two others serving special customers.

Richmond—The Borough of Richmond is supplied from the Esopus watershed, supplemented by a small amount (about 7,000,000 gallons daily), derived from wells pumped at two stations. Silver Lake Reservoir, the terminal reservoir for the Catskill system, is located in this borough.

WATER CONSUMPTION IN NEW YORK CITY.

NOTE.—Catskill water was introduced into the city in 1917. Before that, the supply in Manhattan and the Bronx was drawn from the Croton Watershed, with a little from the Bronx and Byram watersheds; the supply in Queens and Richmond was drawn from local Long Island sources; and Brooklyn got most of its water from wells, ponds, and springs out on Long Island, in Southern Nassau and Suffolk counties. Private water companies still supply water in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens.

The figures show daily consumption, in gallons.

The figures by boroughs show only daily consumption of city water. The "total" column shows daily city water consumption plus consumption of water of private companies. In 1919, for example, the total daily consumption in Brooklyn, including private water, was 181,600,000 gallons; in Queens, 44,200,000 gallons. Private companies supplied 13,000,000 gallons in Brooklyn, and 28,300,000 in Queens.

OTHER DATA ON THE WATER SUPPLY.

The new Catskill Mountain water supply is a gravity system. For New York City's Catskill Mountain water system there are two contiguous drainage areas, or watersheds, occupying the central portion of the Catskill Mountains lying between eighty-five and 125 miles from New York. The Schoharie watershed has an area of 314 square miles. Esopus has an area of 257 square miles. These two watersheds have a total area of 571 square miles, from which more than 500 million gallons of water daily can surely be drawn throughout each year. Along the aqueduct provisions have been made for storing a large quantity of water. From the Ashokan reservoir it is almost a three-days' journey for the water to flow through the aqueduct to the Silver Lake terminal reservoir on Staten Island.

For surveys, real estate, construction, engineering and general supervision, and all other items except interest on the bonds, the total cost of the completed Catskill system will be about $177,000,000, of which $22,000,000 is for the Schoharie works.

Ashokan reservoir, about fourteen miles west of the Hudson at Kingston, was built at a cost of nearly $30,000,000. The water which the reservoir holds would cover all Manhattan Island to a depth of thirty feet; the area of its surface is equivalent to that of Manhattan below One Hundred and Tenth Street. The water surface of the west basin when full is at an elevation of 590 feet above mean tide in New York Harbor.

Kensico reservoir, east of the Hudson, and thirty miles from the City Hall, contains enough Catskill water to supply New York several months if carefully husbanded. It acts as a storage reservoir. This reservoir is formed by the Kensico dam across the valley of the Bronx River, about three miles north of White Plains and fifteen miles north of the Hill View reservoir. The total cost of Kensico reservoir was about $13,500,000. It is 355 feet above tidewater.

Hill View reservoir is located in the City of Yonkers, just north of the New York City line, and fifteen miles south of Kensico reservoir. Its function is to equalize the difference between the use of water in the city as it varies from hour to hour and the steady flow in the aqueduct. It is an uncovered, artificial reservoir of the earth embankment type. It holds 900,000,000 gallons of water, with a depth of 36½ feet, and has a water surface of 90 acres. The total cost of Hill View reservoir was about $4,700,000. It was first filled December 29, 1915. It is 295 feet above tidewater.

The Hudson River is crossed by means of a tunnel wholly in granitic rock, at a depth of 1,114 feet below sea level, between a shaft at Storm King Mountain on the west bank and another shaft on the east side of the river at Breakneck Mountain.

At the Ashokan reservoir, and also at Kensico reservoir, aerators have been built. The aerators are substantially alike and are great fountain basins, approximately 500 feet long by 250 feet wide, each containing about 1,600 nozzles, through which jets of water are thrown vertically into the air, permitting thorough admixture of oxygen from the atmosphere and removal of undesirable gases and other matters causing tastes and odors.

Within the screen chamber down stream from Kensico reservoir chlorine is introduced into the water flowing in the aqueduct for the destruction of germ life. The gas is delivered at the chamber compressed to a liquid state in steel containers holding one hundred pounds each. Chlorine is used to insure the practical sterilization of the water before it goes to the city and is wholly neutralized or dissipated before the water reaches the distribution pipes.

From Hill View reservoir, Catskill water is delivered into the five boroughs by a circular tunnel in solid rock reducing in diameter from 15 to 14, 13, 12, and 11 feet. The total length of the tunnel is eighteen miles. From two terminal shafts in Brooklyn, steel and cast iron pipe lines extend into Queens and Richmond. A 36-inch flexible-jointed, cast iron pipe, buried in a trench in the harbor bottom, has been laid across the Narrows to the Staten Island shore, whence a 48-inch cast iron pipe extends to the Silver Lake reservoir, holding 435,000,000 gallons. The total length of this delivery-system is over thirty-four miles. The tunnel is at depths of 200 to 750 feet below the street surface, thus avoiding interference with streets buildings, subways, sewers and pipes. These depths are necessary, also, to secure a substantial rock covering to withstand the bursting pressure of the water inside and afford the requisite watertightness. The waterway of the tunnel is lined throughout with Portland cement concrete.

The city tunnel, which is the longest tunnel in the world for carrying water under pressure, or for any other purpose, was constructed from twenty-five shafts, including the downtake shaft at Hill View reservoir, about 4,000 feet apart, located in parks and other places where they interfered very little with traffic. Through twenty-two of these shafts the water is delivered into the street mains. These connections from the tunnel to the mains are made by means of vertical riveted steel pipes (called risers) embedded in concrete in the upper part of each shaft and lined with concrete to prevent corrosion inside. Concrete fills all spaces outside the risers, sealing the shafts against the escape of water excepting through the pipes. Provision is made at Shaft 11 in Morningside Park and at Shaft 21 on the shore of the East River, at Clinton and South Streets, Manhattan, for unwatering the tunnel, whenever necessary, for inspection, cleaning or repairs. Unusual features in connection with the operation of the tunnel are the bronze riser valves in the shafts. The former are located about 100 feet below the top of sound rock and are designed to close automatically in case of an important break in the valve chamber or in the street mains. They can also be closed by hand from within the chambers at the shaft tops.

The cost of the portions of the Catskill Aqueduct within the city limits, including the tunnel, pipe lines, appurtenances and Silver Lake reservoir, was about $26,400,000.

The terminal Silver Lake reservoir for the Catskill water system, located on Staten Island, is about 2,400 feet long and 1,500 feet wide. It holds 435,000,000 gallons, and is 228 feet above tidewater.

GIVING NEW YORK CITY FIRE PROTECTION.

High Pressure Fire Service System—The high pressure fire service system in Manhattan is bounded by Thirty-fourth Street, Madison Avenue, Twenty-fourth Street, Lexington Avenue, Fourteenth Street, Third Avenue, Bowery, Houston Street, East River, Battery, North River. There are two pumping stations—Gansevoort and West Streets, and Oliver and South Streets. Each station has six electrically driven centrifugal pumps. Either fresh or salt water may be used. Each pump can deliver 3,000 gallons a minute. The combined capacity of the two stations is equal to about fifty fire engines. The distributing system consists of 128 miles of mains, eight to twenty-four inches in diameter, and about 2,750 four-nozzle hydrants. There are approximately 696 telephones communicating with Fire Department headquarters and with the main and subsidiary stations of the New York Edison Company, from which the necessary electric power is obtained. The present system cost about $9,380,000.

In Brooklyn there are two high pressure fire service systems. The one for the business and manufacturing districts is bounded by the Navy Yard, St. Edward's Street, St. Felix Street, Fort Greene Place, Fifth Avenue, Twenty-fourth Street, Fourth Avenue, Thirty-ninth Street and the water front, covering an area of 4.8 square miles. The supply is furnished by two stations, one located at the foot of Joralemon Street, and the reserve at Willoughby and St. Edward's Streets. Both draw their supply from the Ridgewood mains. The main station is connected to the East River. The pumps are electrically operated in both stations, and have a combined rated capacity of 24,000 gallons per minute. The distributing system consists of about forty-five miles of mains, eight to twenty inches in diameter.

The Coney Island high pressure system protects an area of 470 acres. The pumping station is located at West Twelfth Street and Coney Island Creek. The total capacity is 4,500 gallons per minute. The water is distributed through six miles of mains.

METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART.

THE museum was incorporated April 13, 1870, "for the purpose of establishing and maintaining . . . a museum and library of art, of encouraging and developing the study of the fine arts, and the application of arts to manufacture and practical life, of advancing the general knowledge of kindred subjects, and, to that end, of furnishing popular instruction." After one-half century of growth, it has to-day, through bequests, gifts, and purchases, collections of incalculable value, embracing both fine and decorative arts. They comprise objects in almost every material—marble, stone, wood, pottery, porcelain, glass, metals, lace, textiles, &c.—and embody man's attempts throughout the ages to achieve his ideals of beauty. In date they range from 3000 B. C. to the nineteenth century and represent the ancient world—Assyria, Babylonia, Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, and Rome—the Orient, including China, Japan, Corea, India, Persia, and Asia Minor; Europe from the Early Christian and Byzantine Art through the Romanesque, Gothic, Renaissance, and later periods; and our own country.

These collections are housed in a building erected by the city, in Central Park, affording 275,000 square feet of exhibition floor space. Among the most noteworthy individual objects or collections are the mastaba tomb erected about 4,500 years ago in the Egyptian cemetery at Sakkara for a Theban dignitary named Perneb and re-erected here in its original form, with its painted scenes in low relief still preserved; six large alabaster reliefs from the palace in Nimroud of Ashur-nasir-pal, who reigned over Assyria from 885 to 860 B. C.; an Etruscan bronze chariot of the sixth century B. C., the only complete ancient bronze chariot known; the Cesnola antiquities from Cyprus; a group of Roman fresco paintings from Boscoreale, especially those on the walls of a reconstructed cubiculum (bedchamber), and a gathering of ancient glass, "one of the richest and most important in the world." In the accumulations of Near Eastern Art of special interest are the domed room from a Jain temple in India, recently installed, the gift of Robert W. and Lockwood de Forest, which represents the wood carving of India and is supplemented by an extensive collection of Indian and Thibetan jewelry; the Indian miniatures in the Alexander Smith Cochran Collection, and some remarkable examples of early Indian stone carving; the Persian manuscripts and miniatures in the Cochran Collection; twenty-four manuscripts and a number of single sheets, represent such masters of decoration as Bihzad and Mirad, and some of the greatest names in Persian calligraphy from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century. The Far Eastern objects include the well-known Benjamin Altman gathering of Chinese porcelains and the Hebert R. Bishop assemblage of jades.

OVER 1,200 PAINTINGS IN THE MUSEUM.

The paintings, over twelve hundred in number, represent the Italian, Spanish, German, Dutch, Flemish, French, English and American schools. There is an unusual showing of the works by Rembrandt, eighteen in all, thirteen received in the bequest of the late Benjamin Altman. Through the gift of J. Pierpont Morgan the Museum possesses a Raphael, the so-called Colonna Altarpiece, a Virgin and Child Enthroned with Saints. Groups of paintings kept together by the conditions under which they were received are: the George A. Hearn Collection, principally American in character; the Benjamin Altman Collection, strongest in its Dutch paintings, but including four Memlings, a Dürer, a Giorgione, a Fra Angelico, two Velazquezs, and other works of rare excellence; the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Collection, consisting largely of works by French artists of the early and middle years of the nineteenth century; and the William H. Vanderbilt Collection, lent by George W. Vanderbilt, modern works, the French paintings being particularly important, and perhaps the best-known single picture being Millet's Sower.

Others of special note are the William H. Riggs Collection of arms and armor, which in its scope and quality ranks with European national collections, and, with the Ellis and Dino Collections, gives an opportunity to study the development of armor from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century; the Crosby Brown gathering of 3,600 specimens, including representative instruments of all nations, among them the earlier of the two existing pianos by Bertolommeo di Francesco Cristofori, the inventor of the pianoforte; and the William H. Huntington assemblage of portraits of Washington, Franklin, and Lafayette in all materials.

The Pierpont Morgan Collection, the gift of J. Pierpont Morgan, fills an entire wing and is a priceless gathering of the decorative arts of Europe from the Gallo-Roman and Merovinglan periods to the end of the eighteenth century. The rarest and most precious section of the collection represents the supreme work of the goldsmiths, Byzantine and Mediaeval enamelers, and ivory carvers. The most comprehensive gathering included in the Pierpont Morgan wing is that brought together by Georges Hoentschel of Paris, the collector, and consisting of two parts: sculpture, furniture, textiles, ivories, woodwork, and architectural fragments of the Gothic period, chiefly of French, Flemish, Dutch, German, Spanish, and Italian origin, and French decorative arts of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—furniture and woodwork, many examples from historic buildings, decorative paintings, and ormolu fittings. Among the treasures of the Pierpont Morgan Collection are also five Gothic tapestries, known as the Sacrament Set because they picture in weaving the sacraments of the church; two sculptured groups, an Entombment and a Pietà, from the famous Château de Biron in southwestern France; superb examples of the goldsmith's craft from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century; a unique collection of snuff boxes, vanity boxes, scent bottles, and dance programmes, signed by famous jewelers of the eighteenth century; and a large collection of watches representative of the work of the best craftsmen in Europe from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century.

COLLECTIONS SERVICEABLE TO THE PUBLIC.

To make the museum collections serviceable to the public, to manufacturers and designers, to artists and art students, and to the pupils in the public and private schools of New York City and vicinity is the constant effort of the members of the museum staff, working on behalf of the trustees.

A reference library and a collection of photographs are open to the public, and a large collection of lantern slides is available on easy terms for lectures given anywhere east of the Mississippi. Opportunity to copy the objects in the collections themselves is granted with reasonable restrictions. A study room of textiles has been fitted up with every facility for the use of the large collection of laces and textiles, and other study rooms in different parts of the building are intended for the convenience of those who wish to study the various collections at length.

AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

THE American Museum of Natural History, organized in 1869, was housed at first in the old Arsenal Building in Central Park. The corner-stone of the first section erected in Manhattan Square was laid by Gen. U. S. Grant, President of the United States, June 2, 1874, and the building was formally opened to the public by President Rutherford B. Hayes, December 22, 1877. Since then seven sections have been added, the total cost to date being $5,318,820. By contract with the city the building, cases, and cost of maintenance are met by the city. The collections and their preparation, scientific work, including explorations and publications, are provided from the Endowment Funds and contributions from the trustees.

Thirty-five halls, having an aggregate floor space of 271,886 square feet, are devoted to exhibits illustrating the life of the land and sea from all regions of the earth; mammals, birds, reptiles, fishes, insects, and other invertebrates, woods of North America; public health; primitive races of men and their arts; gems, minerals; structure and past life of the earth. Special effort is made to have the exhibits of popular interest and educational value, and large sums are expended to carry out these aims.

The habitat groups of birds, showing them amid their natural surroundings, were the first of their kind, but equally fine groups of large mammals, reptiles and marine invertebrates are now shown. Special attention is called to the beautiful models in glass of many minute animals on a greatly enlarged scale. The gigantic extinct dinosaurs are represented by many complete skeletons, and the series showing the evolution of the horse from a little four-toed animal no higher than a collie dog to his present size is unrivalled. It is supplemented by a series of skeletons of modern horses, mainly of celebrated examples of their respective breeds. The collection of gems and gem stones is large, the collection of minerals one of the finest in the world, and the meteorites include some of the largest or most noteworthy yet discovered.

The larger part of the work of preparation of specimens for exhibit, construction of groups, modelling, etc., is done in the laboratories of the Museum. The photographic department contains great collections of negatives, lantern slides, and thousands of feet of motion picture film. Educational work is also carried on by means of circulating collections; by lectures to pupils of the public schools, delivered at the schools and at the Museum; by free public evening lectures on science and travel (October to May); and through the publications of the Museum.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY GALLERY AND MUSEUM.

THE New York Historical Society, founded in 1804, is open free to the public daily. Sundays excepted, 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., and on holidays, 1 to 5 P. M. (excepting Christmas, New Year's and July 4. Closed for the month of August for cleaning and repairs). The Society has occupied since 1908 the building on Central Park West between 76th and 77th Streets, completed and furnished by the Society at a cost of $1,000,000, including the land. The home before that was on Second Avenue. It is supported by endowment funds and membership fees without aid from city or State. The Society maintains a library, museum and gallery of art. The library contains 130,000 volumes and 150,000 pamphlets, newspapers, prints, maps and a large collection of manuscripts, all relating to American history. The newspaper collection numbers 5,386 volumes, of which 3,381 were printed in this city and State. The earliest file being the "Boston News-Letter," beginning in 1704. The first newspaper printed in New York City was "The New York Gazette," established in 1725 by William Bradford, the first printer in the Colony of New York. The Society's file of this paper begins with 1730. The largest collection of New York City and State newspapers may be found here. The old New York prints cover the period from the earliest "View of the City," published in 1651, to modern times, and is unrivaled in its completeness by either private or public collections elsewhere. Among which may be mentioned The Burgis View of the City, 1717, of which only one other copy is known; the Maverick View of Wall Street, about 1825, and the Tiebout Engraving of the City Hall on Wall Street. The maps include the James Lyne survey of the city in 1731, published by William Bradford—the first engraved map of the city published—one of two known copies; the Dyckinck plan of 1755, the Ratzer map of 1767, and the commissioners map of 1811, besides a large collection of atlases and maps of all periods. The more important manuscripts are the Cadwallader Colden papers, De Peyster family papers, James Duane papers, Albert Gallatin papers, General Horatio Gates papers, diary of Philip Hone, Rufus King papers, Lloyd family papers, Rutherford papers, and Lord Sterling papers.

The Museum contains many relics of New York and American history, besides an Egyptian collection of 3,000 objects, the first brought to America. Three mummied bulls from the tombs are features, while every form of Egyptian art during the Old and Middle Kingdom and the Empire, 2900-1167 B. C., is represented. The collection is especially rich in papyri. The Society also possesses the Nineveh Sculptures, presented in 1858 by the late James Lenox. Of local relics the Beekman family coach, used before the Revolutionary War, in this city, may be mentioned, as well as the remains of the famous Equestrian Statue of King George III., and the statue of William Pitt (the Earl of Chatham), champion of the American cause in Parliament.

The Gallery of Art now numbers over 1,000 paintings, including old masters. Over 300 of the paintings are American portraits: George Washington by Stuart, Peale and Durand, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Bayard family portraits, Aaron Burr, Henry Clay, George and De Witt Clinton, John S. Copley by himself, De Peyster family portraits, Hamilton Fish, Benjamin Franklin, Albert Gallatin, Fitz-Greene Halleck, Alexander Hamilton, Andrew Jackson, John Jay, Thomas Jefferson, Lafayette, James Madison, Oliver H. Perry, Edgar Allan Poe, Red Jacket, Schuyler family portraits, Stuyvesant family portraits, Zachary Taylor, Daniel Webster, and N. P. Willis. The Society also possesses the original water color drawings made by John James Audubon for his "Birds of America,"—460 beautifully executed pictures. Special exhibitions of the Society's collections are held from time to time to which the public is invited. Since the occupation of the present building in 1908 the Society's treasures in art and literature have been exhibited and freely placed at the disposal of the public for its enjoyment, use and study.

NEW YORK BOTANICAL GARDEN.

THE New York Botanical Garden occupies a reservation of nearly 400 acres of Bronx Park north of Pelham Parkway. The tract includes the beautiful natural features of the valley of the Bronx River, its gorge, its waterfall and its rapids, and over 100 acres of natural woodland, including the famous Hemlock Forest, the most southern grove of hemlock spruce near the Atlantic Coast. The institution was chartered by the Legislature of New York, 1891, and the first reservation of 250 acres was set aside by the city in 1895, and about 140 acres were added by the city in 1915. The grounds and buildings are open to the public every day in the year without charge.

Museum Building, situated a short distance from the Botanical Garden Station of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, has a frontage of 312 feet, is Italian Renaissance; front approach is ornamented by a bronze fountain by Carl E. Tefft and by terra-cotta and marble fountains and seats; the vista lines are formed by four parallel lines of tulip trees. Three floors are devoted to public exhibits.

There is a large public lecture hall in the basement of the museum building, in which free public lectures are given every Saturday afternoon from Spring until Autumn. The upper floor of the building contains the library of 29,000 volumes on botany, horticulture and related sciences, including several special collections; the herbarium, containing prepared and dried specimens of plants from all parts of the world, occupies the greater portion of several rooms on the upper floor and comprises some 1,500,000 specimens There are also laboratories equipped for research on the upper floor, to which properly qualified students of botany are admitted and instructed by one or another member of the garden staff.

The Mansion—A large stone house built by the Lorillard family in 1856, stands above the Bronx River near the waterfall.

BROOKLYN BOTANIC GARDEN.

THE Brooklyn Botanic Garden, located between Eastern Parkway and Malbone Street, and Flatbush and Washington Avenues, was opened to the public on Linnaeus's birthday, May 13, 1911. The Garden comprises about 50 acres of land, on which are located the various plantations, the conservatories, and the laboratory building. The object of the Garden is the advancement and diffusion of a knowledge and love of plants, and its special aim is to be of service to the local community. The grounds are open free to the public daily.

The Native Wild Flower Garden contains about 900 species that grow without cultivation within 100 miles of New York City; the Rock Garden contains over 600 species of alpine and other rock-loving plants; the Japanese Garden has been pronounced the most perfect specimen of that kind of garden in any public park in America; the general Systematic Garden, chiefly of European herbs and shrubs, occupies the central portion of the grounds; the Ecological Garden illustrates the relation of plants to various factors of environment, such as water, light, gravity, insects, etc. The Iris Garden extends along the brook, and the Children's Gardens, containing over 250 individual plots, are at the south end of the grounds. A library of over 10,000 books and pamphlets on plant life and gardening is open free to the public, and also the herbarium of over 150,000 specimens. Illustrated lectures and occasional exhibits are also open free. The Conservatories contain a collection of tropical and sub-tropical plants, including those used for food, fibre, and other economic purposes, including banana, sugar-cane, tea, coffee, rubber hemp, papyrus, figs, citrous fruits, etc.

MUSEUMS OF THE BROOKLYN INSTITUTE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES.

THE Central Museum on Eastern Parkway at Washington Ave., the Children's Museum in Bedford Park, the Department of Education with activities in the Academy of Music building, and the Brooklyn Botanic Garden are under the general management of the Trustees of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. They receive appropriations from the city for maintenance, and their collections are provided for entirely from private sources. The construction work is done through the Department of Parks and the bills are audited through this department. The new wing of the Central Museum was begun in 1918.

The museum contains a noteworthy collection of paintings, other objects of art, carvings, desert groups, Egyptian jewelry, archaeological gatherings, Japanese and Chinese armor, weapons, etc.

THE HALL OF FAME.

MARCH 5, 1900, the Council of New York University accepted a gift of $100,000, afterward increased to $250,000, from a donor, whose name was withheld, for the erection and completion on University Heights, New York City, of a building to be called "The Hall of Fame for Great Americans." A structure was built in the form of a terrace with superimposed colonnade connecting the University Hall of Philosophy with the Hall of Languages. On the ground floor is a museum 200 feet long by 40 feet wide, consisting of a corridor and six halls to contain mementoes of the names that are inscribed above. The colonnade over this is 600 feet long with provision for 150 panels, each about 2 feet by 6 feet, each to bear the name of a famous American.

Only persons who shall have been dead ten or more years are eligible to be chosen. Fifteen classes of citizens were recommended for consideration, to wit: Authors and editors, business men, educators, inventors, missionaries and explorers, philanthropists and reformers, preachers and theologians, scientists, engineers and architects, lawyers and judges, musicians, painters and sculptors, physicians and surgeons, rulers and statesmen, soldiers and sailors, distinguished men and women outside the above classes. Fifty names were to be inscribed on the tablets at the beginning, and five additional names every fifth year thereafter, until the year 2000, when the 150 inscriptions will be completed.

In February, 1904, the plan was announced of a Hall of Fame for Women near the former, with places for 50 tablets. Its foundation has been begun.

The rules prescribed that the council should invite nominations from the public. Every nomination seconded by a member of the University Senate should be submitted to an electorate of one hundred eminent citizens selected by the council. Chancellor Emeritus MacCracken, who is "committeeman" of the hall, presides in the Senate when the Hall of Fame is considered. Address University Heights, N.Y. City.

The hall was dedicated May 30, 1901, when twenty-five or more National associations each unveiled one of the bronze tablets in the colonnade, and on May 30, 1907, eleven new tablets were unveiled, orations being given by the Governors of New York and Massachusetts.

When the Constitution was amended in 1914, to do away with the line of discrimination between native-born and foreign-born, it was required that the four foreign-born, already chosen, be re-elected in competition with the native-born put in nomination. Two above named were approved, while John Paul Jones and Roger Williams lacked the votes.

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

THE corporate existence of the New York Public Library began May 23, 1895, by the consolidation of the Astor Library, the Lenox Library and the Tilden Trust. The Astor Library, incorporated 1849, owned at the time of consolidation a fund of $941,000 and 266,147 books. The Lenox Library, incorporated 1870, owned in 1895 a fund of $505,500 and 86,000 books. The Tilden Trust (founded by Samuel J. Tilden, who died 1886) brought to the Library $2,000,000. In 1901, the New York Free Circulating Library, with 11 branches, was consolidated with the new system. Between 1901 and 1904, the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, the Aguilar, St. Agnes, Harlem, Tottenville, Washington Heights, University Settlement, Webster, and Cathedral Libraries all joined the corporation. In 1901, Andrew Carnegie gave $5,200,000 to Greater New York for library buildings, on condition that the city provide the land and maintain the libraries when built. With the part of this sum which was assigned to the New York Public Library, 37 branch libraries have been built. (The Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens have their own libraries. The New York Public Library serves the Boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx and Richmond.) There are in the New York Public Library, 41 branches in all. In addition there are six sub-branches, in buildings not owned by the library. In 1909, John S. Kennedy left the library $3,000,000.

The central building of the library, Fifth Avenue and 42d Street, built by the city, was opened May 23, 1911; cost, $9,000,000; architects, Carrère and Hastings; hours, weekdays, including holidays, 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. Sundays, 1 P. M. to 10 P. M. It contains the Reference Department, the descendant of the Astor and Lenox libraries; and the headquarters of the Circulation Department (the branch libraries). Reference Department has 1,437,178 books and pamphlets; the Circulation Department has 1,117,896 books. Exceeded in size only by the Library of Congress in this country, and by two or three European libraries, it is the first library in the world in point of use. The average annual number of persons recorded as using the Reference Department, 1915-1919, was 838,623. The actual use is much larger; the count includes only those who apply on written slips for books. The average annual number of books lent for home use by the Circulation Department, 1915-1919, was 10,148,501. Between 6,000 and 10,000 persons enter the Central Building daily. To maintain the Reference Department in 1919, the library disbursed $746,013.12 chiefly from its own endowments. In 1919, the disbursement for the Municipal Reference Branch, in the Municipal Building, was $17,389.42 of which sum the city gave $17,000. For the Circulation Department in 1919, was expended $842,732.59, of which the city gave $765,204.73. No public funds are spent for books, salaries, or other costs of the Reference Department in the central building, or for the Central Circulation Branch and Central Children's Room in that building.

The branch library buildings usually contain lending and reference departments for adults, similar departments for children, lecture rooms used for meetings for educational purposes and for organizations for social betterment; and, in four branches, roofgarden reading rooms. The branch libraries work in concert with the schools, and pay special attention to the Americanization of foreign born citizens. The Reference Department, in the central building, in addition to its main reading room, with seats for 768 readers, has special rooms devoted to art and prints, American history, maps, manuscripts, music, genealogy, Slavonic literature, Jewish literature, Oriental literature, economics and public documents, books for the blind, current periodicals, science and technology, and current newspapers. (There are two exhibition rooms and two galleries, which are devoted to the Lenox and Stuart art collections, with portraits of Washington by Gilbert Stuart, paintings by Reynolds, Raeburn, Copley, Turner, etc. The Avery collection of prints is notable. Valuable books include the Astor and Lenox collections, particularly strong in Americana, with many early printed Bibles, first folio Shakespeares, etc.

The library has 1,218 employees, counting both departments. A training school for librarians is maintained in the building. Director of the library, Edwin H. Anderson. Chief Reference Librarian, Harry M. Lydenberg. Chief of Circulation Department, Franklin F. Hopper.

NEW YORK CITY PENSION LAW.

(Chapter 427, Laws of 1920, effective Oct. 1, 1920.)

The New York City Pension Law provides that all employees, except those in exempt class, entering the city service after Oct. 1, 1920, shall become members of this system and all present city employees may become members by filing with the Board of Estimate and Apportionment a statement waiving all present or prospective benefits in other city retirement systems. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment has charge of all funds and of the entire system; the Controller is the custodian of the several funds which are (1) Annuity savings funds, (2) Annuity reserve fund, (3) Contingent reserve fund, (4) Pension reserve fund, (5) Pension fund.

Teachers, policemen, firemen and street-cleaners do not enter into this system, as they have their own distinctive systems of pensions.

Among the provisions of this law are life insurance protection equal to the last six months' pay of the employee, disability insurance protection of from one-quarter to one-half of the salary any time after completing ten years of service and paying as long as the disability continues, a three-quarter pay pension if the employee is disabled in the performance of duty, a half-pay pension to the dependents with return in cash of all the contributions at 4 per cent. per annum if the employee is killed in the performance of duty, retirement on demand after the ages of fifty-eight, fifty-nine and sixty, regardless of the length of service.

The city pays for all of these benefits except one-half of the cost of service or superannuation retirement benefit on account of service during membership in the fund. If the employee joins within the first year, the city also pays the entire cost of the benefits allowed by reason of service rendered prior to Oct. 1, 1920. The amount of the salary paid into the pension fund will be from 3 to 8 per cent. A representative of the Retirement System has been appointed by every department head for consultation by employees of the department.

THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

(By John B. Kennedy of K. of C. Headquarters.)

THE Knights of Columbus—the leading Catholic laymen's organization in the world—was founded by Rev. P. J. McGivney in 1882 in St. Mary's parish, New Haven, Conn. From an original membership of eleven it grew from city to city in Connecticut and then from State to State and beyond national boundaries, until its membership is more than 800,000 and it operates in the United States and its possessions, in Canada, Newfoundland, Mexico and Cuba. It has 2,000 councils, many of which own club buildings and are governed by State jurisdictions, of which there are fifty, and by a Supreme Council composed of elected State representatives, while executive power is vested in a board of directors. The primary object of the Knights of Columbus is to associate Catholic men for religious and civic usefulness. There are four degrees of membership, none of which has any secret or oath-bound stipulation—the competent ecclesiastical and civil authorities being empowered to demand and receive the degree work of the order.

The Knights have maintained since their inception an insurance feature for members; assets exceed $12,000,000, with $27,000,000 underwritten. Non-insurance members are associates. The order was originally made up of only insurance members. Previous to their emergence into general public notice as an agency of war welfare work the Knights had done educational and social work. They founded the first chair of American history in this country—at the Catholic University, Washington—and they endowed the same university with $500,000 for fifty scholarships in perpetuity. State and local councils also supported educational and social work. The Knights aided the victims of many catastrophes.

An important work of the Knights has been their eleven-year fight against extreme radicalism through the medium of public forums. Lecturers have been sent through the country to combat materialistic Socialism. This work has met with success and is being continued. The K. of C. first entered war welfare work in the Spanish-American War. When the war with Germany started they raised $1,500,000 among their members and began at the cantonments at home. Later, on Gen. Pershing's invitation, the Knights went overseas and there, as well as at home, supported by a fund of $14,000,000 donated by people of all classes, they carried on an intensive and extensive work.

In all, the Knights received approximately $40,000,000 from the American people. With the balance remaining at the conclusion of active war work, they financed a Nation-wide chain of employment bureaus, finding work for 500,000 former service men at a minimum wage of $20 per week; they awarded 500 free college scholarships to former service men in institutions like Yale and Georgetown, and inaugurated a Nation-wide chain of free night schools for service men and women, with nominal charges for civilians. These schools graduated 40,000 pupils last year. There are more than 100 of them in operation, teaching technical, business and citizenship courses. The Knights' latest public move has been the decision to present to the American people through the American Legion a national memorial building to cost $5,000,000 and to be erected in Washington.

The first man killed, Lieut. William T. Fitzsimmons of Kansas City, Mo., the last man killed, Chaplain William F. Devitt of Holyoke, Mass., and the first men to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross were members of the Knights of Columbus. In 1920 the Knights went to Europe, visited the Pope, gave the K. of C. statue of Lafayette to France, and a jewelled baton to Marshal Foch.

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

THE Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce is charged with the survey of the coasts of the United States and coasts under the jurisdiction thereof, and the publication of charts covering said coasts. This includes base measure, triangulation, topography and hydrography along said coasts, the survey of rivers to the head of tide water or ship navigation, deep sea soundings, temperature and current observations along said coasts and throughout the Gulf and Japan Streams, magnetic observations and researches and the publication of maps showing the variations of terrestrial magnetism; gravity research, determination of heights by precise leveling, the determination of geographic positions by astronomic observations for latitude longitude and azimuth, and by triangulation to furnish reference points for State surveys and to co-ordinate governmental surveys, the determination of the shape and size of the earth and researches in isostasy, whereby information is obtained regarding variations from normal densities in the outer portions of the earth.

The results obtained are published in annual reports and in special publications; charts upon various scales including sailing charts, general charts of the coast and harbor charts, tide tables issued annually in advance; coast pilots with sailing directions covering the navigable waters; notice to mariners issued weekly as a joint publication of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Lighthouses, and containing current information necessary for safe navigation; catalogues of charts and publications and such other publications as may be required to carry out the organic law governing the survey.

STATISTICS OF THE SURVEY AS OF JULY, 1920.

There are about 280,000 square miles of primary triangulation and 2,300 linear miles of primary traverse completed in the United States. There is about an equal amount of each still to be done to bring the primary work within fifty miles of every place in the United States This is the minimum amount required to give adequate control to local surveys. There is tertiary triangulation along the whole coast of the United States oper but this needs constant revision due to changes in the shore line and to the loss of stations. The necessary triangulation in the Philippine Islands is nearly completed. Alaska, however, has only about one-third of its coast covered by tertiary triangulation and there is no primary triangulation in the interior of Alaska.

About 42,000 miles of precise levels have been completed in the United States and there are about 25,000 miles still to be done to bring the levels within fifty miles of every place in the United States. This is considered the minimum amount necessary to give adequate control for local level lines. There were about 32,000 square miles of primary triangulation, about 300 linear miles of precise traverse and about 2,250 linear miles of precise levels completed during the past fiscal year.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

IN this establishment practically all of the printing and binding for the Government is performed, with the exception of postage stamps, paper money, and bonds. The Public Printer is the executive officer of the Government Printing Office; is appointed by the President, and receives a salary of $6,000 a year. Directly, or through his principal officers, he purchases all the materials, paper, and machinery, subject to provisions of certain laws; disburses all moneys; appoints all officers and employees, and exercises general supervision over all affairs of the office. Cornelius Ford, of Hoboken, N. J., is the present Public Printer.

The superintendent of documents office serves as a bureau of information and is also the sales agency for Government publications. It prepares the official catalogues for the Government, and performs all mailing operations for the various departments and bureaus of the Government at Washington. Another function of the office is to supply designated depository libraries with the publications to which such designation entitles them, and it endeavors to serve the interests of all libraries so far as its limited stock will permit.

The Government Printing Office was really established in 1861, when John Defrees, at that time doing contract printing for Congress, sold his printing plant to the Government. That plant has gradually grown, by additions and new buildings, until at the present time it contains approximately 14 acres of floor space, and is well equipped with modern machinery for the rapid production of all classes of printing and binding. Congress appropriates money for the operation of this office, and of the amount of that appropriation each department and bureau is allotted a certain portion and may have work done to that amount. Work is performed at cost, and the output runs in value to over $12,000,000 a year. During one year the compensation of employees amounts to $6,500,000, and the value of paper used to $4,600,000; about 80,000 different jobs are handled, ranging from envelopes and blanks to sumptuously bound volumes in large editions; two and one-half billion ems of type are set; 260,000 forms are sent to press; three and one-fourth billion chargeable impressions are run from presses; over a billion postal cards are printed; 260,000,000 sh ts are folded; 125,000,000 signatures are sewed, and 80,000,000 copies are ruled.

PAN-AMERICAN UNION.

THE Pan-American Union is the international organization and office maintained in Washington D. C., by the twenty-one American republics, as follows: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Hayti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, United States, Uruguay, and Venezuela. It is devoted to the development and advancement of commerce, friendly intercourse, and good understanding among these countries. It is supported by quotas contributed by each country, based upon the population. Its affairs are administered by a Director-General and Assistant Director, elected by and responsible to a Governing Board, which is composed of the Secretary of State of the United States and the diplomatic representatives in Washington of the other American governments. These two executive officers are assisted by a staff of experts, statisticians, commercial specialists, editors, translators, compilers, librarians, clerks and stenographers. The Union publishes a monthly bulletin in English, Spanish, and Portuguese, which is a record of Pan-American progress. It also publishes numerous special reports and pamphlets on various subjects of practical information. Its library, the Columbus Memorial Library, contains 43,000 volumes, 22,000 photographs, 160,000 index cards, and a collection of 1,500 maps. The Union is housed in a building erected through the gifts of Andrew Carnegie and the contributions of the American republics.

THE UNITED STATES CENSUS.

(From data supplied by the Bureau.)

THE Constitution requires a census of the United States decennially. The first was in 1790 under the supervision of the President; subsequent censuses, to and including that of 1840, were under the Secretary of State. In 1849 the census work was transferred to the newly organized Department of the Interior, where it remained until the passage, in 1903, of the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor, by which the Census Bureau was transferred to the new department. Meanwhile Congress, March 6, 1902, had made the Census Office a permanent bureau. Since March 4, 1913, when the Department of Commerce and the Department of Labor were separately organized, the Bureau of the Census has been attached to the former. The work is divided into two branches, the decennial census and special statistical inquiries, the latter mostly made between the decennial censuses. The thirteenth decennial census was taken as of date April 15, 1910. It covered: (1) population, (2) agriculture (including irrigation), (3) manufactures, and (4) mines, quarries, and oil and gas wells. The cost of the census of 1910 was about $14,290,000, in addition to which $1,675,000 was spent in carrying on the annual investigations of the permanent bureau during the census period. Of this amount $7,200,000 represents the cost of collecting the data through over 70,000 paid enumerators, besides supervisors, clerks, and special agents.

The Fourteenth Decennial Census was taken as of January 1, 1920. It covers: (1) population, (2) agriculture (including irrigation and drainage), (3) manufactures, (4) forestry and forest products, and (5) mines, quarries, and oil and gas wells. The cost of this census is estimated at $20,179,000, in addition to which $2,371,000 will be spent in carrying on the annual investigations of the bureau during the three-year census period (July 1, 1919, to June 30, 1922). Of the first named amount, $12,500,000 covers the cost of collecting the data through approximately 87,000 enumerators, in addition to supervisors, clerks, and special agents.

The permanent work of the bureau is provided for by the act of Congress approved March 6, 1902, and amendatory and supplemental acts, and include the gathering and publishing of statistical facts pertaining to the dependent, defective, and delinquent classes; wealth, public indebtedness, and taxation; births and deaths; financial and other activities of cities; finances of States; religious bodies; transportation by water; electrical industries; Federal employees; cotton, and tobacco stocks. These inquiries are made at intervals ranging in length from ten years to two weeks. The census of manufactures in addition to forming part of the decennial census, is taken in each mid-decennial year; and a biennial census of products of manufacturing industries, and a quinquennial census of agriculture will also be taken hereafter. Special inquiries are made from time to time at the direction of the President, the Secretary of Commerce, or Congress.

The Director of the Census is appointed by the President and receives $7,500 per annum during the three-year decennial census period and $6,000 during the seven "intercensal" years. The present Director is Sam. L. Rogers, of North Carolina. The permanent organization includes a chief clerk, Thomas J. Fitzgerald; five chief statisticians—for Population, William C. Hunt; for Manufactures, Eugene F. Hartley; for Statistics of States and Cities, Starke M. Grogan; for Agriculture, Cotton and Tobacco, William L. Austin; and for Vital Statistics, William H. Davis; a geographer, Charles S. Sloane; and nine chiefs of division. The temporary census organization has been augmented by an assistant director, W. M. Steuart; a chief statistician for revision and results, Dr. Joseph A. Hill; an appointment clerk, a disbursing clerk, eight chiefs of division, and ten statistical experts. The permanent employes of the bureau of Washington number approximately 700, and in addition about 700 special agents are employed intermittently in the South for the collection of cotton statistics. The total force of the bureau, including temporary employees, during the three-year decennial census period will number at its maximum about 4,500.

UNITED STATES RECLAMATION SERVICE.

(From data furnished by the Service.)

ARTHUR P. DAVIS, Director and Chief Engineer. Main office: 18th and F Streets N. W., Washington, D. C. Employees: Washington office, 100; West, 5,000 (varies). Expenditures per year about $8,000,000.

The Reclamation Service, organized in July, 1902, under the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902, is engaged in the investigation, construction and operation of thirty irrigation projects aggregating 3,200,000 acres located in the fifteen arid and semi-arid States of the Far West, including Ariz., Cal., Col., Idaho, Kan., Mont., Nebr., Nev., N. M., N. Dak., Okla., Oreg., S. Dak., Utah, Wash., Wyo., and Tex. The funds for this work come largely from the sale of public lands; and the money expended is returned to the fund by easy payments of settlers, usually in twenty annual instalments without interest in accordance with the Reclamation Extension Act of Aug. 13, 1914. A western executive office is maintained at Denver. The Service has built on the thirty projects over 12,000 miles of canals, ditches and drains, including 100,000 canal structures and involving the excavation of 174,000,000 cubic yards of materials. In connection with this work there have been constructed 100 storage and diversion dams, including the Arrowrock Dam, 349 feet high, the highest in the world; the Elephant Butte Dam on the Rio Grande, forming the largest irrigation reservoir in the United States, of 2,600,000 acre feet capacity, and the longest roller crest dam in the world, located on the Grand River in Colorado. The Service has built 95 tunnels, 983 miles of road, 83 miles of railroad, 3,141 miles of telephone line, a dozen power plants and 651 miles of transmission lines; and is also mining coal and has manufactured 1,676,000 barrels of cement and sand-cement. The net construction cost to June 30, 1919, was $123,853,000.

Over 150,000 persons are living on the 40,000 farms irrigated by the Service, and the value of the crops in 1919 on the 1,100,000 acres cropped was about $88,000,000. About 3,000,000 acres of land (60,000 farms) will be irrigated on the completion of these projects. Information in regard to farms open to settlement may be obtained by addressing Statistician, U. S. Reclamation Service, Washington, D. C.

The largest irrigable area is that of the Boise project, in Idaho, 327,552 acres; net cost of construction to June 30, 1919, was $11,973,276. The next is the North Platte, in Nebraska-Wyoming, 251,715 acres; cost, $10,549,095 to June 30, 1919. During construction, the irrigative projects have produced $6,534,184; reducing the net cost of construction to $115,164,177.

THE CIVIL SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE latest full and complete Civil Service data—owing to the war—is as of June 30, 1916, when the total number of classified positions was as follows: Competitive, 30,020, in Washington, 266,908 outside Washington; excepted and non-competitive positions, 1,334 in Washington, 124,093 outside Washington; unclassified, 3 130 in Washington, 25,639 outside Washington. By another classification they were as follows: Presidential, in Washington, 903; outside Washington, 9,982; all others, in Washington, 34,484; outside Washington, 416.638; total (including 18,230 in Isthmian Canal Service, not counted anywhere above), 480,327.

The act requires the rules to provide, as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant, for open competitive practical examinations for testing the fitness of applicants for the classified service; for the filling of all vacancies by selections from among those graded highest; for the apportionment of appointments at Washington among the States upon the basis of population; for a period of probation before absolute appointment; that no person in the public service shall be obliged to contribute service or money for political purposes; that persons in the competitive service, while retaining the right to vote as they please or to express privately their political opinions, shall take no active part in political campaigns, and that no person in said service has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body

The expenditure for salaries in the Executive Civil Service is over $200,000,000 a year. The Civil Service act does not require the classification of persons appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate or of persons employed merely as laborers or workmen. Many positions are excepted in part from the provisions of the rules for various reasons

Persons seeking to be examined must file an application blank. The blank for the Departmental Service at Washington, Railway Mail Service, the Indian School Service, and the Government Printing Service should be requested directly of the Civil Service Commission at Washington. The blank for the Customs, Postal, or Internal Revenue Service should be requested of the Civil Service Board of Examiners at the office where service is sought.

Applicants for examination must be citizens of the United States and of the proper age. No person using intoxicating liquors to excess may be appointed. No discrimination is made on account of sex, color, or political or religious opinions The limitations of age vary with the different services, but do not apply to any person honorably discharged from the military or naval service of the United States by reason of disability resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty.

Persons who served in the military or naval service of the United States, and were discharged by reason of disabilities resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty, are, under the Civil Service rules, given certain preferences They are released from all maximum age limitations, are eligible for appointment at a grade of 65, while all others are obliged to obtain a grade of 70, and are certified to appointing officers before all others. Subject to the other conditions of the rules, a veteran of the rebellion or of the war with Spain, or the widow of any such person, or any army nurse of either war, may be reinstated without regard to the length of time he or she has been separated from the service.

Examinations are also held for positions in the Philippines, Porto Rico, and Hawaii, and also for the Panama Canal service.

Under an executive order unclassified laborers are appointed after open, competitive examination upon their physical condition. This action is outside the Civil Service act. Here are amendments to the rules:

"1. A person separated without delinquency or misconduct from a competitive position, or from a position which he entered by transfer or promotion from a competitive position, may be reinstated in the department or office in which he formerly served upon certificate of the commission, subject to the following limitations:

"(a) The separation must have occurred within one year next preceding the date of the requisition of the nominating or appointing officer for such certificate; but this limitation shall not apply to a person who served in the Civil War or the war with Spain and was honorably discharged, or his widow, or an army nurse of either war.

"(b) No person may be reinstated to a position requiring an examination different from that required for the position from which he was separated without passing an appropriate examination.

"2. A person resigning a scientific, professional, or technical position in the competitive service in which he has acquired training and experience not to be acquired elsewhere, to enter the public service of a State, county municipality or foreign government in a similar capacity, may immediately upon the completion of such service be reinstated in the department in which he formerly served upon the certificate of the commission issued upon the requisition of the department dated within three years from the date of his separation from the competitive service.'

Note.—The selection of the Superintendents of the Military Academy was confined to the Corps of Engineers from the establishment of the Institution, March 16, 1802, till the passage of the law of July 13, 1866, which opened it to the entire Army. By the Act of June 12, 1858, the local rank of Colonel was conferred upon the Superintendent.

Major Williams resigned June 20, 1803, on a point of command, and pending its settlement until April 19, 1805, when he again returned to service as Chief Engineer, no permanent Superintendent of the Military Academy was appointed, the command devolving upon the senior officer of the Corps of Engineers present for duty.

Bvt. Major P. G. T. Beauregard, Corps of Engineers, by order of John B. Floyd, Secretary of War, relieved Col. Delafield, Jan. 23, 1861, from the superintendency of the Military Academy, but was himself displaced five days later, Jan. 28 1861, by direction of the succeeding Secretary of War, Joseph Holt, the command again devolving upon Col. Delafield.

ORIGIN OF THE FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES.

(From an article by William Elliot Griffis, D. D., in the Independent.)

EUROPEANS knowing only the theory of the heraldic origin of the American flag have made merry over the absurdity (from their point of view) of the Stars and Stripes. If, however, the basis of our national standard is derived from the Dutch Republic, then much is clear. Paintings made after the Revolutionary War are untrustworthy as witnesses, especially those having six-pointed stars, for the reason that no proof yet exists to show that any regimental flag in the Continental Army had stars in its field, unless possibly toward the end of the war. Scores of British prints representing flags captured from or seen on Continental ships or regimental staves have only stripes.

Our fathers, of the thirteen colonies united as one, made "an appeal to Heaven" by uniting on their first flag, raised at Cambridge, Mass., January 1, 1776, the "Unions" of the two countries, Netherlands and Great Britain, that had held sovereignty of the land they lived on. Of European national flags daily seen in our harbors, two are prominent above all. One, the Dutch, was made in 1579, the other, the British, in 1707. From 1609 to 1664, a tri-colored republican flag of a federal union of states had floated over New Netherland, or the soil of the four middle colonies, later called New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, as the flag of the homeland. The seven alternate red and white stripes recalled to our fathers, in 1776, the successful revolt against "taxation without representation," or, as the Dutch Parliament of 1477 put it, "no taxation without consent," the union of seven states in a republic; a July declaration of independence, published in 1579, with the abjuring, in 1581, of an oppressive monarch.

In the Pennsylvania "State House" (the very name and use of the words are Dutch), the Declaration of Independence was signed under the British flag and the arms of King George, and not until July 9 were the British union jack and the royal arms taken down from the building now called Independence Hall. Not until September 9, 1776, did Congress order that their "commissions and instruments be made to read "United States" where heretofore the words "United Colonies" had been used. The stripes have never left the flag, because they represent a vital fundamental idea. They have been from first to last the one permanent element in our national standard. When unfurled, January 1, 1776, the first Union flag raised over the first American army mirrored true history. Flags many, of astonishing variety of color, inscription and emblem came into view and use. There were pine trees, rattlesnakes, beavers, threefold knotted cords, with their thirteen ends free, a chain or circle of thirteen rings linked together, and other objects notably American, with some borrowed from heraldry, or from British or Dutch history. In the latter case, the sheaf of arrows, the hat of liberty, and the Netherlands lion were ancestral. Meanwhile, officers of the seventeen Continental men-of-war and of scores of privateers kept clamoring for something significant to display in foreign ports, especially while buying munitions of war. These calls for a "distinctive standard" increased in volume even to indignant remonstrance. Still there was nothing, until June 14, 1777, except local or colonial symbols and "the Congress flag" of the thirteen stripes.

No evidence of any use of the British "Union" after October 4, 1776, is known. Abundance of exact documentary proof shows that the thirteen stripes were ever present, but there is no proof that the stars were. In the book of photographs of extant flags used, or alleged to be used in the American Revolution (made by Gherardi Davis, New York, 1908), the field of stars is rarely seen and in none with absolute surety, before 1780, but the stripes are always in evidence. The collection of British prints of our flag, now in Fraunces Tavern, gives the same testimony—stripes always, stars never until 1780. In the journal of William Russell, American prisoner in the Forton prison, near Plymouth, England, we read the entry made on July 4, 1780: "To-day being the anniversary of American Independence the American prisoners wore the thirteen stars and stripes drawn on pieces of paper on their hats, with the motto, Independence, Liberty or Death." The record of the Continental Congress, June 14, 1777, reads as follows: 'Resolved, that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The entry in the journal of Captain Abraham Swarthout of Colonel Gansevoort's New York regiment, written August 3, 1777, in Fort Schuyler, shows beyond cavil, where the first flag of stars and stripes, of which we have record, was made and hoisted; but this was in a fort not in the field, or at the head of a regiment. The vote of Congress on the flag was not officially published until September 3, 1777. There is no record that the Stars and Stripes were carried at Brandywine, Pa., at Gooch's Bridge, Del., or that even the "Quiberon" French salute of November 1, 1777, to the U. S. S. "Ranger," commanded by Paul Jones, was given to any but the striped flag without stars. On land, the most prominent of all the many symbols on the regimental flags on the Continental Army throughout the war was the rattlesnake, which is oftenest referred to by both native and foreign witnesses. In fact the resolution of Congress of June 14, 1777, was not heeded, even by Washington himself, or even by the Board of War. One Continental officer wrote with surprise on August 3, 1777: "It appears by the papers that Congress resolved on the 14th of June last," &c. As late as May 10, 1779, Washington, in correspondence with the Board of War, states that applications came to him repeatedly for drums and colors, but there were many varying flags for particular regiments, and "it is not yet settled what is the standard of the United States." The War Board replied, through Richard Peters, that if "General Washington would favor the Board with his opinion on the subject as to what was the one common flag of the United States,' a recommendation to Congress would be made and they would get the materials and "order a number for the army."

Replying on September 3, 1779, Washington says nothing about stars, but recommended that the number belonging to the regiments from each State should be "inserted within the curve of the serpent."

In 1847 the Dutch Government politely made the inquiry, "What is the American flag?" In 1857, in the harbor of New York, nine different styles of arrangement of stars were noted in one day. On March 16, 1896, the Secretary of War, Daniel Lamont, ordered that the constellation should be in six rows.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

(By the Adjutant General of the United States Army.)

There is no Federal law now in force pertaining to the manner of displaying, hanging or saluting the United States flag or prescribing any ceremonies that should be observed in connection therewith. In fact, there are but two Federal laws on the statute books that have any bearing upon this subject, one the act of Congress approved Feb. 20, 1905 (33 Stat. L., p. 725), providing that a trademark cannot be registered which consists of or comprises, inter alia, "the flag, coat of arms or other insignia of the United States, or any simulation thereof," and the other the act of Congress approved February 8, 1917 (Public—No. 305—64th Cong.), providing certain penalties for the desecration, mutilation or improper use of the flag within the District of Columbia.

I may add that it is the practice in the army, each day in the year, to hoist the flag briskly at sunrise, irrespective of the condition of the weather, and to lower it slowly and ceremoniously at sunset, indicating the commencement and cessation of the activities of the day, and to display it at half staff on Memorial Day (May 30) from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset, and also on other days specially designated for that purpose by the proper authority, the flag always being first hoisted to the top of the staff before being lowered to the half-staff position.

Days for Displaying Flag—It is becoming the practice throughout the country, among civilians, to display the national flag on all patriotic occasions, especially on the following days: Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Mothers' Day, Memorial Day, Flag Day, Independence Day. In certain localities other special days are observed in the same manner.

Existing regulations governing the army provide that when officers and enlisted men pass the national flag, not encased, they will render honors as follows: If in civilian dress and covered, they will uncover, holding the headdress opposite the left shoulder with the right hand; if uncovered, they will salute with the right hand salute. A flag unfurled and hung in a room in which officers or enlisted men of the army are present will be saluted by them the first time they may have occasion to pass it, but not thereafter. The hand salute is as follows: Raise the right hand smartly till the tip of the forefinger touches the lower part of the headdress above the right eye, thumb and fingers extended and joined, palm to left, forearm inclined to about 45 degrees, hand and wrist straight; at the same time look toward the person saluted; drop the arm smartly to the side.

No anthem, hymn or musical air has been recognized by any Federal law as the national anthem, hymn or air, but army and navy regulations provide that the musical composition familiarly known as "The Star-Spangled Banner" shall be designated as the national air of the United States of America. It should be stated, however, that these regulations are binding only upon the personnel of the military and naval service. Whenever the national air is played at any place where persons belonging to the military or naval service are present, all officers and enlisted men not in formation are required to stand at attention, facing toward the music, excepting when the flag is being lowered at sunset, on which occasion they are required to face toward the flag. If in civilian dress and uncovered, they are required to stand and salute at the first note of the air, retaining the position of salute until the last note of the air is played.

HISTORY OF THE FLAG AND ITS CHANGES IN DESIGN.

According to the Smithsonian Institution there were many forms of early flags, especially Colonial types used by the individual colonies and militia regiments, before the flag of the United States was established by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777, now celebrated as Flag Day. The National Museum has an early naval 12-star type flag said to have been flown by John Paul Jones during the War of the Revolution. From the time of the Revolution the stars and stripes in the flag have varied. There were 13 stars during the Revolution, 15 in the War of 1812, 29 in the Mexican War, 33 to 35 in the Civil War, 45 in the Spanish War, and 48 to-day. The stripes were changed first from 13 to 15, and then back again to 13.

The American flag of the highest historic and sentimental value to the whole country is in the National Museum collections. It is the original "Star-Spangled Banner" which flew over Fort McHenry in Baltimore Harbor during the bombardment on September 13-14, 1814, and was the inspiration of Francis Scott Key's immortal poem, now sung as our national anthem. It is of the 15 stars and stripe type adopted after the admission of Vermont and Kentucky by an act approved by President Washington, January 13, 1794. The "Star-Spangled Banner" measures about 30 feet square, though it was probably somewhat longer, and is much battered and torn, with one star missing, possibly shot away. From 1795 this form continued as the standard flag until President Monroe's Administration, when Congress enacted that it should thereafter be of thirteen stripes and twenty stars, with the addition of a star for each new State, commencing July 4, 1818.

It seems that for many years the army did not carry the Stars and Stripes in battle, though it had been in general use as a garrison flag. The land forces during this period and before carried what was known as national colors or standards of blue, with the coat of arms of the United States, comprising an eagle surmounted by a number of stars, emblazoned thereon, with the designation of the body of troops. In 1834, War Department regulations gave the artillery the right to carry the Stars and Stripes. The infantry and cavalry still used the national standards, which remained the colors of the infantry until 1841 and of the cavalry until 1887, when that branch of the army was ordered to carry the Stars and Stripes. From its adoption in 1777, however, naval vessels universally displayed the National Flag. The history of the flag thus indicates that the Stars and Stripes was not officially carried by American troops in battle until the period of the Mexican War, 1846-47. In that war a flag of 13 stars and stripes was carried by the battalion of volunteers from Maryland and the District of Columbia, and the flag of Company I, Fourth Regiment of Indiana Infantry, of 13 stripes, with an eagle in the field. Ten flags of the National Museum collection pertain to the Civil War. Other flags include some of the Spanish-American War, a flag used by Admiral Charles Wilkes, U. S. Navy; a miniature flag carried by Captain C. F. Hall in the Arctic, 1864-1869; the American colors carried by Rear-Admiral Peary in his Arctic explorations in 1909; the flag carried by the Smithsonian African Expedition under the direction of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, in 1909-10; and numerous examples of the National Ensign.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FLAG.

The official flag of the United States bears forty-eight white stars in a blue field, arranged in six rows of eight stars each. Two stars were added in 1912 by the admission of Arizona and New Mexico to the Union. The garrison flag of the army is made of bunting, thirty-six feet fly and twenty feet hoist, thirteen stripes, and in the upper quarter, next the staff, is the field or "union" of stars, equal to the number of States, on blue field, over one-third length of the flag, extending to the lower edge of the fourth red stripe from the top. The storm flag is twenty feet by ten feet, and the recruiting flag nine feet nine inches by four feet four inches. The "Union Jack" is blue, with a star for every State in white. The Coast Guard flag, authorized by act of Congress, March 2, 1799, was originally prescribed to "consist of sixteen perpendicular stripes, alternate red and white, the union of the ensign bearing the arms of the United States in dark blue on a white field." The sixteen stripes represented the number of States which had been admitted to the Union at that time, and no change has been made since. June 14, the anniversary of the adoption of the flag, is celebrated as Flag Day in a large part of the Union.

When the National and State or other flags fly together the National flag should be on the right. When used on a bier or casket at a funeral the stars should be placed at the head. In no case should the flag be allowed to touch the ground. The statutes of the United States forbid the use of the flag in registered trade-marks, and the use of the flag for advertising purposes is illegal. The President's flag consists of a blue field with four white stars, one in each corner, similar to the Admiral's flag, and in the centre a white spread-eagle with red, white, and blue shield on the body, the design being very similar to the seal of the United States. This spread-eagle design is based upon the seal which has been used in the White House for many years as the personal seal of the President. The flag of Admiral of U. S. Navy is blue, with four white stars—two horizontal and two perpendicular in centre. The flag of Vice-Admiral of U. S. Navy is blue, with three white stars—triangular. The flag of the Secretary of the Navy is blue, with two white stars (perpendicular) at either end and white anchor in centre. The use of the 13-star boat flag has been discontinued, and in its place is a 48-star flag. The consular flag is blue, with large white C in centre, surrounded by thirteen white stars. The flag of the Panama Canal consists of a blue square bearing the letters "P. C." in white.

The flag of New York State is blue charged with the arms of the State. The flag of New York City consists of three perpendicular lines, blue, white, and orange (the blue nearest the flagstaff); on the white bar is the seal of the city, without the legend.

FLAG DESECRATION.

New York forbids the use of the flag for advertising purposes and punishes public mutilation, trampling or casting contempt upon flag as a misdemeanor. The New York statute also provides for a forfeiture of a penalty of $50 for each offense, to be recovered in a civil action, which may be brought by or in name of any citizen and two or more penalties may be sued for and recovered in one action. Money so recovered, less reasonable cost and expense, is paid into State Treasury. Provisions of New York statute are not to be construed as applying to a certificate, diploma, warrant or commission of appointment to office, ornamental picture, article of jewelry, stationery for use in private correspondence, or newspaper or periodical; nor to advertising put out by U. S. in its governmental capacity, i. e., to obtain recruits or to advertise its governmental activities. These activities are in no way related to commerce.

(UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776, AT PHILADELPHIA.)

WHEN, in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our Legislature.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens taken captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

WE THEREFORE, the REPRESENTATIVES of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, IN GENERAL CONGRESS, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly PUBLISH and DECLARE, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be FREE AND INDEPENDENT States: that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which INDEPENDENT STATES may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

EXTRACTS FROM HIS ADDRESS COUNSELLING THE MAINTENANCE OF THE UNION.—CONFINEMENT OF THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT TO ITS CONSTITUTIONAL LIMITATIONS, AND AVOIDANCE OF RELATIONS WITH FOREIGN POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

(To the People of the United States on His Approaching Retirement from the Presidency.)

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

The unity of government which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you. It is justly so; for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence—the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee that, from different causes and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed—it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens by birth or choice of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of American, which belongs to you, in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism, more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of difference, you have the same religion, manners, habits, and political principles. You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together; the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts—of common dangers, sufferings, and successes.

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding, in the exercise of the powers of one department, to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal, against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments, ancient and modern; some of them in our country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be, in any particular, wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance, in permanent evil, any partial or transient benefit which the use can, at any time, yield.

Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that, in the course of time and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

ENTANGLEMENTS WITH FOREIGN POWERS.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to be useful, must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defence against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike of another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil, and even second, the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves, by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice?

'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat it, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But, in my opinion, it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectably defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope that they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish; that they will control the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which hitherto has marked the destiny of nations; but if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit, some occasional good; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit; to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigues, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism, this hope will be full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointment until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that House it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law.

3. The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. But in choosing the President, the vote shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote. A quorum, for this purpose, shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice-President.*

4. The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

5. No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

6. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

7. The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

3. The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

Section 3—(President shall communicate to Congress. He may convene and adjourn Congress, in case of disagreement, etc. Shall receive ambassadors, execute laws, and commission officers.)

He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed, but when not committed within any State the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

Section 3—(Treason defined. Proof of. Punishment of.)

1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Section 1—(Each State to give credit to the public acts, etc., of every other State.)

Section 2—(Privileges of citizens of each State. Fugitives from justice to be delivered up. Persons held to service having escaped, to be delivered up.)

1. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

2. A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the Executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

3. No person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

Section 3—(Admission of new States. Power of Congress over territory and other property.)

1. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State, nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned, as well as of the Congress.

2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section 4—(Republican form of government guaranteed. Each State to be protected.)

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and, on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

(Constitution; how amended. Proviso.)

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress; provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the Ninth Section of the First Article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

(Certain debts, etc., declared valid. Supremacy of Constitution, treaties, and laws of the United States. Oath to support Constitution, by whom taken. No religious test.)

2. This Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

3. The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

(What ratification shall establish Constitution.)

The ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

The original proposal of the ten amendments was preceded by this preamble and resolution:

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, two-thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, as amendments to the Constitution of the United States; all or any of which articles, when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, to be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the said Constitution, namely:"

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

THIS doctrine was first propounded by Grotius in his Mare Liberum, "The air, running water, the sea—are common to all." Selden answered with his Mare Clausum, which defended the pretensions of England over the waters surrounding the British Isles. The issue between Grotius and Selden may be regarded as settled by the present doctrine regarding the marine league, i. e., that the jurisdiction of a state extends three miles beyond the coast line, and no further. In the eighteenth century continental antagonism to British sea power produced the doctrine that "free ships make free goods." This was backed by the armed neutralities of 1780 and 1800, and was finally incorporated, in great part, into international law by the Declaration of Paris, 1856, which also abolished privateering. Meantime a third meaning had come to be fastened to "freedom of the seas," the idea that private property should be immune from capture on the high seas in war time unless it was contraband or intended for a blockaded port. Of this notion the United States has always been the champion.

CONGRESS OF BERLIN.

THE famous Congress of Berlin met under the presidency of Bismarck at Berlin in 1878 to settle questions which had arisen out of the Russian defeat of the Turks in the war of 1877-78. It had been the desire of Russia to erect a strong Slav State, Bulgaria, out of land taken from Turkey, leaving the latter little in Europe except Constantinople. England opposed, from fear of Russian control at Constantinople, and Austria, desiring Balkan land and fearing a strong Russia, added her protest. Bismarck mediated, Russian plans for Bulgaria were checkmated, and Austria secured control of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Much of the land intended for Bulgaria was given back to Turkey. This contributed to break up the old Russo-German friendship and later led to the Franco-Russian alliance

NOTES—Twelve amendments were proposed in 1789, of which New York ratified 11, but only 10 were adopted by three-fourths of the States. An attempt was made to have the amendments ratified by resolution, but the motion failed, 49 to 2.

On February 4, 1818, the President reported to Congress that 12 States had ratified the amendment forbidding titles, while 3 had rejected it and 2 were undecided.

A resolution to ratify the amendment of 1865 passed the Senate on February 2, and the Assembly on February 3, 1865, in the Senate, 18 to 8, and in the Assembly, 72 to 40.

The fourteenth amendment was the first ratified in New York by resolution. Others were ratified by statute.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS.

(Delivered at the Dedication of the National Cemetery, November 19, 1863.)

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth. [An accurate version of the Gettysburg Address as revised by Mr. Lincoln and printed in "Autographs of Our Country's Authors," Baltl., 1864.]

EVERETT AND LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG.

(From a speech by the late U. S. Sen. J. J. Ingalls of Kansas.)

"Abraham Lincoln and Edward Everett spoke at the dedication of the National Cemetery at Gettysburg, November 19, 1863. The place, the occasion, the audience, the associations were in the highest degree inspiring. Everett was an orator of deserved renown, with copious and glittering vocabulary, graceful rhetoric, strong, cultivated mind, elegant scholarship, a rich flexible voice, and noble presence. His address occupied two hours in delivery, and was worthy of the speaker and his theme. At its close Lincoln rose slowly on the platform of the pavilion. From an ancient case he drew a pair of steel-framed spectacles, with bows clasping upon the temples in front of the ears, and adjusted them with deliberation. He took from his breast pocket a few sheets of foolscap, which he unfolded and held in both hands. From this manuscript, in low tones, without modulation or emphasis, he read 266 words and sat down before his surprised, perplexed and disappointed auditors were aware that he had really begun. It left no impression, so it was said, except mild consternation and a mortified sense of failure.

"None supposed that one of the great orations of the world had been pronounced in the five minutes which Mr. Lincoln occupied in reading his remarks. But the studied, elaborate, and formal speech of Everett has been forgotten, while the few sonorous and solemn sentences of Lincoln will remain so long as constitutional liberty abides among men. Henceforth, whoever recalls the Battle of Gettysburg . . . will hear above the thunder of the reverberating guns, above the exulting shouts of the victors and the despairing, 'that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.' "

THE CAPITOL AT WASHINGTON.

THE Capitol is situated in latitude 38° 53′ 20″.4 north and longitude 77° 00′ 35″.7 west from Greenwich It fronts east, and stands on a plateau eighty-eight feet above the level of the Potomac. The entire length of the building from north to south is seven hundred and fifty-one feet four inches, and its greatest dimension from east to west three hundred and fifty feet. The area covered by the building is 153,112 square feet. The dome of the original central building was constructed of wood, covered with copper. This was replaced in 1856 by the present structure of cast iron. It was completed in 1865. The entire weight of iron used is 8,909,200 pounds. The dome is crowned by a bronze statue of Freedom, which is nineteen feet six inches high and weighs 14,985 pounds. It was modelled by Crawford. The height of the dome above the base line of the east front is two hundred and eighty-seven feet five inches. The height from the top of the balustrade of the building is two hundred and seventeen feet eleven inches. The greatest diameter at the base is one hundred and thirty-five feet five inches.

The rotunda is ninety-seven feet six inches in diameter, and its height from the floor to the top of the canopy is one hundred and eighty feet three inches. The Senate Chamber is one hundred and thirteen feet three inches in length, by eighty feet three inches in width, and thirty-six feet in height. The galleries will accommodate one thousand persons. The Representatives' Hall is one hundred and thirty-nine feet in length, by ninety-three feet in width, and thirty-six feet in height. The southeast cornerstone of the original building was laid September 18, 1793, by President Washington with Masonic ceremonies. The corner-stone of the extensions was laid July 4, 1851, by President Fillmore. The room now occupied by the Supreme Court was, until 1859, occupied as the Senate Chamber. Previous to that time the court occupied the room immediately beneath, now used as a law library.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

THE site was selected by President Washington and Major Peter Charles L'Enfant when they laid out Washington, 1791; architect, James Hoban of Dublin; plans chosen by competition closed July 15, 1792. Cornerstone laid October 13, 1792. First occupation—President and Mrs. John Adams, November, 1800. Burned by British in 1814. Mr. Hoben superintended the restoration. First White House appropriation from U. S. Treasury, April 24, 1800, $15,000, for furniture. The first appropriation for repairs, $15,000, March 3, 1807. Congress appropriated $8,137 for enlarging "the offices west of the President's House," 1819. South Portico finished 1823; cost $19,000. East Room finished and furnished by appropriation made in 1826. North Portico added; cost $24,769.25, 1829. Original plans always followed. First heated by gas, 1848; system of heating and ventilation installed, 1853.

A thorough overhauling and restoration was made under direction of New York architects, McKim, Mead & White, during incumbency of President Roosevelt, June 20, Septem er 29, 1902. Congress appropriated in all $475,445; the architects returning an unexpended balance of $7,906.10

The principal apartments in the White House are officially designated: the Red Room, Blue Room, Green Room, State Dining Room, Family Dining Room, and Usher's Lobby. There are a Family Floor, a main stairway, and a private staircase and elevators.

The dimensions of the White House, in 1840, were: length or frontage, 170 feet; depth or width, 86 feet. The mansion was called "White House" because it was built of white free stone. Architect Hoban had modeled the structure after the palace of the Duke of Leinster. The original cost was defrayed out of the sale of lands donated by Maryland and Virginia.

NOTES TO THE TABLES OF THE PRESIDENTS.

* Monroe abandoned the profession of law when a young man, and was afterward, and until his election, always holding public office. † Jackson called himself a South Carolinian, and his biographer, Kendall, recorded his birthplace in Lancaster Co., S. C.; but Parton has published documentary evidence to show that Jackson was born in Union Co., N. C., less than a quarter mile from the South Carolina line. ‡ Or of departure from college.

§ Widows. Their maiden names are in parentheses. ¶ She was the divorced wife of Captain Robards. (a) The Democratic party of to-day claims lineal descent from the first Republican party, and President Jefferson as its founder. (b) Political parties were disorganized at the time of the election of John Quincy Adams. He claimed to be a Republican, but his doctrines were decidedly Federalistic. The opposition to his administration took the name of Democrats, and elected Jackson President.

(c) Randall, the biographer of Jefferson, declares that he was a believer in Christianity, although not a sectarian. (d) While President Johnson was not a church-member, he was a Christian believer. His wife was a Methodist.

Washington's first inauguration was in New York, and his second in Philadelphia. Adams was inaugurated in Philadelphia, and Jefferson and the Presidents following elected by the people, in the city of Washington. Arthur took the Presidential oath of office first in New York City. John Adams and Jefferson died on the same day, the Fourth of July, 1826, and Monroe died on the Fourth of July five years later. John Quincy Adams was a Representative and Andrew Johnson a Senator in Congress after the expiration of their Presidential terms, and both died while holding those offices. Tyler was a Representative in the Confederate Congress from Virginia, and died in office.

Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley were assassinated while in office. Lincoln at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D. C., April 14, 1865, from a pistol shot fired by John Wilkes Booth, who was killed near Fredericksburg Va., April 26, 1865, by Sergeant Boston Corbett. Garfield was shot in the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot Washington, D. C., July 2, 1881, and died at Elberon, Long Branch, N. J., September 19, 1881. The assassin was Charles Jules Guiteau, who was hanged at Washington, D. C., June 30, 1882. McKinley was shot twice September 6, 1901, while in the Temple of Music of the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., and died from his wounds at the home of John G. Milburn, Buffalo, September 14, 1901. The assassin was Louis Czolgosz, who was electrocuted at Auburn State Prison, New York, October 29, 1901.

Jackson was shot at in the Capitol at Washington, D. C., January 29, 1835, by a house painter named Richard Lawrence, escaping because the pistol of the assassin missed fire. Ex-President Roosevelt was shot and wounded by John Schrank, an insane man, at Milwaukee, Wis., October 14, 1912.

Cleveland after taking the oath as President, kissed the open Bible, his lips touching Psalm cxii verses 5-10, inclusive. Garfield's first act after taking the oath was to kiss his mother.

The sixth President was the son of the second President, and the twenty-third President was the grandson of the ninth President. William Henry Harrison was the eighth and Benjamin Harrison the tenth in descent from Pocahontas and John Rolfe. Lincoln was the first President wearing a full beard. Grant the first wearing a mustache. Buchanan and Cleveland were bachelors when they entered the White House as Presidents, but Cleveland surrendered during his first term. Washington, Monroe, Pierce and Hayes were born on Friday. J. Q. Adams, Pierce and Garfield were inaugurated on Friday. Tyler, Polk and Pierce died on Friday. Lincoln was assassinated on Friday.

There were remarkable coincidences in the lives of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis. Both were born in Kentucky; Lincoln in 1809, Davis in 1808. Both removed from their native state in childhood, Lincoln to the Northwest, Davis to the Southwest. Lincoln was a Captain of Volunteers and Davis a Second Lieutenant of Regulars in the Black Hawk war of 1832. They began their political careers the same year, 1844, Lincoln being a Presidential Elector for Clay, and Davis for Polk. They were elected to Congress about the same time, 1845 and 1846. They were called to preside over their respective governments the same year and within a few days: Davis, February 8, 1861; Lincoln, March 4, 1861.

Washington, Monroe, and Jackson were soldiers in the Revolutionary war; Jackson, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, and Buchanan in the war of 1812-15; Lincoln in the Black Hawk war; Taylor, Pierce, and Grant in the Mexican war; Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, B. Harrison, and McKinley in the Civil War, and Roosevelt was in the war with Spain. Adams and Jefferson were signers of the Declaration of Independence, and Washington and Madison of the Constitution.

Grant was christened Hiram Ulysses and Cleveland, Stephen Grover. W. H. Harrison was the oldest man elected to the Presidency, and Roosevelt the youngest, Grant being the next youngest by six months. Cleveland was the only President married in the White House, and his second daughter the only President's child born therein. Monroe's daughter (Mrs. Gouverneur), Tyler's daughter (Mrs. Waller), Grant's daughter (Mrs. Sartoris), Roosevelt's daughter (Mrs. Longworth) and Wilson's daughters, Jessie (Mrs. Sayre) and Eleanor (Mrs. McAdoo) were the only children of Presidents married therein. Wives of Tyler, Benjamin Harrison, and Wilson died in the White House. John Tyler was father of the largest family, eight sons and six daughters. Eight Presidents: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, and Wilson were Virginians by birth. Six Presidents: Grant, Hayes, Garfield, B. Harrison, McKinley, and Taft, were Ohioans by birth.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION OF 1920.

THE Republican National Convention began at Chicago, June 8. United States Senator H. C. Lo of Massachusetts, was chosen Temporary and Permanent Chairman. There were 984 delegates; w delegates and alternates numbered 140. United States Senator J. E. Watson, of Indiana, was Chai of the Committee on Resolutions; E. B. Duffield, New Jersey, Chairman of Committee on Creden The entrances to the Coliseum were picketed at the opening sessions by members of the National Wom Party. A short meeting, with speeches by Mrs. M. H. McCarter of Kansas, and others, occurred Jun On June 10 the convention adopted the following platform:

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL PLATFORM, 1920.

The Republican Party, assembled in representative national convention, reaffirms its unyielding devotion to the Constitution of the United States, and to the guarantees of civil, political and religious liberty therein contained. It will resist all attempts to overthrow the foundations of the Government or to weaken the force of its controlling principles and ideals, whether these attempts be made in the form of international policy or domestic agitation.

For seven years the National Government has been controlled by the Democratic Party. During that period a war of unparalleled magnitude has shaken the foundations of civilization, decimated the population of Europe, and left in its train economic misery and suffering second only to the war itself.

The outstanding features of the Democratic Administration have been complete unpreparedness for war and complete unpreparedness for peace.

Unpreparedness for War.

Inexcusable failure to make timely preparation is the chief indictment against the Democratic Administration in the conduct of the war. Had not our associates protected us, both on land and sea, during the first twelve months of our participation, and furnished us to the very day of the armistice with munitions, planes and artillery, this failure would have been punished with disaster. It directly resulted in unnecessary losses to our gallant troops, in the imperilment of victory itself, and in an enormous waste of public fund literally poured into the breach created by gross neglect. To-day it is reflected in our huge tax burden an in the high cost of living.

Unpreparedness for Peace.

Peace found the Administration as unprepared for peace as war found it unprepared for war The vital needs of the country demanded the early and systematic return to a peace-time basis.

This called for vision, leadership and intelligent planning. All three have been lacking. While the country has been left to shift for itself, the Government has continued on a war-time basis. The Administration has not demobilized the army of place holders. It continued a method of financing which was indefensible during the period of reconstruction. It has used legislation passed to meet the emergency of war to continue its arbitrary and inquisitorial control over the life of the people in time of peace, and to carry confusion into industrial life. Under the despot's plea of necessity or superior wisdom, Executive usurpation of legislative and judicial functions still undermines our institutions. Eighteen months after the armistice with its war-time powers unabridged, its war-time departments undischarged, its war-time army of place holders still mobilized, the Administration continues to flounder helplessly.

The demonstrated incapacity of the Democratic Party has destroyed public confidence, weakened the authority of the Government, and produced a feeling of distrust and hesitation so universal as to increase enormously the difficulties of readjustment and to delay the return to normal conditions.

Never has our Nation been confronted with graver problems. The people are entitled to know in definite terms how the parties purpose solving these problems. To that end, the Republican Party declares its policies and programme to be as follows:

Constitutional Government.

We undertake to end Executive autocracy and to restore to the people their constitutional government.

The policies herein declared will be carried out by the Federal and State Governments, each acting within its constitutional powers.

Foreign Relations.

The foreign policy of the Administration has been founded upon no principle and directed by no definite conception of our Nation's rights and obligations. It has been humiliating to America and irritating to other nations, with the result that after a period of unexampled sacrifice, our motives are suspected, our moral influence impaired, and our Government stands discredited and friendless among the nations of the world

We favor a liberal and generous foreign policy founded upon definite moral and political principl characterized by a clear understanding of and a firm adherence to our own rights, and unfailing respect for the rights of others. We should afford full and adequate protection to the life, liberty, property and all international rights of every American citizen, and should require a proper respect for the American flag; but we should be equally careful to manifest a just regard for the rights of other nations. A scrupulous observance of our international engagements when lawfully assumed is essential to our own honor and self-respect, and the respect of other nations. Subject to a due regard for our international obligations, we should leave our country free to develop its civilization along lines most conducive to the happiness and welfare of its people, and to cast its influence on the side of justice and right should occasion require.

The ineffective policy of the present Administration in Mexican matters has been largely responsible for the continued loss of American lives in that country and upon our border; for the enormous loss of American and foreign property; for the lowering of American standards of morality and social relations with Mexicans, and for the bringing of American ideals of justice, national honor and political integrity into contempt and ridicule in Mexico and throughout the world.

The policy of wordy, futile written protests against the acts of Mexican officials, explained the following day by the President himself as being meaningless and not intended to be considered seriously, or enforced, has but added in degree to that contempt, and has earned for us the sneers and jeers of Mexican bandits, and added insult upon insult against our national honor and dignity.

We should not recognize any Mexican Government, unless it be a responsible Government willing and able to give sufficient guarantees that the lives and property of American citizens are respected and protected, that wrongs will be promptly corrected and just compensation will be made for injury sustained. The Republican Party pledges itself to a consistent, firm and effective policy toward Mexico that shall enforce respect for the American flag and that shall protect the rights of American citizens lawfully in Mexico to security of life and enjoyment of property in accordance with established principles of international law and our treaty rights.

The Republican Party is a sincere friend of the Mexican people. In its insistence upon the maintenance of order for the protection of American citizens within its borders a great service will be rendered the Mexican people themselves; for a continuation of present conditions means disaster to their interests and patriotic aspirations.

(b) Mandate for Armenia.

We condemn President Wilson for asking Congress to empower him to accept a mandate for Armenia. commend the Republican Senate for refusing the President's request to empower him to accept the mandate for Armenia. The acceptance of such mandate would throw the United States into the very maelstrom of European quarrels. According to the estimate of the Harbor Commission, organized by authority President Wilson, we would be called upon to send 59,000 American boys to police Armenia and to expend $276,000,000 in the first year and $756,000,000 in five years. This estimate is made upon the basis that we would have only roving bands to fight; but in case of serious trouble with the Turks or with Russia, a force exceeding 200,000 would be necessary.

No more striking illustration can be found of President Wilson's disregard of the lives of American boys or of American interests.

We deeply sympathize with the people of Armenia and stand ready to help them in all proper ways, but the Republican Party will oppose now and hereafter the acceptance of a mandate for any country in Europe or Asia.

(c) League of Nations.

The Republican Party stands for agreement among the nations to preserve the peace of the world. We believe that such an international association must be based upon international justice, and must provide methods which shall maintain the rule of public right by the development of law and the decision of impartial courts, and which shall secure instant and general international conference whenever peace shall be threatened by political action, so that the nations pledged to do and insist upon what is just and fair may exercise their influence and power for the prevention of war.

We believe that all this can be done without the compromise of national independence, without depriving the people of the United States in advance of the right to determine for themselves what is just and fair when the occasion arises, and without involving them as participants and not as peacemakers in a multitude of quarrels, the merits of which they are unable to judge.

The covenant signed by the President at Paris failed signally to accomplish this great purpose, and contains stipulations, not only intolerable for an independent people, but certain to produce the injustice, hostility, and controversy among nations which it proposed to prevent.

That covenant repudiated, to a degree wholly unnecessary and unjustifiable, the time-honored policies in favor of peace declared by Washington, Jefferson, and Monroe, and pursued by all American Administrations for more than a century, and it ignored the universal sentiment of America for generations past in favor of international law and arbitration, and it rested the hope of the future upon mere expediency and negotiation.

The unfortunate insistence of the President upon having his own way, without any change and without any regard to the opinions of a majority of the Senate, which shares with him in the treaty-making power, and the President's demand that the treaty should be ratified without any modification, created a situation in which Senators were required to vote upon their consciences and their oaths according to their judgment against the treaty as it was presented, or submit to the commands of a dictator in a matter where the authority and the responsibility under the Constitution were theirs, and not his.

The Senators performed their duty faithfully. We approve their conduct and honor their courage and fidelity. And we pledge the coming Republican Administration to such agreements with the other nations of the world as shall meet the full duty of America to civilization and humanity, in accordance with American ideals, and without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise its judgment and its power in favor of justice and peace.

Congress and Reconstruction.

Despite the unconstitutional and dictatorial course of the President and the partisan obstruction of the Democratic Congressional minority, the Republican majority has enacted a programme of constructive legislation which in great part, however, has been nullified by the vindictive vetoes of the President.

The Republican Congress has met the problems presented by the Administration's unpreparedness for peace. It has repealed the greater part of the vexatious war legislation. It has enacted a Transportation Act making possible the rehabilitation of the railroad systems of the country, the operation of which under the present Democratic Administration has been wasteful, extravagant and inefficient in the highest degree. The Transportation Act made provision for the peaceful settlement of wage disputes, partially nullified, however, by the President's delay in appointing the Wage Board created by the act. This delay precipitated the outlaw railroad strike.

We stopped the flood of public treasure, recklessly poured into the lap of an inept Shipping Board, and laid the foundations for the creation of a great merchant marine; we took from the incompetent Democratic Administration the administration of the telegraph and telephone lines of the country and returned them to private ownership; we reduced the cost of postage and increased the pay of the postal employés—the poorest paid of all public servants; we provided pensions for superannuated and retired civil servants; and for an increase in pay of soldiers and sailors. We reorganized the army on a peace footing, and provided for the maintenance of a powerful and efficient navy.

The Republican Congress established by law a permanent Woman's Bureau in the Department of Labor; we submitted to the country the constitutional amendment for Woman Suffrage, and furnished twenty-nine of the thirty-five legislatures which have ratified it to date.

Legislation for the relief of the consumers of print paper, for the extension of the powers of the Government under the Food Control Act, for broadening the scope of the War Risk Insurance Act, better provision for the dwindling number of aged veterans of the Civil War and for the better support of the maimed and injured of the great war, and for making practical the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, has been enacted by the Republican Congress.

We passed an oil leasing and water power bill to unlock for the public good the great pent-up resources of the country; we have sought to check the profligacy of the Administration, to realize upon the assets of the Government and to husband the revenues derived from taxation. The Republicans in Congress have been responsible for cuts in the estimates for Government expenditure of nearly $3,000,000,000 since the signing of the armistice.

We enacted a national executive budget law; we strengthened the Federal Reserve Act to permit banks to lend needed assistance to farmers; we authorized financial incorporations to develop export trade; and finally, amended the rules of the Senate and House, which will reform evils in procedure and guarantee more efficient and responsible government.

Agriculture.

The farmer is the backbone of the Nation. National greatness and economic independence demand a population distributed between industry and the farm, and sharing on equal terms the prosperity which is wholly dependent upon the efforts of both. Neither can prosper at the expense of the other without inviting joint disaster.

The crux of the present agricultural condition lies in prices, labor and credit.

The Republican Party believes that this condition can be improved by: Practical and adequate farm representation in the appointment of governmental officials and commissions; the right to form co-operative associations for marketing their products, and protection against discrimination; the scientific study of agricultural prices and farm production costs at home and abroad with a view to reducing the frequency of abnormal fluctuations; the uncens cation of such reports; the authorization of associations for the extension of personal credit; a nat quiry on the co-ordination of rail, water and motor transportation with adequate facilities for receiving, handling and marketing food; the encouragement of our export trade, an end to unnecessary price-fixing and ill considered efforts arbitrarily to reduce prices of farm products which invariably result to the disadvantage both of producer and consumer; and the encouragement of the production and importation of fertilizing material and of its extensive use.

The Federal Farm Loan Act should be so administered as to facilitate the acquisition of farm land by those desiring to become owners and proprietors and thus minimize the evils of farm tenantry, and to furnish such long time credits as farmers may need to finance adequately their larger and long time production operations.

Industrial Relations.

There are two different conceptions of the relations of capital and labor. The one is contractual and emphasizes the diversity of interests of employer and employé. The other is that of co-partnership in a common task.

We recognize the justice of collective bargaining as a means of promoting good will, and more harmonious relations between employers and employés, and realizing the true ends of justice.

The strike or the lockout, as a means of settling industrial disputes inflicts such loss and suffering community as to justify Government initiative to reduce its frequency and limit its consequences.

We deny the right to strike against the Government; but the rights and interests of all Government employés must be safeguarded by impartial laws and tribunals.

In public utilities we favor the establishment of an impartial tribunal to make an investigation of the facts and to render a decision to the end that there may be no organized interruption of service necessary to the lives, health and welfare of the people. The decisions of the tribunals should be morally but not legally binding, and an informed public sentiment be relied on to secure their acceptance. The tribunals, howe should refuse to accept jurisdiction except for the purpose of investigation, as long as the public servi interrupted. For public utilities we favor the type of tribunal provided for in the Transportation Act of 1920.

In private industries we do not advocate the principle of compulsory arbitration, but we favor impartial commissions and better facilities for voluntary mediation, conciliation and arbitration, supplemented by that full publicity which will enlist the influence of an aroused public opinion. The Government should take the initiative in inviting the establishment of tribunals or commissions for the purpose of voluntary arbitration and of investigation of disputed issues.

We demand the exclusion from interstate commerce of the products of convict labor

National Economy.

A Republican Congress reduced the estimates submitted by the Administration almost $3,000,000,000. Greater economies could have been effected had it not been for the stubborn refusal of the Administration to co-operate with Congress in an economy programme. The universal demand for an executive budget is a recognition of the incontrovertible fact that leadership and sincere assistance on the part of the executive departments are essential to effective economy and constructive retrenchment.

The Overman act invested the President of the United States with all the authority and power necessary to restore the Federal Government to a normal peace basis and to reorganize, retrench and demobilize The dominant fact is that eighteen months after the armistice, the United States Government is still a war-time basis, and the expenditure programme of the Executive reflects war-time extravagance than rigid peace-time economy.

As an example of the failure to retrench which has characterized the post-war policy of tion, we cite the fact that not including the War and Navy Departments, the executive departments and establishments at Washington actually record an increase subsequent to the armistice of 2184 emplo The net decrease in payroll costs contained in the 1921 demands submitted by the Administration is only per cent. under that of 1920. The annual expenses of the Federal Government can be reduced hundreds millions of dollars without impairing the efficiency of the public service.

We pledge ourselves to a carefully planned readjustment to a peace-time basis and to a policy of rigid economy, to the better co-ordination of departmental activities, to the elimination of unnecessary officials and employés, and to the raising of the standard of individual efficiency.

The Executive Budget.

We congratulate the Republican Congress on the enactment of a law providing for the establishm an executive budget as a necessary instrument for a sound and businesslike administration of the natio finances; and we condemn the veto of the President which defeated this great financial reform.

Reorganization of Federal Departments and Bureaus.

We advocate a thorough investigation of the present organization of the Federal departments an bureaus, with a view to securing consolidation, a more businesslike distribution of functions, the elimination of duplication, delays and overlapping of work, and the establishment of an up-to-date and efficient administrative organization.

War Powers of the President.

The President clings tenaciously to his autocratic war-time powers. His veto of the resolution declaring peace and his refusal to sign the bill repealing war-time legislation, no longer necessary, evidence his determination not to restore to the Nation and to the States the form of government provided for by the Constitution. This usurpation is intolerable and deserves the severest condemnation.

Taxation.

The burden of taxation imposed upon the American people is staggering; but in presenting a true statement of the situation we must face the fact that, while the character of the taxes can and should be changed, an early reduction of the amount of revenue to be raised is not to be expected. The next Republican Administration will inherit from its Democratic predecessor a floating indebtedness of over $3,000,000,000, the prompt liquidation of which is demanded by sound financial considerations. Moreover, the whole fiscal policy of the Government must be deeply influenced by the necessity of meeting obligations in excess of $5,000,000,000 which mature in 1923. But sound policy equally demands the early accomplishment of that real reduction of the tax burden which may be achieved by substituting simple for complex tax laws and procedure; prompt and certain determination of the tax liability for delay and uncertainty; tax laws which do not, for tax laws which do, excessively mulct the consumer or needlessly repress enterprise and thrift.

We advocate the issuance of a simplified form of income return; authorizing the Treasury Department to make changes in regulations effective only from the date of their approval; empowering the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the consent of the taxpayer, to make final and conclusive settlements of tax claims and assessments barring fraud, and the creation of a Tax Board consisting of at least three representatives of the taxpaying public and the heads of the principal divisions of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to act as a standing committee on the simplification of forms, procedure and law, and to make recommendations to the Congress.

Banking and Currency.

The fact is that the war, to a great extent, was financed by a policy of inflation through certificate borrowing from the banks, and bonds issued at artificial rates sustained by the low discount rates established by the Federal Reserve Board. The continuance of this policy since the armistice lays the Administration open to severe criticism. Almost up to the present time, the practices of the Federal Reserve Board as to credit control have been frankly dominated by the convenience of the Treasury. The results have been a greatly increased war cost, a serious loss to the millions of people who in good faith bought Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes at par, and extensive post-war speculation, followed to-day by a restricted credit for legitimate industrial expansion. As a matter of public policy, we urge all banks to give credit preference to essential industries.

The Federal Reserve System should be free from political influence, which is quite as important as its independence of domination by financial combinations.

The High Cost of Living.

The cause of the "High Cost of Living" has been first and foremost a fifty per cent. depreciation in the purchasing power of the dollar, due to a gross expansion of our currency and credit. Reduced production, income taxation, swollen profits and the increased demand for goods arising from a fictitious but real buying power have been contributing causes in a greater or less degree.

We condemn the unsound fiscal policies of the Democratic Administration which have brought these things to pass, and their attempts to impute the consequences to minor and secondary causes. Much of the injury wrought is irreparable. There is no short way out, and we decline to deceive the people with vain promises or quack remedies. But as the political party that throughout its history has stood for honest money and sound finance, we pledge ourselves to earnest and consistent attack upon the high cost of living by rigorous avoidance of further inflation in our government borrowing, by courageous and intelligent deflation of over-expanded credit and currency, by encouragement of heightened production of goods and services, by prevention of unreasonable profits, by exercise of public economy and stimulation of private thrift and by revision of war-imposed taxes unsuited to peace-time economy.

Profiteering.

We condemn the Democratic Administration for failure impartially to enforce the anti-profiteering laws enacted by the Republican Congress.

Railroads.

We are opposed to government ownership and operation or employee operation of the railroads. In view of the conditions prevailing in this country, the experience of the last two years, and the conclusions which may fairly be drawn from an observation of the transportation systems of other countries, it is clear that adequate transportation service both for the present and future can be furnished more certainly, economically and efficiently through private ownership and operation under proper regulation and control.

There should be no speculative profit in rendering the service of transportation; but in order to do justice to the capital already invested in railway enterprises, to restore railway credit, to induce future investment at a reasonable rate, and to furnish enlarged facilities to meet the requirements of the constantly increasing development and distribution, a fair return upon actual value of the railway property used in transportation should be made reasonably sure, and at the same time provide constant employment to those engaged in transportation service, with fair hours and favorable working conditions, at wages or compensation at least equal to those prevailing in similar lines of industry.

We endorse the Transportation Act of 1920 enacted by the Republican Congress as a most constructive movement.

Waterways.

We declare it to be our policy to encourage and develop water transportation service and facilities in connection with the commerce of the United States.

Regulation of Industry and Commerce.

We approve in general the existing Federal legislation against monopoly and combinations in restraint of trade, but since the known certainty of a law is the safety of all, we advocate such amendment as will provide American business men with better means of determining in advance whether a proposed combination is or is not unlawful. The Federal Trade Commission, under a Democratic Administration, has not accomplished the purpose for which it was created. This Commission properly organized and its duties efficiently administered should afford protection to the public and legitimate business interests. There should be no persecution of honest business, but to the extent that circumstances warrant we pledge ourselves to strengthen the law against unfair practices.

We pledge the party to an immediate resumption of trade relations with every country with which we are at peace.

International Trade and Tariff.

The uncertain and unsettled condition of international balances, the abnormal economic and trade situation of the world, and the impossibility of forecasting accurately even the near future, preclude the formulation of a definite programme to meet conditions a year hence. But the Republican Party reaffirms its belief in the protective principle and pledges itself to a revision of the tariff as soon as conditions shall make it necessary for the preservation of the home market for American labor, agriculture and industry.

Merchant Marine.

The national defense and our foreign commerce require a merchant marine of the best type of modern ship flying the American flag, manned by American seamen, owned by private capital and operated by private energy. We endorse the sound legislation recently enacted by the Republican Congress that will insure the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine.

We favor the application of the Workmen's Compensation Acts to the merchant marine.

We recommend that all ships engaged in coastwise trade and all vessels of the American merchant marine shall pass through the Panama Canal without payment of tolls.

Immigration.

The standard of living and the standard of citizenship of a nation are its most precious possessions, and the preservation and elevation of those standards is the first duty of our government. The immigration policy of the United States should be such as to insure that the number of foreigners in the country at any time shall not exceed that which can be assimilated with reasonable rapidity, and to favor immigrants whose standards are similar to ours.

The selective tests that are at present applied should be improved by requiring a higher physical standard, a more complete exclusion of mental defectives and of criminals, and a more effective inspection applied as near the source of immigration as possible, as well as at the port of entry. Justice to the foreigner and to ourselves demands provision for the guidance, protection and better economic distribution of our alien population. To facilitate government supervision, all aliens should be required to register annually until they become naturalized.

The existing policy of the United States for the practical exclusion of Asiatic immigrants is sound and should be maintained.

Naturalization.

There is urgent need of improvement in our Naturalization Law. No alien should become a citi until he has become genuinely American, and adequate tests for determining the alien's fitness for Ameri citizenship should be provided for by law.

We advocate, in addition, the independent naturalization of married women. An American wom resident in the United States, should not lose her citizenship by marriage to an alien.

Free Speech and Alien Agitation.

We demand that every American citizen shall enjoy the ancient and constitutional right of free spec free press and free assembly and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his d chosen representatives; but no man may advocate resistance to the law, and no man may advocate viol overthrow of the Government.

Aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States are not entitled of right to liberty of agitation direc against the government or American institutions.

Every government has the power to exclude and deport those aliens who constitute a real menace peaceful existence. But in view of the large numbers of people affected by the immigration acts and th of the vigorous malpractice of the Departments of Justice and Labor, an adequate public hearing befor competent administrative tribunal should be assured to all.

Lynching.

We urge Congress to consider the most effective means to end lynching in this country which contin to be a terrible blot on our American civilization.

Public Roads and Highways.

We favor liberal appropriations in co-operation with the States for the construction of highways, wh will bring about a reduction in transportation costs, better marketing of farm products, imp rural postal delivery, as well as meet the needs of military defense.

In determining the proportion of Federal aid for road construction among the State taxation to the respective States by the setting apart of large portions of their area as fore should be considered as a controlling factor.

Conservation.

Conservation is a Republican policy. It began with the passage of the Reclamatio President Roosevelt. The recent passage of the Coal, Oil and Phosphate Leasing Act by a Re and the enactment of the Waterpower Bill fashioned in accordance with the same princ landmarks in the development of the conservation of our national resources. We deno the President to sign the Waterpower Bill, passed after ten years of controversy. The Re taken an especially honorable part in saving our national forests and in the effort to est forest policy. Our most pressing conservation question relates to our forests. We are usin sources faster than they are being renewed. The result is to raise unduly the cost of forest pro sumers and especially farmers, who use more than half the lumber produced in America, and in the end create a timber famine. The Federal Government, the States and private interests must unite in devis means to meet the menace.

Reclamation.

We favor a fixed and comprehensive policy of reclamation to increase national wealth and production We recognize in the development of reclamation through Federal action with its increase of product and taxable wealth a safeguard for the nation.

We commend to Congress a policy to reclaim lands and the establishment of a fixed national policy development of natural resources in relation to reclamation through the now designated government agenc

Army and Navy.

We feel the deepest pride in the fine courage, the resolute endurance, the gallant spirit of the offic and men of our Army and Navy in the World War. They were in all ways worthy of the best traditi of the nation's defenders, and we pledge ourselves to proper maintenance of the military and naval est lishments upon which our national security and dignity depend.

The Service Men.

We hold in imperishable remembrance the valor and the patriotism of the soldiers and sailors of Amer who fought in the great war for human liberty, and we pledge ourselves to discharge to the fullest the o gations which a grateful nation justly should fulfill, in appreciation of the services rendered by its defend on sea and on land.

Republicans are not ungrateful. Throughout their history they have shown their gratitude tow the nation's defenders. Liberal legislation for the care of the disabled and infirm and their dependents ever marked Republican policy toward the soldier and sailor of all the wars in which our country has p ticipated. The present Congress has appropriated generously for the disabled of the World War.

The amounts already applied and authorized for the fiscal year 1920-21 for this purpose reached the s pendous sum of $1,120,571,893. This legislation is significant of the party's purpose in generously car for the maimed and disabled men of the recent war.

Civil Service.

We renew our repeated declaration that the civil service law shall be thoroughly and honestly e and extended wherever practicable. The recent action of Congress in enacting a comprehensive e retirement law and in working out a comprehensive employment and wage policy that will guarant and just treatment to the army of government workers, and in centralizing the administration of and progressive employment policy in the hands of the Civil Service Commission is worthy of all p

Postal Service.

We condemn the present Administration for its destruction of the efficiency of the postal service and telegraph and telephone service when controlled by the government and for its failure to properly compens employees whose expert knowledge is essential to the proper conduct of the affairs of the postal syste We commend the Republican Congress for the enactment of legislation increasing the pay of postal emp ees, who up to that time were the poorest paid in the government service.

Woman Suffrage.

We welcome women into full participation in the affairs of government and the activities of the publican Party. We earnestly hope that Republican Legislature in States which have not yet acted on Suffrage Amendment will ratify the amendment to the end that all the women of the nation of voting ag participate in the election of 1920 which is so important to the welfare of our country.

Social Progress.

The supreme duty of the Nation is the conservation of human resources through an enlightened m ure of social and industrial justice. Although the Federal jurisdiction over social problems is limited, t ıffect the welfare and interest of the Nation as a whole. We pledge the Republican Party to the solution ɔf these problems through National and State legislation in accordance with the best progressive thought ɔf the country.

Education and Health.

We endorse the principle of Federal aid to the States for the purposes of vocational and agricultural ıraining.

Wherever Federal money is devoted to education, such education must be so directed as to awaken in ;he youth the spirit of America and a sense of patriotic duty to the United States.

A thorough system of physical education for all children up to the age of nineteen, including adequate ıealth supervision and instruction, would remedy conditions revealed by the draft and would add to the ɔconomic and industrial strength of the Nation. National leadership and stimulation will be necessary to nduce the States to adopt a wise system of physical training.

The public health activities of the Federal Government are scattered through numerous departments bureaus, resulting in inefficiency, duplication and extravagance. We advocate a greater centralizaı of the Federal functions, and in addition urge the better co-ordination of the work of the Federal, State ıd local health agencies.

Child Labor.

The Republican Party stands for a Federal child labor law and for its rigid enforcement. If the presıut law be found unconstitutional or ineffective, we shall seek other means to enable Congress to prevent he evils of child labor.

Women in Industry.

Women have special problems of employment which make necessary special study. We commend Conɔress for the permanent establishment of the Women's Bureau in the United States Department of Labor ɔ serve as a source of information to the States and to Congress.

inciple of equal pay for equal service should be applied throughout all branches of the Federal ' which women are employed.

aid for vocational training should take into consideration the special aptitudes and needs of ers.

ıd Federal legislation to limit the hours of employment of women engaged in intensive induct of which enters into interstate commerce.

Housing.

shortage has not only compelled careful study of ways of stimulating building, but it has ef the unsatisfactory character of the housing accommodations of large numbers of the incities. A nation of home owners is the best guarantee of the maintenance of those prin-, law and order upon which our Government is founded. Both National and State Govern-. encourage in all proper ways the acquiring of homes by our citizens. The United States Govrnment should make available the valuable information on housing and town planning collected during the war. This information should be kept up to date and made currently available.

Hawaii.

For Hawaii we recommend Federal assistance in Americanizing and educating their greatly dispro-ıortionate foreign population; home rule; and the rehabilitation of the Hawaiian race.

Pointing to its history and relying on its fundamental principles, we declare that the Republican Party ıas the genius, courage and constructive ability to end executive usurpation and restore constitutional government; to fulfil our world obligations without sacrificing our national independence; to raise the national tandards of education, health and general welfare; to re-establish a peace-time administration and to subtitute economy and efficiency for extravagance and chaos; to restore and maintain the national credit; ɔ reform unequal and burdensome taxes; to free business from arbitrary and unnecessary official control; o suppress disloyalty without the denial of justice; to repel the arrogant challenge of any class and to mainain a government of all the people as contrasted with government for some of the people; and finally, to allay ınrest, suspicion and strife, and to secure the co-operation and unity of all citizens in the solution of the omplex problems of the day, to the end that our country, happy and prosperous, proud of its past, sure f itself and of its institutions, may look forward with confidence to the future.

HARDING'S SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE.

Senator Harding, in accepting, at Marion, Ohio., July 22, 1920, the Republican Presidential nomination, said: "I promise you formal and effective peace as quickly as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican Executive to sign. Then we may turn to our readjustment at home and proceed deliberately and reflectively to that hoped for world relationship which shall satisfy both conscience and aspirations and still hold us free from menacing involvement. I can hear in the call of conscience an insistent voice for largely reduced armaments throughout the world, with attending reduction of burdens upon peace loving humanity. We wish to give of American influence and example; we must give of American leadership to that invaluable accomplishment. I can speak unreservedly of the American aspirations and the Republican committal for an association of nations, co-operating in sublime accord, to attain and preserve peace through justice rather than force, determined to add to security through international law, to clarified that no misconstruction can be possible without affronting world honor."

He said the League was intended for world super-government, adding: "It is better to be the free and disinterested agent of international justice and advancing civilization with the covenant of conscience than be shackled by a written compact which surrenders our freedom of action and gives a military alliance the right to proclaim America's duty to the world. No surrender of rights to a world council or its military alliance, no assumed mandatory, however appealing, ever shall summon the sons of this Republic to war. Their supreme sacrifice shall only be asked for America and its call of honor. There is a sanctity in that right we will not delegate.

"With a Senate advising as the Constitution contemplates, I would hopefully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a willing participant in the consecration of nations to a new relationship, to commit the moral forces of the world, America included, to peace and international justice, still leaving America free, independent and self-reliant, but offering friendship to all the world."

He promised, if elected, to enforce the National Prohibition Amendment. He asserted belief in America as the greatest maritime nation. He favors, he said, "a small army, but the best in the world." He urged established standards for immigration which are concerned with the future citizenship of the Republic, not with race man power in industry.

Gov. Coolidge's speech of acceptance of the Vice Presidential nomination was made at Northampton, Mass., July 27, 1920

NEW YORK STATE REPUBLICAN PLATFORMS, 1920.

Two platforms were adopted by the New York State Republicans in 1920—the one, on national issues, at the convention at Carnegie Hall, New York City, Feb. 19-20; the other, on State issues, at the unofficial convention at Saratoga Springs, July 27-28.

The Carnegie Hall platform favored "the immediate ratification of the pending Treaty of Peace, with such distinct reservations and declarations as shall make it clear to all the world that the United States retains its unconditioned right to withdraw from the League of Nations on proper notice; that the United States assumes no obligation, either legal or moral, to send American soldiers or sailors for service abroad unless the Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional power, shall so authorize and direct; that the Monroe Doctrine is protected both in letter and in spirit; that no foreign power or council of foreign powers shall have any control whatsoever over the domestic policies of the United States; and that the Government and the people of the United States shall not be drawn by the operation of Part XIII. of the treaty, the so-called labor clauses, into the net spread by International Socialism."

The platform favored Woman Suffrage, blamed high prices on currency inflation and bank credits, denounced Bolshevism; urged labor arbitration bodies, favored a Federal budget system and a protective tariff, opposed Government ownership of railroads, declared for Federal aid to the American merchant marine, denounced the Federal Trade Commission, and spoke for a "small standing army with a trained citizen reserve," subject only to the call of Congress, in war, and trained by the United States, with citizens sharing in control.

THE SARATOGA PLATFORM.

The Saratoga platform followed the lines of the National Democratic platform on general issues, but dealt largely with State issues. It charged discrimination by the Democratic National Administration against the Empire State "in the levying of taxes, in the distribution of coal, in attempting to derive revenue from the use of water power at Niagara Falls and to use that revenue derived therefrom for the benefit of other States. The farmer of the State has been discriminated against and prices have been fixed on his produce while the sugar planted in Louisiana has been allowed exorbitant profits and the cotton grower of the South has been free to charge whatever prices he saw fit. Sectionalism in our Government should cease." The platform also charged the Democratic National Administration with unduly favoring Southern ports in commerce.

These things were urged: Redemption of real estate mortgages from the State Income Tax; exemption from taxation of new housing construction; co-operative organizations of consumers, as well as farmers; exemption of agriculture from daylight saving; enforcement of the Volstead act; increase of State hospital accommodations; industry and education for prisoners; cheaper highway construction; return of the Erie Canal to State control; State control of water power; home rule for cities and villages; no abolishment of the State Constabulary.

DIRECT PRIMARIES.

Of direct primaries the Saratoga platform said: "We believe in responsible party government and representative party leadership. We believe that the method of selecting party candidates and party leaders should be such as to strengthen party leadership, fix party responsibility and insure the performance of party pledges. We, therefore, denounce the Levy Election Law passed by Tammany Hall and in large part held unconstitutional by the courts. This law favors machine-ridden Tammany Hall, where individual initiative is destroyed and primary contests are suppressed. It weakens a party of independent thought because it furnishes no machinery for crystallizing party opinion or providing party initiative, but, on the contrary, directly promotes haphazard and unnecessary bitter primary fights. The direct primary principle can be well applied in the smaller units and in the choice of delegates. But a State-wide primary not only does not insure an expression of the will of the majority, but by its cumbrous and expensive machinery often thwarts it. Thus believing, we favor the selection of candidates voted for by the whole State and Justices of the Supreme Court by conventions of delegates chosen by the enrolled voters of the party at direct primaries."

POLITICAL LIBERTY.

On political liberty, the platform said: "Recent investigations have shown that there are in this State groups of individuals which advocate changes in our Government by means of armed attacks upon public officials, and that there are also groups which advocate industrial action, whereby the stoppage of transportation and distribution of food, fuel and other necessities of life is to be used as a means of forcing unlawfully a change in our form of government. The Republican Party believes in the salutary provisions of article 1, section 8 of the Constitution of the State of New York, which provides: Every citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.' Believing in that constitutional provision, the Republican Party stands to-day as it always has, for free speech and the right of every individual to advocate any change in government, provided always such change is to be brought about by the ballot only. We believe that those persons who urge and advocate a change in our government by force, violence or unlawful means should be dealt with as enemies of the Government.

"Our country has always been a haven for the oppressed. We welcome immigrants to its shores. They come to an established government and they can only expect to enter on the terms on which we are ready to receive them. The immigrant who desires to become a genuine, wholehearted American citizen should be educated and encouraged, and as a means to this end we heartily indorse the pending constitutional amendment for the educational qualification of voters. Those who come to plot or to bring about disorder should be dealt with in a vigorous and summary manner. This country is no place for those who threaten our liberties as guaranteed by our Constitution.

"We urge vigorous measures to counteract the influence and prevent the spread of undemocratic doctrines such as Socialism, Bolshevism, Sovietism, Anarchism, Communism or Socialistic Democracy. We especially urge the safeguarding of our public schools and those other institutions of learning over which the State has control against teaching which shall foster disloyalty. Believing that nearly all of the great problems which confront us to-day are largely caused by the specious doctrine of Internationalism, we call upon the people of our State to support the Americanism which created and thus far has preserved our Nation. In the name of our democratic Republic and in the name of those who fought for independence and union here and for freedom throughout the world we pledge allegiance to those fundamental principles of liberty and justice which alone can maintain and protect our State and Nation."

WOMEN'S WORK.

The platform said of women's work: "We believe that legislation regarding hours and time of work should be based on a comparison of industrial strain rather than put on the flat hour or sex basis. We are opposed to laws which discriminate against the right of women who seek to earn their living in competition with men; but we favor legislation which will adequately protect children and which will adequately protect the health of women in industry based upon a careful study of the effect of the different kinds of industry on women. The Republican Party has consistently taken the position recently approved by the International Suffrage Congress against discriminatory legislation on account of sex. It believes that men and women should have equal rights to equal opportunity regardless of sex."

SINGLE TAX CONVENTION AND PLATFORM, 1920.

THE Single Tax Party, which broke away from the Forty-eighters and the Farmer-Labor, its national convention at Chicago, July 12, 1920. Robert C. Macauley, of Philadelphia, was nominated for President, and Richard C. Barnum, of Cleveland, Ohio, for Vice President.

SINGLE TAX PLATFORM.

We, the Single Tax Party, in national convention assembled, recognizing that the earth was created for all the people for all time, and that all have an equal and inalienable right to live on it and to produce from it the things that they require for their welfare and happiness; recognizing that all wealth, whatever its form, is produced only by labor applied to land, or to the products of land, and that the denial of the equal access to land is a denial of the right to produce and thus a denial of the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, as proclaimed by the Declaration of Independence; recognizing further that under our tax laws and our system of land tenure a small number of the people own most of the land of our country, and exact tribute in the form of ground rent from all the rest of the people in exchange for the mere permission to work and to produce, thus not only reaping where they have not sown but also holding idle the greater part of the earth's surface and restricting the amount of wealth we otherwise easily could and would produce; recognizing further that the value of the land, as expressed in its ground rentals or in its capitalized selling price, is a community value created by the presence of the people and, therefore, belongs to the people and not to the individual.

We, therefore, demand that the full rental value of the land be collected by the Government instead of all taxes, and that all buildings, implements and improvements on land, all industry, thrift and enterprise, all wages, salaries, incomes, and every product of labor be entirely exempt from taxation. And we pledge ourselves that, if entrusted with the power to do so, we will express in law and enforce to the utmost such measures as will make effective these demands, to the end that involuntary poverty and want may be abolished and economic and civic freedom for all be assured.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION OF 1920.

The Democratic National Convention of 1920 began June 28, at San Francisco. There were 1,096 delegates (with 1,092 votes), of whom 308 were women, including alternates. Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, was chosen Temporary Chairman, and on June 29 U. S. Senator Jos. T. Robinson, of Arkansas, was elected Permanent Chairman. U. S. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, was Chairman of the Resolutions Committee. On the opening day the convention sent, by unanimous vote, the following message to President Wilson.

MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY TO WILSON.

"In recognition of the fact that the mantle of Jackson and Jefferson has fallen on your shoulders as the unquestioned leader of our party, the hosts of Democracy, in National Convention assembled, have directed me to send you the following resolution of appreciation and greeting: The Democratic Party, assembled in National Convention, extends to the President of the United States its admiring and respectful greetings. For seven of the most fateful years in the history of our country Woodrow Wilson has occupied and by his character, learning and power has adorned the highest office in the gift of his countrymen. He has initiated and secured the adoption of great progressive measures of immeasurable value and benefits to the people of the United States. As the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States he has led the patriotic forces of his country through the most momentous struggle in history and, without check, reserve or retardation to an honorable part in the immortal victory for liberty and democracy won by the free nations of the world.

"We hail these achievements, Sir, and are proud that they have been accomplished under your Administration. We rejoice in the recovery of your health and strength after months of suffering and affliction, which you have borne with courage and without complaint. We deeply resent the malignant onset which you have most undeservedly been called upon to sustain from partisan foes, whose judgment is warped and whose perceptions are obscured by a party malice which constitutes a lamentable and disgraceful page in our history. At this moment, when the delegates to this convention from every State in the Union are about to enter upon their formal proceedings, we pause to send an expression of cheer and admiration and of congratulation.

"We rejoice and felicitate you upon your speedy recovery from your recent illness and congratulate that, though temporarily blocked in body, you have been able, with unclouded vision and undaunted to press on for the great reforms which you have fathered for the preservation of peace through-rld in the interest of humanity and the advancement of civilization. Long may you live to serve ...rica and the world!"

PRESIDENT WILSON'S REPLY.

WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, July 2.—Hon. Homer S. Cummings, Chairman Democratic National Committee, San Francisco:

It was with the most grateful appreciation that I received the message from the convention so kindly transmitted by you. It is a source of profound pride with me to receive such an evidence of the confidence of the great party which derives its principles direct and untainted from the founders of our Government and the authors of our liberty. While our opponents are endeavoring to isolate us among the nations of the world, we are following the vision of the founders of the Republic, who promised the world the counsel and leadership of the free people of the United States in all matters that affected human liberty and the justice of law. That promise we deliberately renewed when we entered the great war for human freedom, and we now keep faith with those who died in Flanders Fields to redeem it.

That I should have been accorded leadership in such great matters fills my heart with gratitude and pride, and the course the party has taken fills me with a perfect confidence that it will go from victory to victory until the true traditions of the Republic are vindicated and the world convinced not only of our strength and prowess, but of our integrity and our devotion to the highest ideals. This is a conquering purpose, and nothing can defeat it.—WOODROW WILSON.

CONVENTION GETS DOWN TO WORK.

The convention, June 29, excluded from its voting ranks U. S. Senator J. A. Reed, one of the chosen delegates from Missouri. Nominating speeches were made June 30 and July 1. On July 2 the convention, 929½ to 155½, defeated the "dry" plank of W. J. Bryan; it defeated, 723½ to 356, Bourke Cockran's "wet" plank; it defeated without a roll call, Bryan's League of Nations plank. The convention then, without a roll call, adopted a national platform, after having rejected, 675½ to 402½, the Doheny Irish plank.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL PLATFORM OF 1920.

(Adopted at San Francisco, July 2).

The Democratic Party, in its National Convention now assembled, sends greetings to the President of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, and hails with patriotic pride the great achievements for country and the world wrought by a Democratic Administration under his leadership. It salutes the mighty people of this great Republic, emerging with imperishable honor from the severe tests and grievous strains of the most tragic war in history, having earned the plaudits and the gratitude of all free nations.

It declares its adherence to the fundamental progressive principles of social, economic and industrial justice and advance, and purposes to resume the great work of translating these principles into effective laws, begun and carried far by the Democratic Administration and interrupted only when the war claimed all the national energies for the single task of victory.

League of Nations.

The Democratic Party favors the League of Nations as the surest, if not the only, practicable means of maintaining the peace of the world and terminating the insufferable burden of great military and naval establishments. It was for this that America broke away from traditional isolation and spent her blood and treasure to crush a colossal scheme of conquest. It was upon this basis that the President of the United States, in pre-arrangement with our Allies, consented to a suspension of hostilities against the Imperial German Government; the armistice was granted and a treaty of peace negotiated upon the definite assurance to Germany, as well as to the powers pitted against Germany, that "a general association of nations must be formed, under specific covenant, for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike." Hence, we not only congratulate the President on the vision manifested and the vigor exhibited in the prosecution of the war, but we felicitate him and his associates on the exceptional achievement at Paris involved in the adoption of a League and treaty so near akin to previously expressed American ideals and so intimately related to the aspirations of civilized peoples everywhere.

We commend the President for his courage and his high conception of good faith in steadfastly standing for the covenant agreed to by all the Associated and Allied Nations at war with Germany, and we condemn the Republican Senate for its refusal to ratify the treaty merely because it was the product of Democratic statesmanship, thus interposing partisan envy and personal hatred in the way of the peace and renewed prosperity of the world. By every accepted standard of international morality the President is justified in asserting that the honor of the country is involved in this business; and we point to the accusing fact that, before it was determined to initiate political antagonism to the treaty, the now Republican Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee himself publicly proclaimed that any proposition for a separate peace with Germany, such as he and his party associates thereafter reported to the Senate, would make us "guilty of the blackest crime." On May 15 last the Knox substitute for the Versailles Treaty was passed by the Republican Senate; and this convention can contrive no more fitting characterization of its obloquy than that made in the Forum magazine of June, 1918, by Henry Cabot Lodge, when he said:

"If we send our armies and young men abroad to be killed and wounded in Northern France and Flanders with no result but this, our entrance into war with such an intention was a crime which nothing can justify. The intent of Congress and the intent of the President were that there could be no peace until we could create a situation where no such war as this could recur. We cannot make peace except in company with our allies. It would brand us with everlasting dishonor and bring ruin to us also if we undertook to make a separate peace."

Thus to that which Mr. Lodge, in saner moments, considered "the blackest crime" he and his party in madness sought to give the sanctity of law; that which eighteen months ago was of "everlasting dishonor" the Republican Party and its candidates to-day accept as the essence of faith. We endorse the President's view of our international obligations and his firm stand against reservations designed to cut to pieces the vital provisions of the Versailles Treaty, and we commend the Democrats in Congress for voting against resolutions for separate peace which would disgrace the Nation. We advocate the immediate ratification of the treaty without reservations which would impair its essential integrity; but do not oppose the acceptance of any reservations making clearer or more specific the obligations of the United States to the League associates. Only by doing this may we retrieve the reputation of this Nation among the powers of the earth and recover the moral leadership which President Wilson won and which Republican politicians at Washington sacrificed. Only by doing this may we hope to aid effectively in the restoration of order throughout the world and to take the place which we should assume in the front rank of spiritual, commercial and industrial advancement. We reject as utterly vain, if not vicious, the Republican assumption that ratification of the treaty and membership in the League of Nations would in any wise impair the integrity or independence of our country. The fact that the covenant has been entered into by twenty-nine nations all as jealous of their independence as we are of ours, is a sufficient refutation of such charge. The dent repeatedly has declared, and this convention reaffirms, that all our duties and obligations as a of the League must be fulfilled in strict conformity with the Constitution of the United States, embo... in which is the fundamental requirement of declaratory action by the Congress before this Nation may become a participant in any war.

Conduct of the War.

During the war President Wilson exhibited the very broadest conception of liberal Americanism. In his conduct of the war, as in the general administration of his high office, there was no semblance of partisan bias. He invited to Washington as his councillors and coadjutors hundreds of the most prominent and pronounced Republicans in the country. To these he committed responsibilities of the gravest import and most confidential nature. Many of them had charge of vital activities of the Government. And yet, with the war successfully prosecuted and gloriously ended, the Republican Party in Congress, far from applauding the masterly leadership of the President and felicitating the country on the amazing achievements of the American Government, has meanly requited the considerate course of the Chief Magistrate by savagely defaming the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy and by assailing nearly every public officer of every branch of the service intimately concerned in winning the war abroad and preserving the security of the Government at home. We express to the soldiers and sailors and marines of America the admiration of their fellow countrymen. Guided by the genius of such commanders as Gen. John J. Pershing, the armed forces of America constituted a decisive factor in the victory and brought new lustre to the flag. We commend the patriotic men and women who sustained the efforts of their Government in the crucial hours of the war and contributed to the brilliant administrative success achieved under the broad-visioned leadership of the President.

Financial Achievements.

A review of the record of the Democratic Party during the Administration of Woodrow Wilson presents a chapter of substantial achievements unsurpassed in the history of the Republic. For fifty years before the advent of this Administration periodical convulsions had impeded the industrial progress of American people and caused inestimable loss and distress. By the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act the old system, which bred panics, was replaced by a new system, which insured confidence. It was an indispensable factor in winning the war, and to-day it is the hope and inspiration of business. Indeed, one vital danger against which the American people should keep constantly on guard is the commitment of this system to partisan enemies who struggled against its adoption and vainly attempted to retain in the hands of speculative bankers a monopoly of the currency credits of the Nation. Already there are well-defined indications of an assault upon the vital principles of the system in the event of Republican success in the elections in November. Under Democratic leadership the American people successfully financed their stupendous part in the greatest war of all time. The Treasury wisely insisted during the war upon meeting an adequate portion of the war expenditure from current taxes and the bulk of the balance from popular loans, and, during the first full fiscal year after fighting stopped, upon meeting current expenditures from current receipts, notwithstanding the new and unnecessary burden thrown upon the Treasury by the delay, obstruction and extravagance of a Republican Congress.

The non-partisan Federal Reserve authorities have been wholly free of political interference or motive; and, in their own time and their own way, have used courageously, though cautiously, the instruments at their disposal to prevent undue, expansion of credit in the country. As a result of these sound Treasury and Federal Reserve policies, the inevitable war inflation has been held down to a minimum, and the cost of living has been prevented from increasing here in proportion to the increase in other belligerent countries and in neutral countries which are in close contact with the world's commerce and exchanges. After a year and a half of fighting in Europe, and despite another year and a half of Republican obstruction at home, the credit of the Government of the United States stands unimpaired, the Federal Reserve note the unit of value throughout all the world, and the United States is the one great country in the world wh' maintains a free gold market. We condemn the attempt of the Republican Party to deprive the Americ people of their legitimate pride in the financing of the war—an achievement without parallel in the financial history of this or any other country, in this or any other war. And in particular we condemn the pernicious attempt of the Republican Party to create discontent among the holders of the bonds of the Government of the United States and to drag our public finance and our banking and currency system back into the arena of party politics.

Tax Revision.

We condemn the failure of the present Congress to respond to the oft-repeated demand of the President and the Secretaries of the Treasury to revise the existing tax laws. The continuance in force in peace times of taxes devised under pressure of imperative necessity to produce a revenue for war purposes is indefensible and can only result in lasting injury to the people. The Republican Congress persistently failed, through sheer political cowardice, to make a single move toward a readjustment of tax laws which it denounced before the last election and was afraid to revise before the next election. We advocate tax reform and a searching revision of the war revenue acts to fit peace conditions so that the wealth of the ation may not be withdrawn from productive enterprise and diverted to wasteful or non-productive expenditure. We demand prompt action by the next Congress for a complete survey of existing taxes and their modification and simplification with a view to secure greater equity and justice in tax burden and improvement in administration.

Public Economy.

Claiming to have effected great economies in Government expenditures, the Republican party cannot show the reduction of one dollar in taxation as a corollary of this false pretence. In contrast, the last Democratic Congress enacted legislation reducing the taxes from eight billions, designed to be raised, to six billions for the first year after the armistice, and to four billions thereafter; and there the total is left undiminished by our political adversaries. Two years after Armistice Day a Republican Congress provides for expending the stupendous sum of $5,403,390,327.30. Affecting great paper economies by reducing departmental estimates of sums which would not have been spent in any event, and by reducing formal appropriations, the Republican statement of expenditures omits the pregnant fact that the Congress authorized the use of one and a half billion dollars in the hands of various departments and bureaus which otherwise would have been covered into the Treasury, and which should be added to the Republican total of expenditures.

High Cost of Living.

The high cost of living and the depreciation of bond values in this country are primarily due to war itself, to the necessary governmental expenditures for the destructive purpose of war, to private extravagance, to the world's shortage of capital, to the inflation of foreign currencies and credits and, in large degree, to conscienceless profiteering. The Republican Party is responsible for the failure to restore peace and peace conditions in Europe, which is a principal cause of post-armistice inflation the world over. It has denied the demand of the President for necessary legislation to deal with secondary and local causes. The sound policies pursued by the Treasury and the Federal Reserve System have limited in this country, though they could not prevent, the inflation which was world-wide. Elected upon specific promises to curtail public expenditures and to bring the country back to a status of effective economy, the Republican Congress wasted time and energy for more than a year in vain and extravagant investigations, the tax-payers great sums of money, while revealing nothing beyond the incapacity of Republican politicians to cope with the problems. Demanding that the President, from his place at the Peace Table, call the Congress into extraordinary session for imperative purposes of readjustment, the Congress when convened spent thirteen months in partisan pursuits, failing to repeal a single war statute which harassed business or to initiate a single constructive measure to help business. It busied itself making a pre-election record of pretended thrift, having not one particle of substantial existence in fact. It raged against profiteers and the high cost of living without enacting a single statute to make the former afraid or doing a single act to bring the latter within limitations.

The simple truth is that the high cost of living can only be remedied by increased production, strict governmental economy and a relentless pursuit of those who take advantage of post-war conditions and are demanding and receiving outrageous profits. We pledge the Democratic Party to a policy of strict economy government expenditures, and to the enactment and enforcement of such legislation as may be required bring profiteers before the bar of criminal justice.

The Tariff.

We reaffirm the traditional policy of the Democratic Party in favor of a tariff for revenue only, and we confirm the policy of basing tariff revisions upon the intelligent research of a non-partisan commission, rather than upon the demands of selfish interests, temporarily held in abeyance.

Budget.

In the interest of economy and good administration, we favor the creation of an effective budget system that will function in accord with the principles of the Constitution. The reform should reach both the executive and legislative aspects of the question. The supervision and preparation of the budget should be vested in the Secretary of the Treasury as the representative of the President. The budget, as such, should not be increased by the Congress except by a two-thirds vote, each House, however, being free to exercise its constitutional privilege of making appropriations through independent bills. The appropriation bills should be considered by single Committees of the House and Senate. The audit system should be consolidated and its powers expanded so as to pass upon the wisdom of, as well as the authority for, expenditures. A budget bill was passed in the closing days of the second session of the Sixty-sixth Congress which, invalidated by plain constitutional defects and defaced by considerations of patronage, the President was obliged to veto. The House amended the bill to meet the Executive objection. We condemn the Republican Senate for adjourning without passing the amended measure, when by devoting an hour or two more to this urgent public business a budget system could have been provided.

Senate Rules.

We favor such alteration of the rules of procedure of the Senate of the United States as will permit the prompt transaction of the nation's legislative business.

Agricultural Interests.

To the great agricultural interests of the country the Democratic Party does not find it necessary to make promises. It already is rich in its record of things actually accomplished. For nearly half a century of Republican rule not a sentence was writen into the Federal Statutes affording one dollar of bank credits to the farming interest of America. In the first term of this Democratic Administration the National Bank Act was so altered as to authorize loans of five years maturity on improved farm lands. Later was established a system of farm loan banks, from which the borrowings already exceed three hundred millions of dollars and under which the interest rate to farmers has been so materially reduced as to drive out of business the farm loan sharks who formerly subsisted by extortion upon the great agricultural interests of the country. Thus it was a Democratic Congress in the Administration of a Democratic President which enabled the farmers of America for the first time to obtain credit upon reasonable terms and insured their opportunity for the future development of the nation's agricultural resources. Tied up in Supreme Court proceedings, in a suit by hostile interests, the Federal Farm Loan system, originally opposed by the Republican candidate for the Presidency, appealed in vain to a Republican Congress for adequate financial assistance to tide over the interim between the beginning and the ending of the current year, awaiting a final decision of the highest court on the validity of the contested act. We pledge prompt and consistent support of sound and effective measures to sustain, amplify and perfect the Rural Credits Statutes and thus to check and reduce the growth and course of farm tenancy.

Not only did the Democratic Party put into effect a great Farm Loan system of land mortgage banks but it passed the Smith-Lever Agricultural Extension Act, carrying to every farmer in every section of the country, through the medium of trained experts and by demonstration farms the practical knowledge acquired by the Federal Agricultural Department in all things relating to agriculture, horticulture and animal life; it established the Bureau of Markets, the Bureau of Farm Management, and passed the Cotton Futures Act, the Grain Grades Bill, the Co-operative Farm Administration Act and the Federal Warehouse Act. The Democratic Party has vastly improved the rural mail system and has built up the parcel post system to such an extent as to render its activities and its practical service indispensable to the farming com ... It was this wise encouragement and this effective concern of the Democratic Party for the farme United States that enabled this great interest to render such essential service in feeding the armies c and the Allied Nations of the war and succoring starving populations since Armistice Day.

Meanwhile the Republican leaders at Washington have failed utterly to propose one singl to make rural life more tolerable. They have signalized their fifteen months of Congressional urging schemes which would strip the farms of labor; by assailing the principles of the Farm Loan and seeking to impair its efficiency; by covertly attempting to destroy the great nitrogen plant at Shoals upon which the Government has expended $70,000,000 to supply American farmers with fertili at reasonable cost; by ruthlessly crippling nearly every branch of agricultural endeavor, literally cran ing the productive methods through which the people must be fed. We favor such legislation as will c firm to the primary producers of the Nation the right of collective bargaining and the right of co-operat handling and marketing of the products of the workshop and the farm and such legislature as will facilit the exportation of our farm products. We favor comprehensive studies of farm production costs and uncensored publication of facts found in such studies.

Labor and Industry.

The Democratic Party is now, as ever, the firm friend of honest labor and the promoter of progress industry. It established the Department of Labor at Washington and a Democratic President called his official council board the first practical workingman who ever held a Cabinet portfolio. Under this A ministration have been established employment bureaus to bring the man and the job together; have b peaceably determined many bitter disputes between capital and labor; were passed the Child-Labor A the Workingman's Compensation Act (the extension of which we advocate so as to include laborers engag in loading and unloading ships and in interstate commerce), the Eight-Hour Law, the Act for Vocational tra ing and a code of other wholesome laws affecting the liberties and bettering the conditions of the lab ing classes. In the Department of Labor the Democratic Administration established a Woman's Bure which a Republican Congress destroyed by withholding appropriations. Labor is not a commodity ... human. Those who labor have rights and the national security and safety depend upon a just ... of those rights and the conservation of the strength of the workers and their families in the interes hearted and sound-headed men, women and children. Laws regulating hours of labor and conditions which labor is performed when passed in recognition of the conditions under which life must be li attain the highest development and happiness, are just assertions of the national interest li welfare of the people. At the same time, the nation depends upon the products of labor; a cessatio production means a loss and, if long continued, disaster. The whole people, therefore, have a right to sist that justice shall be done to those who work, and in turn that those whose labor creates the necessit upon which the life of the nation depends must recognize the reciprocal obligation between the worker a the State. They should participate in the formulation of sound laws and regulations governing the con tions under which labor is performed, recognize and obey the laws so formulated and seek their ame ment when necessary by the processes ordinarily addressed to the laws and regulations affecting the relations of life.

Labor, as well as capital, is entitled to adequate compensation. Each has the indefeasible righ organization, of collective bargaining and of speaking through representatives of their own selection. Neit class, however, should at any time nor in any circumstances take action that will put in jeopardy the pub welfare. Resort to strikes and lockouts which endanger the health or lives of the people is an unsatisf tory device for determining disputes, and the Democratic Party pledges itself to contrive, if possible, a put into effective operation a fair and comprehensive method of composing differences of this nature. private industrial disputes, we are opposed to compulsory arbitration as a method plausible in theory l a failure in fact. With respect to government service we hold distinctly that the rights of the people paramount to the right to strike. However, we profess scrupulous regard for the conditions of public e ployment and pledge the Democratic Party to instant inquiry into the pay of Government employees a equally speedy regulations designed to bring salaries to a just and proper level.

Woman Suffrage.

We endorse the proposed 19th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States granting co suffrage to women. We congratulate the legislatures of the 35 States which have already ratified Amendment and we urge the Democratic Governors and legislatures of Tennessee, North Carolina Florida and such States as have not yet ratified the Federal Suffrage Amendment to unite in an effor complete the process of ratification and secure the 36th State in time for all the women of the United Sta to participate in the Fall election. We commend the effective advocacy of the measure by President Wils

Welfare of Women and Children.

We urge co-operation with the States for the protection of child life through infancy and matern care; in the prohibition of child labor and by adequate appropriations for the Children's Bureau and Women's Bureau in the Department of Labor.

Women in Industry.

We advocate full representation of women on all commissions dealing with women's work or wome interests and a reclassification of the Federal Civil Service free from discrimination on the ground of s a continuance of appropriations for education in sex hygiene; Federal legislation which shall insure t American women residents in the United States, but married to aliens, shall retain their American citiz ship and that the same process of naturalization shall be required for women as for men.

Education

Co-operative Federal assistance to the States is immediately required for the removal of illiteracy, the increase of teachers' salaries and instruction in citizenship for both native and foreign-born; increas appropriation for vocational training in home economics, re-establishment of joint Federal and State e ployment service with women's departments under the direction of technically qualified women.

Disabled Soldiers.

The Federal Government should treat with the utmost consideration every disabled soldier, sai and marine of the world war whether his disability be due to wounds received in line of action or to hea impaired in service; and for the dependents of the brave men who died in line of duty the governmen tenderest concern and richest bounty should be their requital. The fine patriotism exhibited, the her conduct displayed by American soldiers, sailors and marines at home and abroad, constitute a sacred h tage of posterity, the worth of which can never be recompensed from the Treasury and the glory of wh must not be diminished. The Democratic Administration wisely established a War Risk Insurance Bure giving four and a half millions of enlisted men insurance at unprecedentedly low rates and through the n dium of which compensation of men and women injured in service is readily adjusted, and hospital fac ties for those whose health is impaired are abundantly afforded. The Federal Board for Vocational E cation should be made a part of the War Risk Insurance Bureau, in order that the task may be r

, and this machinery of protection and assistance must receive every aid of law and appropriation y to full and effective operation. We believe that no higher or more valued privilege can be afforded erican citizen than to become a freeholder in the soil of the United States and to that end we pledge y to the enactment of soldier settlements and home aid legislation which will afford to the men ht for America the opportunity to become land and home owners under conditions affording gen- vernment assistance unencumbered by needless difficulties of red tape or advance financial invest-

The Railroads.

The railroads were subjected to Federal control as a war measure without other idea than the swift ansport of troops, munitions and supplies. When human life and national hopes were at stake profits uld not be considered and were not. Federal operation, however, was marked by an intelligence and ficiency that minimized loss and resulted in many and marked reforms. The equipment taken over was ot only grossly inadequate, but shamefully outworn. Unification practices overcame these initial handi- aps and provided additions, betterments and improvements. Economies enabled operation without the ite raises that private control would have found necessary, and labor was treated with an exact justice at secured the enthusiastic co-operation that victory demanded. The fundamental purpose of Federal ontrol was achieved fully and splendidly, and at far less cost to the taxpayer than would have been the ise under private operation. Investments in railroad properties were not only saved by Government peration, but Government management returned these properties vastly improved in every physical and ecutive detail. A great task was greatly discharged.

The President's recommendation of return to private ownership gave the Republican majority a full ear in which to enact the necessary legislation. The House took six months to formulate its ideas, and nother six months was consumed by the Republican Senate in equally vague debate. As a consequence, e Esch-Cummins bill went to the President in the closing hours of the time limit prescribed, and he was rced to a choice between the chaos of a veto and acquiescence in the measure submitted, however grave v have been his objection to it. There should be a fair and complete test of the law and until careful re action by Congress may cure its defects and insure a thoroughly effective transportation system ate ownership without Government subsidy at the expense of the taxpayers of the country.

Improved Highways.

Improved roads are of vital importance not only to commerce and industry, but also to agriculture rural life. The Federal Road Act of 1916, enacted by a Democratic Congress, represented the first tematic effort of the Government to insure the building of an adequate system of roads in this country. he act, as amended, has resulted in placing the movement for improved highways on a progressive and bstantial basis in every State in the Union and in bringing under actual construction more than 13,000 iles of roads suited to the traffic needs of the communities in which they are located. We favor a con- nuance of the present Federal aid plan under existing Federal and State agencies amended so as to include one of the elements in determining the ratio in which the several states shall be entitled to share in the d, the area of any public lands therein.

Inasmuch as the postal service has been extended by the Democratic Party to the door of practically ery producer and every consumer in the country (rural free delivery alone having been provided for 6,000,- 00 additional patrons within the past eight years without material added cost), we declare that this in- rumentality can and will be used to the maximum of its capacity to improve the efficiency of distribu- on and reduce the cost of living to consumers while increasing the profitable operations of producers. We rongly favor the increased use of the motor vehicle in the transportation of the mails and urge the removal the restrictions imposed by the Republican Congress on the use of motor devices in mail transportation rural territories.

Merchant Marine.

We desire to congratulate the American people upon the re-birth of our Merchant Marine which once ore maintains its former place in the world. It was under a Democratic Administration that this was ompliished after seventy years of indifference and neglect, thirteen million tons having been constructed ce the act was passed, in 1916. We pledge the policy of our party to the continued growth of our Mer- ant Marine under proper legislation so that American products will be carried to all ports of the world vessels built in American yards, flying the American Flag.

Port Facilities.

The urgent demands of the war for adequate transportation of war material as well as for domestic ed, revealed the fact that our port facilities and rate adjustments were such as to seriously affect the whole untry in times of peace as well as war.

We pledge our party to stand for equality of rates, both import and export, for the ports of the country, the end that there may be adequate and fair facilities and rates for the mobilization of the products of e country offered for shipment.

Inland Waterways.

We call attention to the failure of the Republican National Convention to recognize in any way the pid development of barge transportation on our inland waterways, which development is the result of e constructive policies of the Democratic administration. And we pledge ourselves to the further de- lopment of adequate transportation facilities on our rivers and to the further improvement of our inland aterways; and we recognize the importance of connecting the Great Lakes with the sea by way of the ississippi River and its tributaries, as well as by the St. Lawrence River. We favor an enterprising For- gn Trade Policy with all nations, and in this connection we favor the full utilization of all Atlantic, Gulf id Pacific Ports, and an equitable distribution of shipping facilities between the various ports. Trans- rtation remains an increasingly vital problem in the continued development and prosperity of the Nation. ir present facilities for distribution by rail are inadequate and the promotion of transportation by water imperative. We therefore favor a liberal and comprehensive policy for development and utilization our harbors and interior waterways.

Flood Control.

We commend the Democratic Congress for the redemption of the pledge contained in our last plat- rm by the passage of the Flood Control Act of March 1, 1917, and point to the successful control of floods the Mississippi River and the Sacramento River, California, under the policy of that law, for its complete stification. We favor the extension of this policy to other flood control problems wherever the federal terest involved justifies the expenditure required.

Reclamation of Arid Lands.

By wise legislation and progressive administration, we have transformed the Government reclama- on projects, representing an investment of $100,000,000, from a condition of impending failure and loss confidence in the ability of the Government to carry through such large enterprises, to a condition of monstrated success, whereby formerly arid and wholly unproductive lands now sustain 40,000 prosperous and have an annual crop production of over $70,000,000, not including the crops grown on a mil- s outside the projects supplied with storage water from Government works. We favor ample appropriations for the continuation and extension of this great work of home-building and internal im-provement along the same general lines, to the end that all practical projects shall be built, and waters now running to waste shall be made to provide homes and add to the food supply, power resources, and taxable property, with the Government ultimately reimbursed for the entire outlay.

The Trade Commission.

The Democratic Party heartily endorses the creation and work of the Federal Trade Commission in establishing a fair field for competitive business, free from restraints of trade and monopoly, and recommends amplification of the statutes governing its activities so as to grant it authority to prevent the unfair use of patents in restraint of trade.

Live Stock Markets.

For the purpose of insuring just and fair treatment in the great interstate live stock market, and thus instilling confidence in growers through which production will be stimulated and the price of meats to consumers be ultimately reduced, we favor the enactment of legislation for the supervision of such markets by the national Government.

Mexico.

The United States is the neighbor and friend of the nations of the three Americas. In a very special sense, our international relations in this hemisphere should be characterized by good will and free from any possible suspicion as to our national purpose. The Administration, remembering always that Mexico is an independent nation and that permanent stability in her government and her institutions could come only from the consent of her own people to a government of their own making, has been unwilling either to profit by the misfortunes of the people of Mexico or to enfeeble their future by imposing from the outside a rule upon their temporarily distracted councils. As a consequence, order is gradually reappearing in Mexico; at no time in many years have American lives and interests been so safe as they now are; peace reigns along the border and industry is resuming. When the new Government of Mexico shall have given ample proof of its ability permanently to maintain law and order, signified its willingness to meet its international obligations and written upon its statue books just laws under which foreign investors shall have rights as well as duties, that Government should receive our recognition and sympathetic assistance. Until these proper expectations have been met, Mexico must realize the propriety of a policy that asserts the right of the United States to demand full protection for its citizens.

Petroleum.

The Democratic Party recognizes the importance of the acquisition by Americans of additional sources of supply of petroleum and other minerals and declares that such acquisition both at home and abroad should be fostered and encouraged. We urge such action, legislative and executive, as may secure to American citizens the same rights in the acquirement of mining rights in foreign countries as are enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of any other nation.

New Nations.

The Democratic Party expresses its active sympathy with the people of China, Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, Jugo-Slavia, Poland, Persia and others who have recently established representative government and who are striving to develop the institutions of true Democracy.

Ireland.

The great principle of national self-determination has received constant reiteration as one of the chief objectives for which this country entered the war and victory established this principle. Within the limitations of international comity and usage, this Convention repeats the several previous expressions of the sympathy of the Democratic Party of the United States for the aspirations of Ireland for self-government.

Armenia.

We express our deep and earnest sympathy for the unfortunate people of Armenia, and we believe that our government, consistent with its Constitution and principles, should render every possible and practical aid to them in their efforts to establish and maintain a government of their own.

The Philippines.

We favor the granting of independence without delay to the 10,500,000 inhabitants of the Philippine Islands.

Hawaii.

We favor a liberal policy of homesteading public lands in Hawaii to promote a larger middle-class citizen population, with equal rights to all citizens. The importance of Hawaii as an outpost on the Western Frontier of the United States demands adequate appropriations by Congress for the development of our harbors and highways there.

Porto Rico.

We favor granting to the people of Porto Rico the traditional territorial form of government, with a view to ultimate statehood, accorded to all territories of the United States since the beginning of our government, and we believe that the officials appointed to administer the government of such territories should be qualified by previous bona fide residence therein.

Alaska.

We commend the Democratic Administration for inaugurating a new policy as to Alaska as evidence by the construction of the Alaska railroad and opening of the coal and oil fields. We declare for the modification of the existing coal land law, to promote development without disturbing the features intended to prevent monopoly. For such changes in the policy of forestry control as will permit the immediate initiation of the paper pulp industry. For relieving the territory from the evils of long-distance government by arbitrary and interlocking bureaucratic regulation, and to that end we urge the speedy passage of a law containing the essential features of the Lane-Curry bill now pending co-ordinating and consolidating all federal control of natural resources under one department to be administered by a non-partisan board permanently resident in the territory. For the fullest measure of territorial self-government with the view to ultimate statehood, with jurisdiction over all matters not of purely federal concern, including fisheries and game, and for an intelligent administration of federal control we believe that all officials appointed should be qualified by previous bona fide residence in the territory. For a comprehensive system of road construction with increased appropriations and the full extension of the Federal Road Act to Alaska. For the extension to Alaska of the Federal Farm Loan Act.

Asiatic Immigrants.

The policy of the United States with reference to the non-admission of Asiatic immigrants is a true expression of the judgment of our people, and to the several states whose geographical situation or internal conditions make this policy and the enforcement of the laws enacted pursuant thereto of particular concern, we pledge our support.

TEXT OF THE PLATFORM—Continued; AND BALLOTS.

The Postal Service.

The efficiency of the Post Office Department has been vindicated against a malicious and designing assault by the efficiency of its operation. Its record refutes its assailants. Their voices are silenced and their charges have collapsed. We recommend the work of the Joint Commission on the Re-classification of Salaries of Postal Employees, recently concluded, which Commission was created by a Democratic administration. The Democratic Party has always favored and will continue to favor the fair and just treatment of all Government employees.

Free Speech and Press.

We resent the unfounded reproaches directed against the Democratic Administration for alleged interference with the freedom of the press and freedom of speech. No utterance from any quarter has been assailed, and no publication has been repressed which has not been animated by treasonable purpose, and directed against the nation's peace, order and security in time of war. We reaffirm our respect for the great principles of free speech and a free press, but assert as an indisputable proposition that they afford no toleration of enemy propaganda or the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the state or nation by force or violence.

Republican Corruption.

The shocking disclosure of the lavish use of money by aspirants for the Republican nomination for the highest office in the gift of the people has created a painful impression throughout the country. Viewed in connection with the recent conviction of a Republican Senator from the State of Michigan for the criminal transgression of the law limiting expenditures on behalf of a candidate for the United States Senate, it indicates the re-entry, under Republican auspices, of money as an influential factor in elections, thus nullifying the letter and flaunting the spirit of numerous laws, enacted by the people, to protect the ballot from the contamination of corrupt practices. We deplore these delinquencies and invoke their stern popular rebuke, pledging our earnest efforts to a strengthening of the present statutes against corrupt practices, and their rigorous enforcement. We remind the people that it was only by the return of a Republican Senator in Michigan, who is now under conviction and sentence for the criminal misuse of money in his election, that the present organization of the Senate with a Republican majority was made possible.

Conclusion.

Believing that we have kept the Democratic faith and resting our claims to the confidence of the people not upon grandiose promises, but upon the solid performances of our party, we submit our record to the nation's consideration and ask that the pledges of this platform be appraised in the light of that record.

COX'S SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE.

Gov. Cox, in accepting, at Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 7, 1920, the Democratic Presidential nomination, stood on the platform promise of treaty ratification "without reservations which would impair its essential integrity," etc. Adding: "The captious may say that our platform reference to reservations is vague and indefinite. Its meaning, in brief, is that we shall state our interpretation of the covenant as a matter of good faith to our associates and as a precaution against any misunderstanding in the future. The point is, that after the people shall have spoken the League will be in the hands of its friends in the Senate, and a safe index as to what they will do is supplied by what reservations they have proposed in the past."

He gave this as his idea of a Senate interpretation on reservation to Article X.: "In giving its assent to this treaty, the Senate has in mind the fact that the League of Nations which it embodies was devised for the sole purpose of maintaining peace and comity among the nations of the earth and preventing the recurrence of such destructive conflicts as that through which the world has just passed. The co-operation of the United States with the League and its continuance as a member thereof will naturally depend upon the adherence of the League to that fundamental purpose."

Such a declaration, he added, would at least express the view of the United States and justify the course which this Nation would unquestionably follow if the basic purpose of the League were at any time distorted. It would also appear to be a simpler matter, he said, to provide against any misunderstanding in the future and at the same time to meet the objections of those who believe that the United States might be inviting a controversy over our constitutional rights by making a Senatorial addition in words something like these: "It will of course be understood that in carrying out the purpose of the League the Government of the United States must at all times act in strict harmony with the terms and intent of the United States Constitution, which cannot in any way be altered by the treaty making power."

He promised a $2,000,000,000 cut in Federal taxation, with a 1 to 1½ per cent. tax on the total business of every going concern. He said he would try to reduce the annual expenses of the Government to $4,000,000,000, including sinking fund and interest on the national debt.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's speech accepting the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination was made at Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 9, 1920.

NEW YORK STATE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM OF 1920.

THE Democrats of New York State at their convention at Albany, Feb. 26, 1920, when the delegation to the Democratic National Convention were designated, adopted a platform upholding the Wilson Administration, saying, as to the League: "We stand for the immediate ratification of the peace treaty and a League of Nations without destructive reservations, to the end that normal business relations in the country and in the world may be resumed and future wars prevented. We deplore the refusal of the Republican United States Senate to act on this all-important question and the consequent tremendous loss of national prestige. America must not relinquish her world leadership for the solitude of the Western Hemisphere. She must ever maintain her position as a friend of all peoples struggling for liberty."

The convention stood for Woman Suffrage and favored an amendment to the Federal Constitution whereby all future amendments shall be submitted to a popular vote.

On Prohibition the platform said: "We are unalterably opposed to Prohibition by Federal amendment. We believe it to be an unreasonable interference with the rights of the States as guaranteed by the Constitution. We feel that the recent enactment was the imposition of the ideas of an active minority against the wishes of the great majority of the American people. We, therefore, declare for its speedy repeal and to the end that the personal liberty of the people of our State may be thoroughly safeguarded until such time as this repeal may be brought about, we declare the right of our State in the exercise of its sovereign power to so construe the concurrent clause of the Eighteenth Amendment as to be in accord with the liberal and reasonable views of our people."

The State Democratic platform adopted at Saratoga, Aug. 4, 1920, said, on Prohibition: "We favor an amendment to the so-called Volstead act that will make operative the act passed by the State Legislature and signed by Gov. Smith defining non-intoxicating beverages and providing for the regulation of their sale." (This is the State act legalizing 2.75 beer.)

As to the Socialist matter the platform said: "The Democratic Party stands firmly for the right of free speech and free assemblage, in order to maintain the Government by the enlightened will of the majority. An ardent advocate of these principles, Gov. Smith has preserved by his recent vetoes the right of political minorities against summary suppression and has maintained freedom of opinion and speech. He has defended the right of all political parties to advocate their political principles by peaceful and constitutional methods, and has maintained the principles of "no spy system, in time of peace."

Of Ireland, the platform said: "Mindful of the circumstances of the birth of our own nation, we reassert the principle that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. We favor the continuance of our long established and lawful practice of according recognition without intervention in all cases where the people of a nation, as in Ireland, have by free vote of the people set up a republic and chosen a government, to which they yield willing obedience."

The platform makes no specific mention of the League of Nations, but includes a general indorsement of the Democratic national platform and of Cox and Roosevelt. It commends the record of Gov. Smith and of the party in the State, and condemns the action of the Republican Legislature in thwarting the Governor's attempts for progressive legislation and in refusing an appropriation for and recommendation of the Governor's Reconstruction Commission as "a manifestation of contemptible partisanship." The platform indorses the Governor's plan for the reorganization of the State Government by the consolidation of the existing 187 State agencies into 18 great departments, declares for an executive budget system and combats the Republican attack upon the Democratic Administration of the State Highway Department by claiming credit for efficiency in that department, and charging the former Republican officials with having left the highways of the State in a deplorable condition.

In discussing the housing problem, the platform advocates the establishment of local housing boards and a State Housing Commission, an amendment to the State Constitution to permit the extension of the State's credit for aid in the construction of moderately priced homes and the exemption for a limited period of mortgage loans on dwellings from local, State and Federal taxation. The platform declares for more effective legislation to protect tenants against unreasonable increases of rentals and against dispossession. The labor plank condemns the Republican Legislature for refusal to pass legislation on this subject recommended by the Governor and opposes the compulsory arbitration of labor disputes. It pledges a liberal, humane and efficient administration of the Workmen's Compensation Law and favors a Federal law of the same nature.

Issue is taken with the Republican platform by declaring for the development of the water powers of the State by the State itself instead of by private interests. A declaration is made for an agreement with New Jersey for the establishment of a central port authority for the development of the Port of New York. The platform declares for direct primaries and demands amendments to the Corrupt Practices Act and the Election Law to provide full publicity for campaign contributions before elections. It commends Gov. Smith for calling a special session of the Legislature to enable the State to ratify the Woman Suffrage Amendment and urges the Legislature of every State which has not already done so to ratify. Amendment of the Election Law to provide for two members from every Assembly District on the State committee in order to permit equal representation for women is recommended.

SOCIALIST NATIONAL CONVENTION OF 1920.

The eighth national convention of the Socialist Party was held at Finnish Hall, 127th St. and 5th Ave., N. Y., May 8-15. It was the first nominating convention since 1912. Morris Hillquit was the opening chairman, there being a different one each day. Among the addresses on the opening day was one by Edward Theodore, Socialist Prime Minister of Queensland, Australia. There were several hundred delegates and alternates, mostly from Calif., Conn., Ill., Ind., Mass., Mich., Minn., Mo., New Jer., New York, Ohio, Okla., Penna., and Wis. Two said they were aliens.

Eugene Victor Debs, of Terre Haute, Ind., was nominated, May 13, for the Presidency, for the fifth time and Seymour Stedman, lawyer, of Chicago, for the Vice Presidency, the latter getting 106 votes to 26 for Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, who on May 29 was freed by Pres. Wilson from the Fed. prison where she was serving a term for violation of the Espionage Act by an alleged disloyal speech at Fargo, No. Dak., in 1917. Just after Debs' nomination, a convention delegation asked Pres. Wilson to pardon him from the Fed. prison at Atlanta, Ga., where he was serving a 10-year sentence for violation of the Espionage Act by his public utterances at Canton, Ohio, July, 1918. On May 29, Debs, "Convict 2,253," was notified, at the prison, of his nomination, and he accepted.

The convention adopted the following platform, which was approved later by a referendum of the party membership at large.

SOCIALIST NATIONAL PLATFORM, 1920.

In the national campaign of 1920 the Socialist Party calls upon all American workers of hand and brain, and upon all citizens who believe in political liberty and social justice, to free the country from the oppressive misrule of the old political parties, and to take the government into their own hands under the banner and upon the programme of the Socialist Party. The outgoing administration, like Democratic and Republican administrations of the past, leaves behind it a disgraceful record of solemn pledges unscrupulously broken and public confidence ruthlessly betrayed. It obtained the suffrage of the people on a platform of peace, liberalism and social betterment, but drew the country into a devastating war, and inaugurated a regime of despotism, reaction and oppression unsurpassed in the annals of the republic. It promised to the American people a treaty which would assure to the world a reign of international right and true democracy. It gave its sanction and support to an infamous pact formulated behind closed doors by predatory elder statesmen of European and Asiatic imperialism. Under this pact territories have been annexed against the will of their populations and cut off from their sources of sustenance; nations seeking their freedom in the exercise of the much heralded right of self-determination have been brutally fought with armed force, intrigue and starvation blockades.

To the millions of young men who staked their lives on the field of battle, to the people of the country who gave unstintingly of their toil and property to support the war, the Democratic administration held out the sublime ideal of a union of the peoples of the world organized to maintain perpetual peace among nations on the basis of justice and freedom. It helped create a reactionary alliance of imperialistic governments, banded together to bully weak nations, crush working-class governments and perpetuate strife and warfare. While thus furthering the ends of reaction, violence and oppression abroad, our administration suppressed the cherished and fundamental rights and civil liberties at home. Upon the pretext of war-time necessity, the Chief Executive of the republic and the appointed heads of his administration were clothed with dictatorial powers (which were often exercised arbitrarily), and Congress enacted laws in open and direct violation of the constitutional safeguards of freedom of expression. Hundreds of citizens who raised their voices for the maintenance of political and industrial rights during the war were indicted under the Espionage Law, tried in an atmosphere of prejudice and hysteria, and many of them are now serving inhumanly long jail sentences for daring to uphold the traditions of liberty which once were sacred in this country. Agents of the Federal Government unlawfully raided homes and meeting places and prevented or broke up peaceable gatherings of citizens.

The Postmaster General established a censorship of the press more autocratic than that ever tolerated in a regime of absolutism, and has harassed and destroyed publications on account of their advanced political and economic views, by excluding them from the mails. And after the war was in fact long over, the administration has not scrupled to continue a policy of repression and terrorism under the shadow and hypocritical guise of war-time measures.

It has practically imposed involuntary servitude and peonage on a large class of American workers by denying them the right to quit work and coercing them into acceptance of inadequate wages and onerous conditions of labor. It has dealt a foul blow to the traditional American right of asylum by deporting hundreds of foreign born workers, by administrative order, on the mere suspicion of harboring radical views, and often for the sinister purpose of breaking labor strikes. In the short span of three years our self-styled liberal administration has succeeded in undermining the very foundation of political liberty and economic rights, which this republic has built up in more than a century of struggle and progress. Under the cloak of a false and hypocritical patriotism and under the protection of governmental terror the Democratic administration has given the ruling classes unrestrained license to plunder the people by intensive exploitation of labor, by the extortion of enormous profits, and by increasing the cost of all necessities of life. Profiteering has become reckless and rampant, billions have been coined by the capitalists out of the suffering and misery of their fellow men. The American financial oligarchy has become a dominant factor in the world, while the condition of the American workers has grown more precarious. The responsibility does not rest upon the Democratic Party alone. The Republican Party, through its representatives in Congress and otherwise, has not only openly condoned the political misdeeds of the last three years, but has sought to outdo its Democratic rival in the orgy of political reaction and repression. Its criticism of the Democratic administrative policy is that it is not reactionary and drastic enough.

America is now at the parting of the roads. If the outraging of political liberty, and concentration of economic power into the hands of the few is permitted to go on, it can have only one consequence, the reduction of the country to a state of absolute capitalist despotism. We particularly denounce the militaristic policy of both old parties, of investing countless hundreds of millions of dollars in armaments after the victorious completion of what was to have been the "last war." We call attention to the fatal results of such a programme in Europe, carried on prior to 1914, and culminating in the Great War; we declare that such a policy, adding unbearable burdens to the working class and to all the people, can lead only to the complete Prussianization of the nation, and ultimately to war; and we demand immediate and complete abandonment of this fatal programme. The Socialist Party sounds the warning. It calls upon the people to defeat both parties at the polls, and to elect the candidates of the Socialist Party to the end of restoring political democracy and bringing about a complete industrial freedom. The Socialist Party of the United States therefore summons all who believe in this fundamental doctrine to prepare for a complete reorganization of our social system, based upon public ownership of public necessities; upon government by representatives chosen from occupational as well as from geographical groups, in harmony with our industrial development; and with citizenship based on service; that we may end forever the exploitation of class by class. To achieve this end the Socialist Party pledges itself to the following programme:

1. Social.

1. All business vitally essential for the existence and welfare of the people, such as railroads, express service, steamship lines, telegraphs, mines, oil wells, power plants, elevators, packing houses, cold storage plants and all industries operating on a national scale, should be taken over by the nation.

2. All publicly owned industries should be administered jointly by the government and representative of the workers, not for revenue or profit, but with the sole object of securing just compensation and humane conditions of employment to the workers and efficient and reasonable service to the public.

3. All banks should be acquired by the government, and incorporated in a unified public banking system.

4. The business of insurance should be taken over by the government, and should be extended to include insurance against accident, sickness, invalidity, old age and unemployment, without contribution on the part of the worker.

5. Congress should enforce the provisions of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments with reference to the Negroes, and effective federal legislation should be enacted to secure to the Negroes full civil, political, industrial and educational rights.

2. Industrial.

1. Congress should enact effective laws to abolish child labor, to fix minimum wages, based on an ascertained cost of a decent standard of life, to protect migratory and unemployed workers from oppression, to abolish detective and strike-breaking agencies and to establish a shorter work-day in keeping with increased industrial productivity.

3. Political.

1. The constitutional freedom of speech, press and assembly should be restored by repealing the Espionage Law and all other repressive legislation, and by prohibiting the executive usurpation of authority.

2. All prosecutions under the Espionage Law should be discontinued, and all persons serving prison sentences for alleged offenses growing out of religious beliefs, political views or industrial activities should be fully pardoned and immediately released.

3. No alien should be deported from the United States on account of his political views or participation in labor struggles, nor in any event without proper trial on specific charges. The arbitrary power to deport aliens by administrative order should be repealed.

4. The power of the courts to restrain workers in their struggles against employers by the writ of injunction or otherwise, and their power to nullify Congressional legislation, should be abrogated.

5. Federal judges should be elected by the people and be subject to recall.

6. The President and the Vice President of the United States should be elected by direct popular election, and be subject to recall. All members of the Cabinet should be elected by Congress and be responsible at all times to the vote thereof.

7. Suffrage should be equal and unrestricted in fact as well as in law for all men and women throughout the nation.

8. Because of the strict residential qualification of suffrage in this country, millions of citizens are disfranchised in every election; adequate provision should be made for the registration and voting of migratory voters.

9. The Constitution of the United States should be amended to strengthen the safeguards of civil and political liberty, and to remove all obstacles to industrial and social reform, and reconstruction, including the changes enumerated in this programme, in keeping with the will and interest of the people. It should be made amendable by a majority of the voters of the nation upon their own initiative, or upon the initiative of Congress.

4. Foreign Relations.

1. All claims of the United States against allied countries for loans made during the war should be cancelled upon the understanding that all war debts among such countries shall likewise be cancelled. The largest possible credit in food, raw material and machinery should be extended to the stricken nations of Europe in order to help them rebuild the ruined world.

2. The Government of the United States should initiate a movement to dissolve the mischievous organization called the "League of Nations" and to create an international parliament, composed of democratically elected representatives of all nations of the world, based upon the recognition of their equal rights, the principles of self-determination, the right to national existence of colonies and other dependencies, freedom of international trade and trade routes by land and sea, and universal disarmament, and be charged with revising the Treaty of Peace on the principles of justice and conciliation.

3. The United States should immediately make peace with the Central Powers and open commercial and diplomatic relations with Russia under the Soviet Government. It should promptly recognize the independence of the Irish Republic.

4. The United States should make and proclaim it a fixed principle in its foreign policy that American capitalists who acquire concessions or make investments in foreign countries do so at their own risk, and under no circumstances should our government enter into diplomatic negotiations or controversies or resort to armed conflicts on account of foreign property claims of American capitalists.

5. Fiscal.

1. All war debts and other debts of the Federal Government should immediately be paid in full, the funds for such payment to be raised by means of a progressive property tax, whose burden should fall upon the rich and particularly upon great fortunes made during the war.

2. A standing progressive income tax and a graduated inheritance tax should be levied to provide for all needs of the government, including the cost of its increasing social and industrial functions.

3. The unearned increment of land should be taxed, all land held out of use should be taxed at full rental value.

SOCIALIST DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES, 1920.

The convention also adopted the following Declaration of Principles:

The Socialist Party of the United States demands that the country and its wealth be redeemed from the control of private interests and turned over to the people to be administered for the equal benefit of all. America is not owned by the American people. Our so-called national wealth is not the wealth of the nation but of the privileged few. These are the ruling classes of America. They are small in numbers but they dominate the lives and shape the destinies of their fellow men. They own the people's jobs and determine their wages; they control the markets of the world and fix the prices of farm products; they own their own homes and fix their rents; they own their food and set its cost; they own their press and formulate their convictions; they own the government and make their laws; they own their schools and mould their minds.

Around and about the capitalist class cluster the numerous and varied groups of the population, generally designated as the "middle classes." They consist of farm owners, small merchants and manufacturers, professionals and better paid employees. Their economic status is often precarious. They live in hopes of being lifted into the charmed spheres of the ruling classes. Their social psychology is that of retainers of the wealthy. As a rule they sell their gifts, knowledge and efforts to the capitalist interests. They are staunch upholders of the existing order of social inequalities. The bulk of the American people is composed of workers—workers on the farm and in the factory, in mines and mills, on ships and railroads, in offices and counting houses, in schools and in personal service, workers of hand and brain, all men and women who render useful service to the community in the countless ramified ways of modern civilization. They have made America what it is. They sustain America from day to day. They bear most of the burdens of life and enjoy but few of its pleasures. They create the enormous wealth of the country but live in constant dread of poverty. They feed and clothe the rich, and yet bow to their alleged superiority. They keep alive the industries but have no say in their management. They constitute the majority of the people but have no control in the government. Despite the forms of political equality the workers of the United States are virtually a subject class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the workers. It espouses their cause because in the workers lies the hope of the political, economic and social redemption of the country. The ruling class and their retainers cannot be expected to change the iniquitous system of which they are the beneficiaries. Individual members of these classes often join in the struggle against the capitalist order from motives of personal idealism, but whole classes have never been known to abdicate their rule and surrender their privileges for the mere sake of social justice. The workers alone have a direct and compelling interest in abolishing the present profit system. The Socialist Party desires the workers of America to take the economic and political power from the capitalist class, not that they may establish themselves as a new ruling class, but in order that all class divisions may be abolished forever.

To perform this supreme social task the workers must be organized as a political party of their own. They must realize that both the Republican and Democratic Parties are the political instruments of the master classes, and equally pledged to uphold and perpetuate capitalism. They must be trained to use the ballot box to vote out the tools of the capitalist and middle classes and to vote in representatives of the workers. A true political party of labor must be founded upon the uncompromising demand for the complete socialization of the industries. That means doing away with the private ownership of the sources and instruments of wealth production and distribution, abolishing workless incomes in the form of profits, interest or rents, transforming the whole able-bodied population of the country into useful workers, and securing to all workers the full social value of their work.

The Socialist Party is such a political party. It strives by means of political methods, including the action of its representatives in the Legislatures and other public offices, to force the enactment of such measures as will immediately benefit the workers, raise their standard of life, increase their power and stiffen their resistance to capitalist aggression. Its purpose is to secure a majority in Congress and in every State Legislature, to win the principal executive and judicial offices, to become the dominant and controlling party, and when in power to transfer to the ownership by the people of industries, beginning with those of a public character, such as banking, insurance, mining, transportation and communication, as well as the trustified industries, and extending the process to all other industries susceptible of collective ownership, as rapidly as their technical conditions will permit. It also proposes to socialize the system of public education and health and all activities and institutions vitally affecting the public needs and welfare, including dwelling houses. The Socialist programme advocates the socialization of all large farming estates and land used for industrial and public purposes as well as all instrumentalities for storing, preserving and marketing farm products. It does not contemplate interference with the private possession of land actually used and cultivated by occupants. The Socialist Party, when in political control, proposes to reorganize the government in form and substance so as to change it from a tool of repression into an instrument of social and industrial service. It affirms a fundamental truth of the American Declaration of Independence, that when a government fails to serve us, or becomes destructive of human happiness, "it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute a new government, laying its foundations in such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

The Socialist transformation cannot be successfully accomplished by political victories alone. The reorganization of the industries upon the basis of social operation and co-operative effort will require an intelligent and disciplined working class, skilled not only in the processes of physical work but also in the technical problems of management. This indispensable training the workers can best gain as a result of their constant efforts to secure a greater share in the management of industries through their labor unions and co-operatives. These economic organizations of labor have also an immediate practice and vital function. Their daily struggles for betterment in the sphere of their respective industries supplement and reinforce the political efforts of the Socialist Party in the same general direction, and their great economic power may prove a formidable weapon for safeguarding the political rights of labor. The Socialist Party does not intend to interfere in the internal affairs of labor unions, but will always support them in their economic struggle. In order, however, that such struggle might attain the maximum of efficiency and success, the Socialists favor the organization of workers along lines of industrial unionism, in closest organic co-operation, as an organized working class body.

The Socialist Party does not seek to interfere with the institution of the family, as such, but promises to make family life fuller, nobler and happier by removing the sordid factor of economic dependence of woman on man, and by assuring to all members of the family greater material security, and more leisure to cultivate the joys of the home. The Socialist Party adheres strictly to the principle of complete separation of state and church. It recognizes the right of voluntary communities of citizens to maintain religious institutions and to worship according to the dictates of their conscience. The Socialist Party seeks to attain its end by orderly and constitutional methods, so long as the ballot box, the right of representation and civil liberties are maintained. Violence is not the weapon of the Socialist Party but of the short-sighted representatives of the ruling classes, who stupidly believe that social movements and ideals can be destroyed by brutal physical repression. The socialists depend upon education and organization of the masses.

The domination of the privileged classes has been so strong, that they have succeeded in persuading their credulous fellow citizens that they, the despoilers of America, are the only true Americans; that their selfish class interests are the sacred interests of the nation; that only those that submit supinely to their oppressive rule are loyal and patriotic citizens, and that all who oppose their exactions and pretensions are traitors to their country. The Socialists emphatically reject this fraudulent notion of patriotism. The Socialist Party gives its service and allegiance to the mass of the American people, the working classes, but this interest is not limited to America alone. In modern civilization the destinies of all nations are inextricably interwoven. No nation can be prosperous and happy while its neighbors are poor and miserable. No nation can be truly free if other nations are enslaved. The ties of international interdependence and solidarity are particularly vital among the working classes. In all the advanced countries of the world the working classes are engaged in the identical struggle for political and economic freedom, and the success or failure of each is immediately reflected upon the progress and fortunes of all.

The Socialist Party is opposed to militarism and to wars among nations. Modern wars are generally caused by commercial and financial rivalries and intrigues of the capitalist interests in different countries. They are made by the ruling classes and fought by the masses. They bring wealth and power to the privileged few and suffering, death and desolation to the many. They cripple the struggles of the workers for political rights, material improvement and social justice and tend to sever the bonds of solidarity between them and their brothers in other countries.

The Socialist movement is a world struggle in behalf of human civilization. The Socialist Party of the United States co-operates with similar parties in other countries, and extends to them its full support in their struggles, confident that the class-conscious workers all over the world will eventually secure the powers of government in their respective countries, abolish the oppression and chaos, the strife and bloodshed of international capitalism, and establish a federation of Socialist republics, co-operating with each other for the benefit of the human race and for the maintenance of the peace of the world.

The Socialist National Convention, on May 14, adopted the majority report of its Committee on Foreign Relations, presented by Morris Hillquit, declaring the adherence of the Socialist Party of America to the Third Internationale, organized and dominated by Lenine, Trotzky and the Communist Party of Russia, with instructions to its international delegates to insist that no special method for the attainment of the Socialist Commonwealth, such as the "dictatorship of the proletariat," be imposed as a condition of affiliation. The delegates were also instructed to participate in movements looking to the union of all Socialist organizations in the world into one Internationale. The Socialists of France, Great Britain and Germany have refused to affiliate with the Third Internationale. Upon the plea of Mr. Hillquit that its adoption would necessitate a change in the method of the Socialist Party of America from one of political action to a programme of violence and a recurrence of the street fighting and barricades of the Paris Commune, the convention voted down the ultra-radical substitute offered by J. Louis Engdahl of Illinois and William F. Quick of Wisconsin as a minority of the committee, merely reaffirming the adherence of the party to the Third Internationale without any qualification. This substitute was defeated by a vote of 90 to 40.

NEW YORK STATE SOCIALIST PLATFORM OF 1920.

(Adopted July 4, at New York City.)

Preamble.

The Socialist Party of New York, in State Convention assembled, reaffirms its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism. We indorse the national platform and declaration of principles of the Socialist Party of America. In this connection we reiterate the declaration of the 1920 national platform: that the United States should immediately make peace with the Central Powers and open commercial and diplomatic relations with Russia under the Soviet Government, and that it should promptly recognize the independence of the Irish Republic.

The National Campaign.

We hail with enthusiasm the selection of Eugene V. Debs and Seymour Stedman to be our standard bearers in this historic campaign. To them and to our party at large we pledge our utmost efforts in the struggle for industrial democracy. We shall continue this struggle until the inevitable victory has been achieved, until the working classes have been awakened, educated and organized, until they have wrested political and economic power out of the hands of the exploiters and the profiteers and have rebuilt the whole social order, putting an end to private ownership of the means by which the people live, and thereby putting an end to the class struggle and class rule.

The Socialist Programme.

While thus striving always for the complete socialization of the socially necessary means of wealth production, we shall at the same time work for every measure by which the material, social and intellectual conditions of the working people may be immediately improved, their civil and political rights maintained and their capacity for organized action increased, or by which the powers of government may be brought more fully under popular control and directed to the solution of economic problems.

Capitalist Misgovernment.

The capitalist class, by controlling the old political parties, controls the powers of government and uses them to secure and entrench its position.

During the last two years the old parties, jointly controlling the Government of this State, have prostituted its functions to the interests of capital, have ignored the just demands of the workers, have made war upon the fundamental rights of the people even more shamelessly than ever in the past.

Socialists in the Legislature.

In the Legislature from 1916 to 1919 the Socialist delegation alone stood forth with a constructive programme calculated to relieve the people from the high cost of living and other evils resulting from the war and to protect the natural resources of the State against the raids of capitalist monopoly. Republicans and Democrats united to kill these proposals.

Growth of Socialism.

But the attitude of the Socialist Party commanded the attention and respect of thousands of thinking workers in the cities and the rural portions of the State. Despite all the lawless and dishonest efforts of the Lusk committee and the Attorney General's office, despite old party fusion in all the strong Socialist districts, the Socialist vote was enormously increased and a larger group of Socialists were sent back to the Assembly.

The Old Parties at Albany.

The Legislature of 1920 will live with an evil name in history. No representative body ever within so short a space of time committed so much treason to the institutions it was sworn to uphold; and none ever did less good to offset its misdeeds.

While ruthlessly slaughtering almost all bills offered in the interest of the urban and rural workers, it devoted the greater part of its time to concerted effort to destroy the Socialist Party whose growth was threatening capitalist domination, to throttle public discussion, to suppress all freedom in education, and to render impossible the settlement of economic and social questions through the peaceful and orderly process of political action.

The Ouster of the Socialist Assemblymen.

When the Assembly by the combined votes of Republicans and Democrats and in violation of explicit constitutional guarantees unseated the whole duly elected and qualified delegation of a duly recognized political party, solely and simply because of the political and economic principles upon which they had been elected to office; when the Assembly and Senate then proceeded to pass bills which their spokesmen brazenly admitted to be unconstitutional, with the aim of destroying that party and its educational work, the capitalist legislators thereby paid the Socialist Party the highest compliment it could receive—they acknowledged that its argument cannot be answered with arguments, but only with brute force.

But they did more than this. They exposed the true nature of the capitalist system in all its naked deformity. They demonstrated that political liberty cannot survive unless industrial liberty is added thereto. Either we must go forward toward Socialism, or our economic rules will destroy such measure of self-government as we already possess.

The Protest of Labor.

In response to a storm of protest from labor organizations of every kind and from all who still cherish traditions of political decency and fair play, the Governor vetoed the five bills. But there is no assurance that the veto power will be used in like manner again. Unless the political parties which sponsored those bills and which ousted the Socialist Assemblymen receive a telling rebuke at the polls this year, they may be expected not only to re-enact those measures, but to go on with the further programme of reaction which has already been prepared—to rob the wage workers and working farmers of their hard-won rights of organized action on the economic field.

The Awakening of the American Workers.

In this year of unrest the workers have given every indication that they distrust equally the Democratic and Republican Parties. This distrust is well founded upon the bitter experience of the past.

In placing our candidates in the field for all public offices that are to be filled at the approaching elections, we confidently expect that the workers of this State, enlightened by their experience of capitalist extortion and of political outrage, will rally as never before to the support of the Socialist Party, the one party which clearly and fully represents their class interests on the political field.

Working Programme.

All candidates of the Socialist Party, when elected to office, will vote and work for the adoption of such measures as the following, not only for the immediate relief of passing evils, but also as preparatory to the full realization of the Socialist ideal.

Housing.

1. Legislation which shall enable municipalities to acquire land, construct dwellings on public account, and lease them at rents calculated to cover cost of upkeep and replacement, but without profit, thus solving the now growingly acute housing problem.

Municipal Trading.

2. Establishment of a comprehensive system by which the State in conjunction with municipalities and co-operative societies shall deal on a large scale in food and other necessaries of life, buying directly from the producers and selling directly to the consumers at cost, thus eliminating the capitalist middlemen, stimulating production and diminishing the cost of living.

Collective Ownership.

3. The rapid extension of State and municipal ownership and operation of transportation and storage plants, of lighting and other so-called public utilities and of industrial establishments, beginning with those which are already most largely monopolized and those which have to do with the production of the prime necessaries of life.

Conservation.

4. The conservation by the State of the forests, mineral deposits and sources of water power which it still owns, the reclamation of such as have been voted away and the exploitation of these resources by the State, not for profit, but for the production of raw materials and power to be sold at cost.

Workers' Control.

5. The administration of these socialized enterprises to be placed in the hands of mixed boards composed partly of delegates elected by the workers in the respective industries, and partly of delegates representing the population as a whole.

Labor Legislation.

6. Legislation which will clearly exempt labor unions from prosecution under the so-called anti-trust laws, and will assure them of the right of collective bargaining in the sale of their labor power.

Farmers' Organization.

7. Legislation which will clearly assure to working farmers the right to organize for collective bargaining in the sale of their produce in order to protect themselves against capitalist monopoly in trade and transportation.

Strike Legislation.

8. Legislation guaranteeing labor the right to organize and strike, free from interference by the courts, through the power of injunctions.

Repeal of War Laws.

9. Repeal of the war emergency laws concerning military service and military training in the schools and repeal of the so-called criminal anarchy law, which has been demonstrated to be in practice a law for the suppression of free speech and for the promotion of spies and provocators.

Industrial Representation.

10. Amendment of the State Constitution and of the laws governing municipalities in such a manner as to introduce the principle of occupational as well as geographical representation in the legislative bodies and administrative boards; to introduce the referendum and the power of recall; and to take away from the courts the power to declare laws unconstitutional.

SOCIALIST LABOR NATIONAL CONVENTION OF 1920.

THE Socialist Labor Party's National Convention was held May 5-10, 1920, at Chateau Hall, E. 86th Street, New York City. There was a different chairman every day. There were approximately 50 delegates, from 20 States, representing mining and industrial centres, for the most part. The convention nominated for the Presidency William W. Cox of St. Louis, formerly a miner but latterly organizer for the Workers' International Industrial Union. The Vice Presidential nominee was August Gillhaus, Brooklyn, a stationary engineer. Cox was a delegate at the convention. The following platform was adopted:

NATIONAL SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY PLATFORM.

The world stands upon the threshold of a new social order. The capitalist system of production and distribution is doomed; capitalist appropriation of labor's product forces the bulk of mankind into wage slavery, throws society into the convulsions of the class struggle, and momentarily threatens to engulf humanity in chaos and disaster. At this crucial period in history the Socialist Labor Party of America, in 15th National Convention assembled, reaffirming its former platform declarations, calls upon the workers to rally around the banner of the Socialist Labor Party, the only party in this country that blazes the trail to the Workers' Industrial Republic.

Since the advent of civilization human society has been divided into classes. Each new form of society has come into being with a definite purpose to fulfill in the progress of the human race. Each has been born, has grown, developed, prospered, become old, outworn, and has finally been overthrown. Each society has developed within itself the germs of its own destruction as well as the germs which went to make up the society of the future.

The capitalist system rose during the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries by the overthrow of feudalism. Its great and all-important mission in the development of man was to improve, develop, and concentrate the means of production and distribution, thus creating a system of co-operative production. This work was completed in advanced capitalist countries about the beginning of the twentieth century. That moment capitalism had fulfilled its historic mission, and from that moment the capitalist class became a class of parasites.

In the course of human progress mankind has passed, through class rule, private property and individualism in production and exchange, from the enforced and inevitable want, misery, poverty and ignorance of savagery and barbarism to the affluence and high productive capacity of civilization. For all practical purposes, co-operative production has now superseded individual production.

Capitalism no longer promotes the greatest good of the greatest number It no longer spells progress, but reaction. Private production carries with it private ownership of the products. Production is carried on, not to supply the needs of humanity, but for the profit of the individual owner, the company, or the trust. The worker, not receiving the full product of his labor, can not buy back all he produces. The capitalist wastes part in riotous living; the rest must find a foreign market. By the opening of the twentieth century the capitalist world—England, America Germany, France, Japan, China, etc.—was producing at a mad rate for the world market. A capitalist deadlock of markets brought on in 1914 the capitalist collapse popularly known as the World War. The capitalist world cannot extricate itself out of the debris. America to-day is choking under the weight of her own gold and products.

This situation has brought on the present stage of human misery—starvation. want. cold. disease, pestilence, and war. This state is brought about in the midst of plenty, when the earth can be made to yield hundred-fold, when the machinery of production is made to multiply human energy and ingenuity by the hundred. The present state of misery exists solely because the mode of production rebels against the mode of exchange. Private property in the means of life has become a social crime The land was made by no man; the modern machines are the result of the combined ingenuity of the human race from time immemorial; the land can be made to yield and the machines can be set in motion only by the collective effort of the workers. Progress demands the collective ownership of the land on and the tools with which to produce the necessities of life. The owner of the means of life to-day partakes of the nature of a highwayman; he stands with his gun before society's temple; it depends upon him whether the million mass may work, earn, eat, and live. The capitalist system of production and exchange must be supplanted if progress is to continue.

In place of the capitalist system the Socialist Labor Party aims to substitute a system of social ownership of the means of production, industrially administered by the workers, who assume control and direction as well as operation of their industrial affairs.

We therefore call upon the wage workers to organize themselves into a revolutionary political organization under the banner of the Socialist Labor Party; and to organize themselves likewise upon the industrial field into a Socialist industrial union, as now exemplified by the Workers International Industrial Union, in keeping with their political aims.

And we also call upon all other intelligent citizens to place themselves squarely upon the ground of working class interests, and join us in this mighty and noble work of human emancipation, so that we may put summary end to the existing barbarous class conflict by placing the land and all the means of production, transportation, and distribution into the hands of the people as a collective body and substituting Industrial Self-Government for the present state of planless production, industrial war and social disorder —a government in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization.

The convention, by vote, reaffirmed the position of the National Socialist Labor Party in 1916, as follows:

Whereas, There exist to-day in the United States two conceptions of what an economic organization of labor should be; and

Whereas, One conception—that held by the American Federation of Labor and kindred unions—is that the organization should concede the right of capitalists to own and control industry, and should be built upon narrow craft lines for the sole purpose of protecting its members in their employment and of securing petty improvements in the conditions of labor; thus becoming a mere "watch-your-job-and-boost-your-pay" organization; and

Whereas, The other conception—that held only by the Workers International Industrial Union—is that the economic organization of labor should deny the right of capitalism to continue in the ownership and control of industry and that it should be built upon industrial lines, not only with the aim of more effectively co-operating in the daily struggle against the employing class, but for the supreme purpose of taking possession of the industries and operating them in the interests of society as a whole, and

Whereas, Neutrality" toward economic organizations of labor on the part of a political party of Socialism is equivalent to neutrality toward organizations that endorse and support the system of private ownership of the social means of producing wealth, the system which the party is fighting, and

Whereas, The bona fide or revolutionary Socialist movement needs the economic as well as the political organization of labor, the latter for propaganda and as a civilized means of registering public opinion through the ballot; the former as the only conceivable organized force without which all ballot is impotent and which force is essential for ultimately locking out the capitalist class from the industries; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Socialist Labor Party do all in its power to show the fallacy of craft unionism, and urge the workers to organize industrially on the principles of the Workers' International Industrial Union.

FARMER-LABOR PARTY NATIONAL CONVENTION, 1920.

THE Farmer-Labor Party was formed at a convention of Forty-eighters and others, which opened at Chicago, July 11, 1920. Senator R. M. La Follette of Wisconsin declined to head a national ticket. Several of the factions in the convention, which included Single Taxers, split and quit. The balance, July 15, nominated for President, Parley P. Christensen of Salt Lake City, and for Vice President, Max S Hayes of Cleveland, Ohio

FARMER-LABOR PARTY NATIONAL PLATFORM, 1920.

PREAMBLE.

The American Declaration of Independence, adopted July 4, 1776, states that governments are instituted to secure to the people the rights of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Democracy cannot exist unless all power is preserved to the people. The only excuse for the existence of government is to serve, not to rule, the people.

In the United States of America, the power of government, the priceless and inalienable heritage of the people, has been stolen from the people—has been seized by a few men who control the wealth of the Nation and by the tools of these men, maintained by them in public office to do their bidding.

The administrative offices of the Government and Congress are controlled by the financial barons—even the courts have been prostituted—and the people as a result of this usurpation have been reduced to economic and industrial servitude.

Under the prevailing order in the United States, wealth is monopolized by a few and the people are kept in poverty, while costs of living mount until the burden of providing the necessaries of life is well-nigh intolerable.

Having thus robbed the people first of their power and then of their wealth, the wielders of financial power, seeking new fields of exploitation, have committed the Government of the United States, against the will of the people, to imperialistic policies and seek to extend these enterprises to such lengths that our Nation to-day stands in danger of becoming an empire instead of a republic.

Just emerging from a war which we said we fought to extend democracy to the ends of the earth, we find ourselves helpless while the masters of our Government, who are also the masters of industry and commerce, league themselves with the masters of other nations to prevent self-determination by helpless people and to exploit and rob them, notwithstanding that we committed ourselves to guaranty of self-government for all such peoples.

Following the greedy spectacle of the Peace Conference, the money-masters feared an awakening of the people which threatened to exact for mankind those benefits for which the war was said to have been fought. Thereupon these masters, in the United States, through their puppets in public office, in an effort to stifle free discussion, stripped from the inhabitants of this land, rights and liberties guaranteed under American doctrines on which this country was founded and guaranteed also by the Federal Constitution.

These rights and liberties must be restored to the people.

More than this must be done. All power to govern this Nation must be restored to the people. This involves industrial freedom, for political democracy is only an empty phrase without industrial democracy. This cannot be done by superficial, palliative measures such as are from time to time thrown as sops to the voters by the Republican and Democratic Parties. Patchwork cannot repair the destruction of democracy wrought by these two old parties. Reconstruction is necessary.

The invisible Government of the United States maintains the two old parties to confuse the voters with false issues. These parties, therefore, cannot seriously attempt reconstruction, which, to be effective, must smash to atoms the money power of the proprietors of the two old parties.

Into this breach step the amalgamated groups of forward looking men and women who perform useful work with hand and brain, united in the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States by a spontaneous and irresistible impulse to do righteous battle for democracy against its despoilers, and more especially determined to function together because of the exceptionally brazen defiance shown by the two old parties in the selection of their candidates and the writing of their platforms in this campaign. This party, financed by its rank and file and not by big business, sets about the task of fundamental reconstruction of democracy in the United States, to restore all power to the people and to set up a governmental structure that will prevent seizure henceforth of that power by a few unscrupulous men.

The reconstruction proposed is set forth in the following platform of national issues, to which all candidates of the Farmer-Labor Party are pledged:

THE PLATFORM.

100 Per Cent. Americanism.

1. Restoration of civil liberties and American doctrines and their preservation inviolate, including free speech, free press, free assemblage, right of asylum, equal opportunity, and trial by jury; return of the Department of Justice to the functions for which it was created, to the end that laws may be enforced without favor and without discrimination; amnesty for all persons imprisoned because of their patriotic insistence upon their constitutional guarantees, industrial activities or religious beliefs; repeal of all so-called "espionage," "sedition," and "criminal syndicalist" laws; protection of the right of all workers to strike, and stripping from the courts of powers unlawfully usurped by them and used to defeat the people and foster big business, especially the power to issue anti-labor injunctions and to declare unconstitutional laws passed by Congress.

To Americanize the Federal courts, we demand that Federal judges be elected for terms not to exceed four years, subject to recall.

As Americanism means democracy, suffrage should be universal. We demand immediate ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment and full, unrestricted political rights for all citizens, regardless of sex, race, color or creed, and for civil service employés.

Democracy demands also that the people be equipped with the instruments of the initiative, referendum and recall, with the special provision that war may not be declared, except in cases of actual military invasion, before referring the question to a direct vote of the people.

Abolish Imperialism at Home and Abroad.

2. Withdrawal of the United States from further participation (under the Treaty of Versailles) in the reduction of conquered peoples to economic or political subjection to the small groups of men who manipulate the bulk of the world's wealth; refusal to permit our Government to aid in the exploitation of the weaker people of the earth by these men; refusal to permit use of the agencies of our Government (through dollar diplomacy or other means) by the financial interests of our country to exploit other peoples, including emphatic refusal to go to war with Mexico at the behest of Wall Street; recognition of the elected Government of the Republic of Ireland and of the Government established by the Russian people; denial of assistance, financial, military or otherwise, for foreign armies invading these countries, and an embargo on the shipment of arms and ammunition to be used against the Russian or Irish people; instant lifting of the blockade against Russia; recognition of every government set up by people who wrest their sovereignity from oppressors, in accordance with the right of self-determination for all peoples; abolition of secret treaties and prompt publication of all diplomatic documents received by the State Department; withdrawal from imperialistic enterprises upon which we already have embarked (including the dictatorship we exercise in varying degrees over the Philippines, Hawaii, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Porto Rico, Cuba, Samoa and Guam) and prevention of the imposition upon the people of the United States of any form whatever of conscription, military or industrial, or of military training.

We stand committed to a league of free peoples, organized and pledged to destruction of autocracy, militarism and economic imperialism throughout the world and to bring about a world-wide disarmament and open diplomacy, to the end that there shall be no more kings and no more wars.

Democratic Control of Industry.

3. The right of labor to an increasing share in the responsibilities and management of industry; application of this principle to be developed in accordance with the experience of actual operation.

Public Ownership and Operation.

4. Immediate repeal of the Esch-Cummins Law; public ownership and operation with democratic operation of the railroads, mines and natural resources, including stock-yards, large abattoirs, grain elevators, water power and cold storage and terminal warehouses; Government ownership and democratic operation of the railroads, mines and of such natural resources as are in whole or in part bases of control by special interests of basic industries and monopolies such as lands containing coal, iron, copper, oil, large water power and commercial timber tracts; pipe lines and oil tanks; telegraph and telephone lines; and establishment of a public policy that no land (including natural resources) and no patents shall be held out of use for speculation or to aid monopoly; establishment of national and State owned banks where the money of the Government must, and that of individuals may, be deposited; granting of credit to individuals or groups according to regulations laid down by Congress which will safeguard deposits.

We denounce the attempt to scuttle our great Government-owned merchant marine and favor bringing ocean-going commerce to our inland ports.

Promotion of Agricultural Prosperity.

5. Legislation that will effectively check and reduce the growth and evils of farm tenancy; establishment of public markets; extension of the Federal Farm Loan System, making personal credit readily available and cheap to farmers; maintenance of dependable transportation for farm products; organization of a State and national service that will furnish adequate advice and guidance to applicants for farms and to farmers already on the land; legislation to promote and protect farmers' and consumer's co-operative organizations conducted for mutual benefit; comprehensive studies of costs of production of farm and staple manufactured products and uncensored publication of facts found in such studies.

Government Finance.

6. We demand that economy in governmental expenditures shall replace the extravagance that has run riot under the present administration. The governmental expenditures of the present year of peace, as already disclosed, exceed $6,000,000,000—or six times the annual expenditures of the pre-war period. We condemn and denounce the system that has created one war-millionaire for every three American soldiers killed in the war in France, and we demand that this war-acquired wealth shall be taxed in such a manner as to prevent the shifting of the burden of taxation to the shoulders of the poor in the shape of higher prices and of increased living costs.

We are opposed, therefore, to consumption taxes and to all indirect taxation for support of current operations of the Government. For support of such current operations we favor steeply graduated income taxes, exempting individual incomes amounting to less than $3,000 a year, with a further exemption allowance of $300 for every child under 18 and also for every child over 18 who may be pursuing an education to fit himself for life. In the case of State governments and of local governments we favor taxation of land value, but not of improvements or of equipment, and also sharply graduated taxes on inheritance.

Reduce the Cost of Living.

7. Stabilization of currency so that it may not fluctuate as at present, carrying the standard of living of all the people down with it when it depreciates; Federal control of the meat packing industry; extension and perfection of the Parcel Post system to bring producer and consumer closer together; enforcing existing laws against profiteers, especially the big and powerful ones.

Justice to the Soldiers.

8. We favor paying the soldier of the late war, as a matter of right and not as charity, a sufficient sum to make their war-pay not less than civilian earnings. We denounce the delays in payment and the inadequate compensation to disabled soldiers and sailors and their dependents, and we pledge such changes as will promptly and adequately give sympathetic recognition of their services and sacrifices.

Labor's Bill of Rights.

9. During the years that labor has tried in vain to obtain recognition of the rights of the workers at the hands of the Government through the agencies of the Republican and Democratic parties, the principal demands of labor have been catalogued and presented by the representatives of labor, who have gone to convention after convention of the old parties—to Congress after Congress of old-party office holders. These conventions and sessions of Congress have from time to time included in platforms and laws a few fragments of labor's programme, carefully rewritten, however, to interpose no interference with the oppression of labor by private wielders of the power of capital. It remains for the Farmer-Labor Party, the people's own party, financed by the people themselves, to pledge itself to the entire Bill of Rights of Labor, the conditions enumerated therein to be written into the laws of the land to be enjoyed by the workers, organized or unorganized, without the amelioration of a single word in the programme. Abraham Lincoln said: "Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves the highest consideration."

We pledge the application of this fundamental principle in the enactment and administration of legislation.

(a) The unqualified right of all workers, including Civil Service employés, to organize and bargain collectively with employers through such representatives of their unions as they choose.

(b) Freedom from compulsory arbitration and all other attempts to coerce workers.

(c) A maximum standard 8-hour day and 44-hour week.

(d) Old age and unemployment payments and workmen's compensation to insure workers and their dependents against accident and disease.

(e) Establishment and operation, through periods of depression, of governmental work on housing, road-building, reforestation, reclamation of cut-over timber, desert and swamp lands and development of ports, waterways and water power plants.

(f) Re-education of the cripples of industry as well as the victims of war.

(g) Abolition of employment of children under sixteen years of age.

(h) Complete and effective protection for women in industry, with equal pay for equal work.

(i) Abolition of private employment, detective and strikebreaking agencies and extension of the Federal Free Employment Service.

(j) Prevention of exploitation of immigration and immigrants by employers.

(k) Vigorous enforcement of the Seamen's Act, and the most liberal interpretation of its provisions. The present provisions for the protection of seamen and for the safety of the travelling public must not be minimized.

(l) Exclusion from interstate commerce of the products of convict labor.

(m) A Federal department of education to advance democracy and effectiveness in all public school systems throughout the country, to the end that the children of workers in industrial and rural communities may have maximum opportunity of training to become unafraid, well-informed citizens of a free country.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

(Public Resolution, No. 29, Sixty-sixth Congress [H. J. Res. 20.]—Joint Resolution giving to discharged soldiers, sailors and marines a preferred right of homestead entry.)

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter, for the period of two years following the passage of this act, on the opening of public or Indian lands to entry, or the restoration to entry of public lands theretofore withdrawn from entry, such opening or restoration shall, in the order therefor, provide for a period of not less than sixty days before the general opening of such lands to disposal in which officers, soldiers, sailors, or marines who have served in the Army or Navy of the United States in the war with Germany and been honorably separated or discharged therefrom or placed in the Regular Army or Naval Reserve shall have a preferred right of entry under the homestead or desert land laws, if qualified thereunder, except as against prior existing valid settlement rights and as against preference rights conferred by existing laws or equitable claims subject to allowance and confirmation: Provided, That the rights and benefits conferred by this act shall not extend to any person who, having been drafted for service under the provisions of the Selective Service Act, shall have refused to render such service or to wear the uniform of such service of the United States. SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make any and all regulations necessary to carry into full force and effect the provisions hereof. Approved, February 14, 1920.

SALARY OF THE PRESIDENT.

THE salary of the President of the United States was the cause of discussion in the First Congress, in view of the fact that the Constitution declared that the President should receive compensation for his services. Washington had notified his fellow citizens that he desired no salary. The limits suggested in Congress ranged from $15,000 to $70,000. The salary was finally placed at $25,000, and this remained the compensation until President Grant's second term (March 3, 1873), when it was increased to $50,000. Chapter 2918 of the Laws of the Second Session of the Fifty-ninth Congress, approved March 4, 1907, appropriated "for travelling expenses of the President of the United States, to be expended at his discretion and accounted for by his certificate solely, $25,000." In the Second Session of the Sixtieth Congress the President's salary was fixed at $75,000 a year.

In South Carolina in 1848, 1852, 1856, and 1860 the Presidential Electors were chosen by the Legislature.

In 1864 the States of Tennessee and Louisiana also held elections and were carried for Lincoln; "but," says A. K. McClure in his book "Our Presidents," "their votes were not necessary to the election of the Republican ticket, and although Lincoln earnestly desired that these States should be recognized and the votes counted, Congress, by joint resolution, that Lincoln signed with great reluctance, declared that they should not be recognized, and they were omitted." Nor was there any count in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, or Texas.

In 1868 the Florida electors were chosen by the Legislature. Under a joint resolution of Congress, Mississippi, Texas, and Virginia were excluded from voting because they had no representation in Congress under the Reconstruction laws. The other Southern States had representation in Congress, except Georgia. There was a dispute in both Senate and House over Georgia, but Mr. Wade, President of the Senate, decided that Georgia's vote be counted.

In 1876 the Colorado electors were chosen by the Legislature.

It was in the Presidential campaign of 1884 that the Rev. Dr. Burchard, heading a delegation of ministers who called on Mr. Blaine, at New York City, to congratulate him, made the much-lamented reference to "rum, Romanism, and rebellion," which was held largely responsible for Blaine's defeat. The defeat of Cleveland in 1888 was attributed by Democratic politicians to his message to Congress, delivered a year before, making the tariff and revenue question the sole issue before the country. In 1892 Simon Wing, the Socialist-Labor candidate, polled 21,164 votes, which is included in the total. Both Republicans and Democrats fused with the Weaver, or People's Party, in different States. This is why no votes were cast for Cleveland in Colorado, Kansas, North Dakota, and Wyoming; none for Harrison in Florida, and only a nominal vote in Alabama and Mississippi.

Bryan got the nomination in 1896 by his "crown of thorns" speech at the convention. Democrats and Silver Republicans fused in many States at the election; Democrats and Populists also fused. In 1904, in Illinois, the Continental Party cast 830 votes.

RECAPITULATION.

RECAPITULATION OF 1920 PRESIDENTIAL VOTE.

The figures given above are, in almost every instance, those announced by the Secretaries of States of the respective commonwealths, and most of the totals represent the findings of the actual official count. In the remaining instances the figures are the ones certified by the various local election boards. The table is corrected up to Dec. 16, 1920.

The total for the Socialist Labor ticket approximated 20,896, on the face of the returns, but it is to be said that in a number of the States the Socialist Labor electors were called Independent Labor, or Independent, or Industrial Labor, so that the true total is considerably above that named above.

The Single Tax vote approximated 3,932, on the returns as filed up to the middle of December.

In Texas the American Party polled 47,689 votes for President, and the so-called Black-and-Tans polled 27,515.

There is no definite approximation of the strength of the Non-Partisan League vote, inasmuch as it expended itself in contests for Governorships, Senators, Congressmen, and local State officials. In some of the Western States the Farmer-Labor vote and the Non-Partisan League vote represented one and the same political class, and in other States the Non-Partisan League vote and the Labor vote shaded into each other.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS.

There is, properly speaking, no popular vote for President and Vice-President: the people vote for electors, and those chosen in each State meet therein and vote for the candidates for President and Vice-President. The record of any popular vote for electors prior to 1828 is so meagre and imperfect that a compilation would be useless. In most of the States, for more than a quarter century following the establishment of the Government, the State Legislatures "appointed" the Presidential electors, and the people therefore voted only indirectly for them, their choice being expressed by their votes for members of the Legislature.

MICHIGAN APPROVES PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

The people of Michigan defeated at the polls in November the proposed amendment to the State Constitution abolishing parochial schools. A bitter fight was waged on the question all over the State. The proposal was defeated in all but about a dozen counties. Some Protestant denominations besides the Roman Catholics joined in voting against the amendment. The big industrial cities went strongly in opposition to the amendment. It was asserted, just after the election, by a Detroit ecclesiastic, that $500,000 was expended in the campaign to preserve the parochial schools, and $300,000 on the other side of the controversy.

WOMEN BARRED FROM VOTING IN MISSISSIPPI AND GEORGIA.

Following the passing by Congress of the Suffrage Amendment to the United States Constitution, and the proclaiming of the amendment by the United States Secretary of State, Bainbridge Colby, as being in full force and effect, the various equal suffrage organizations throughout the country made preparations to have the women vote at the November, 1920, Presidential elections in those States where that sex did not already have the franchise.

The first and greatest obstacle encountered was the provision in practically every State requiring registration. The Anti-Suffrage organizations also got busy and both sides appealed to the chief State law officers in the different commonwealths, the one side claiming, the other side denying and clamoring against the right of the women to register. Finally the contest narrowed down to the two States of Georgia and Mississippi.

In Georgia, the six-months' provision in the primary law, so it was ruled by the State Attorney General, barred women from voting in 1920.

In Mississippi, the Attorney General there decided, the four-month's clause in the primary law barred women from voting in 1920..

HOW MANY WOMEN VOTED IN 1920.

There is no definite answer to this question, for the reason that in only one State, Illinois, is a separate record kept of the sexes when they register and also when they vote. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt's estimate is three women voted for every five men—that is, the woman's vote was three-eighths of the total vote. The following table based on the 1910 census, but calculated for 1920, shows the estimated number of women in each State, of voting age:

NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE VOTE.

The Non-Partisan League polled a much smaller vote than was expected by A. C. Townley and his associates in Montana, Idaho, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Washington and Colorado. They were snowed under by the Republican avalanche. In none of the States above mentioned did the Non-Partisan League carry an important candidate to victory at the polls. In Wisconsin the league backed the Republican ticket. In North Dakota they indorsed the Republican candidate for Governor, who was elected, but many leaguers voted for O'Connor, Democrat and Independent. The struggle in North Dakota this year, dependent on the strength of the league in the Legislature, will be over a proposal to investigate the league's relations with many of the local banking institutions throughout that State, several of which have failed recently.

SOLDIER BONUS AUTHORIZED BY POPULAR VOTE.

The voters of New York State in November, 1920, by a large majority, passed the referendum proposal authorizing the State to issue not over $45,000,000 of bonds, redeemable in twenty-five yearly instalments, for a bonus to soldiers and sailors of the World War. The limit of each bonus is $250. The ultimate cost to the State is figured at $75,000,000. The recipients get $10 for each month of service, provided they served over two months. Conscientious objectors and slackers are barred.

THE STATE CONSTITUTION AMENDED.

The voters also amended the State Constitution (Art. VII.) to the following effect: (1) "The State is henceforth authorized to issue bonds to anticipate taxes and revenues; (2) certain debts cannot be contracted until authorized at a general election; (3) providing for sinking funds and the extinguishment of debts already incurred; (4) the Legislature must provide yearly for paying interest and instalments on debts already contracted; (5) the people must first approve, by their votes, any debt for highway construction.

The Prohibition Party failed to secure the petition that the Ohio election laws require for an organization that has not polled at least 10 per cent. of the total vote at the last general election, and for that reason there was neither an electoral nor a State ticket of the party on the ballot. Only 274 scattering Prohibitionist votes were cast.

WOODROW WILSON'S FAREWELL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

In his farewell message to Congress, Dec. 7. 1920, urging independence for the Philippines, financial aid to Armenia, care and treatment of former service men, governmental economy, a national budget system, promotion of agriculture and American industries, President Wilson, though he made no direct statement about the Peace Treaty or the League Covenant, said:

"Gentlemen of the Congress: When I addressed myself to performing the duty laid upon the President by the Constitution to present to you an annual report on the state of the Union, I found my thought dominated by an immortal sentence of Abraham Lincoln's.

" 'Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it,'—

"a sentence immortal because it embodies in a form of utter simplicity and purity the essential faith of the nation, the faith in which it was conceived and the faith in which it has grown to glory and power. With that faith and the birth of a nation founded upon it came the hope into the world that a new order would prevail throughout the affairs of mankind an order in which reason and right would take precedence of covetousness and force, and I believe that I express the wish and purpose of every thoughtful American when I say that this sentence marks for us in the plainest manner the part we should play alike in the arrangement of our domestic affairs and in our exercise of influence upon the affairs of the world. By this faith, and by this faith alone, can the world be lifted out of its present confusion and despair. It was this faith which prevailed over the wicked force of Germany. You will remember that the beginning of the end of the war came when the German people found themselves face to face with the conscience of the world and realized that right was everywhere arrayed against the wrong that their government was attempting to perpetrate. I think, therefore, that it is true to say that this was the faith which won the war. Certainly this is the faith with which our gallant men went into the field and out upon the seas to make sure of victory.

DEMOCRACY'S MISSION IN THE WORLD

"This is the mission upon which democracy came into the world. Democracy is an assertion of the right of the individual to live and to be treated justly as against any attempt on the part of any combination of individuals to make laws which will overburden him or which will destroy his equality among his fellows in the matter of right or privilege, and I think we all realize that the day has come when democracy is being put upon its final test. The old world is just now suffering from a wanton rejection of the principle of democracy and a substitution of the principle of autocracy as asserted in the name but without the authority and sanction of the multitude. This is the time of all others when democracy should prove its purity and its spiritual power to prevail. It is surely the manifest destiny of the United States to lead in the attempt to make this spirit prevail.

"There are two ways in which the United States can assist to accomplish this great object: First, by offering the example within her own borders of the will and power of democracy to make and enforce laws which are unquestionably just and which are equal in their administration,—laws which secure its full right to labor and yet at the same time safeguard the integrity of property, and particularly of that property which is devoted to the development of industry and the increase of the necessary wealth of the world. Second, by standing for right and justice as toward individual nations. The law of democracy is for the protection of the weak, and the influence of every democracy in the world should be for the protection of the weak nation, the nation which is struggling toward its right and toward its proper recognition and privilege in the family of nations. The United States cannot refuse this role of champion without putting the stigma of rejection upon the great and devoted men who brought its government into existence and established it in the face of almost universal opposition and intrigue, even in the face of wanton force, as, for example, against the Orders in Council of Great Britain and the arbitrary Napoleonic Decrees which involved us in what we know as the War of 1812. I urge you to consider that the display of an immediate disposition on the part of the Congress to remedy any injustices or evils that may have shown themselves in our own national life will afford the most effectual offset to the forces of chaos and tyranny which are playing so disastrous a part in the fortunes of the free peoples of more than one part of the world. The United States is of necessity the sample democracy of the world, and the triumph of democracy depends upon its success."

ARMENIA AND THE PHILIPPINES.

In closing, President Wilson said: "In brief, the immediate legislative need of the time is the removal of all obstacles to the realization of the best ambitions of our people in their several classes of employment and the strengthening of all instrumentalities by which difficulties are to be met and removed and justice dealt out, whether by law or by some form of mediation and conciliation. I do not feel it to be my privilege at present to suggest the detailed and particular methods by which these objects may be attained, but I have faith that the inquiries of your several committees will discover the way and the method.

"In response to what I believe to be the impulse of sympathy and opinion throughout the United States, I earnestly suggest that the Congress authorize the Treasury of the United States to make to the struggling Government of Armenia such a loan as was made to several of the Allied Governments during the war; and I would also suggest that it would be desirable to provide in the legislation itself that the expenditure of the money thus loaned should be under the supervision of a commission, or at least a commissioner, from the United States, in order that revolutionary tendencies within Armenia itself might not be afforded by the loan a further tempting opportunity.

"Allow me to call your attention to the fact that the people of the Philippine Islands have succeeded in maintaining a stable government since the last action of the Congress in their behalf, and have thus fulfilled the condition set by the Congress as precedent to a consideration of granting independence to the Islands. I respectfully submit that this condition precedent having been fulfilled, it is now our liberty and our duty to keep our promise to the people of those Islands by granting them the independence which they so honorably covet.

HIS CONFESSION OF FAITH.

"I have not so much laid before you a series of recommendations, gentlemen, as sought to utter a confession of faith, of the faith in which I was bred and which it is my solemn purpose to stand by until my last fighting day. I believe this to be the faith of America, the faith of the future, and of all the victories which await national action in the days to come, whether in America or elsewhere."

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE AWARDED TO PRESIDENT WILSON.

The Nobel Peace Prize for 1920 was awarded to President Woodrow Wilson. He was urged on the Swedish Parliament for the honor by the Interparliamentary Socialist group. He is the third American to receive this award, the two others being Theodore Roosevelt in 1906 and Elihu Root in 1912. The Peace Prize is awarded by a committee of five persons elected by the Storthing, and, like the others, usually amounts to about $40,000. According to the terms of the Nobel will the awards must always be made in kronen, each prize being a little less than 150,000 kronen.

The following Nobel prizes were announced late in 1920, too late for insertion in the list on page 137: Medicine (1919), to Dr. Jules Bordet, toxin expert of Brussels, Belgium; Medicine (1920), to Prof. August Krogh, oceanographer, of Copenhagen, Denmark; Literature (1919), to Carl Spitteler, essayist, of Lucerne, Switzerland; Literature (1920), to Knut Hamsun of Norway, novelist, who once worked on a street car at Chicago; Chemistry, (1919), to Prof. Asihan, artificial rubber inventor, of the University of Helsingfors, Finland; Physics (1920), to Charles G. Breteuil, head of International Bureau of Weights and Measures. He is an expert on nickel steel.

VICTORY MEDALS FOR 4 600 000 AMERICANS.

Every soldier, sailor and marine, enlisted or commissioned in the service of the United States during the war with Germany, on active duty and with an honorable record, will receive a Victory Medal by general orders of the Army and Navy acts of Congress. All soldiers of civilization throughout the world of the Allies will wear the rainbow ribbon of the Victory Medal, the distinguishing mark of military service against the Germans in the cause of humanity, liberty, and progress. The War Department estimates the total number of men on active duty at about 4 600,000, which includes 500,000 in the navy, 50,000 marines and more than 4,000,000 in the army. The medals proper are struck at the United States Mint in Philadelphia from a bronze of 90 per cent. copper and 10 per cent. tin. The proportions for the metal, as specified by the Interallied Military Commission, are common to all the Allies—90 per cent. copper and 10 per cent. alloy of zinc and tin.

OTHER AVIATION FEATS OF 1920.

Feb. 27—Major R. W. Schroeder, U. S. A., established a new world's altitude flight at Dayton, O., when he drove his Le Pere biplane to a height of 36,020 feet (almost seven miles). At this height the temperature was estimated at 67 degrees below zero. The aviator's eyes froze, and losing consciousness, he lost control of his plane, falling five miles in about two minutes. Some 1,500 feet above ground he regained control and made a perfect landing. After several days in a darkened room of the hospital he recovered. In certifying the record the Aero Club of America fixed the height at 33,113 feet.

June 4—Lieuts. Bossoutrol and Bernard, flying a Farman Goliath, broke the world's endurance record at Etampes, France, with a continuous flight of 24h. 19m. 7s.

June 8—Lieut. John H. Wilson established a new world record for a parachute jump, leaping from an airplane at a height of 19,800 feet over San Antonio, Tex., and landing some ten miles distant from the point of the jump.

OLYMPIC GAMES.

THE seventh revival of the Olympic Games was held in Belgium during the spring and summer of 1920. The contests, which covered more than thirty different branches of sport, opened with hockey in April and continued with occasional breaks in the programme until September. The track and field events, the principal feature of the games, were held at Antwerp during August. Various systems of point awards were used in the contests; that for the track and field contests being the International Amateur Athletic Federation method of seven points for first; five for second; four for third; three for fourth; two for fifth and one for sixth place.

The United States team easily won first place, the final standing of nations being:

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	Pts.
United States	9	12	9	10	9	5	212

The games resulted in five new world's records, three Olympic records, as well as two marks for events which had not been run at any previous Olympic meets. These were the 3,000 and 10,000 metre walks. Three of the world's records and two of the Olympic marks were made by Americans, so that the United States accounted for five of the eight new records. Loomis in the 400 metre hurdles, Foss in the pole vault and the 400 metre relay team got the world's records for America. Myrra, the Finn, in the javelin throw, and Thomson of Canada in the 110 metre high hurdles also made world's records. BOXING.

PROFESSIONAL.

Professional boxing underwent several changes in the matter of State control during 1920. A law was passed in New York permitting fifteen-round contests with decisions to be rendered by licensed judges and referees. A somewhat similar regulation was passed in Massachusetts, permitting twelve-round bouts. The New Jersey law was amended to permit twelve-round bouts without decisions and Philadelphia increased the duration of bouts from 6 to 8 rounds. Commission control as conducted in New York and New Jersey is gaining favor in Western and Middle Western States and the formation of a national professional boxing association is being agitated.

Lack of space precludes the recording of bouts other than those between pugilists of prominence. Abbreviations: K. O., knockout; D., draw; R. D., referee's decision; P. V., popular verdict; F., foul.

PUGILISTIC CHAMPIONS AND RECEIPTS.

All attempts to designate and classify the pugilistic champions and title holders are more or less arbitrary because of the fact that few such champions won and defended the championships at the same weight. Among the lighter weight boxers it is not at all unusual for a pugilist to be forced from one class into the next higher by growth and increased weight. The following list, dating from 1890, is generally accepted by critics and boxers as being the correct classification, although holders did not always win title from previous champions:

HEAVYWEIGHTS (over 158 lbs.)—1890-1892, John L. Sullivan; 1892-1897, James J. Corbett; 1897-1899, Robert Fitzsimmons; 1899-1906, James J. Jeffries; 1906-1908, Tommy Burns; 1908-1915, Jack Johnson; 1915-1918, Jess Willard; 1919-1920, Jack Dempsey.

MAN-O'-WAR-SIR BARTON MATCH RACE.

The climax of the 1920 racing season was the match race at a mile and a quarter between Man-o'-War and Sir Barton held at Windsor, Ont., Canada, Oct. 12. The race, held at the Kenilworth track, was for a purse of $75,000 and a $5,000 cup offered by A. M. Orpen, owner of the track, winner take all, and was witnessed by 20,000 spectators. Man-o'-War won by seven lengths in 2m. 3s., which was three seconds slower than the record made by Whisk Broom II in 1913. Chart showing running of $75,000 match race:

Man-o'-War	120	Kummer	2	1	1	1
Sir Barton	126	Keogh	1	2	2	2

CAVALRY ENDURANCE TEST.

The Cavalry Endurance Test, held under auspices of United States Army over a course of 300 miles from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., to Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., was held Oct. 19-23. According to the official plan the entire distance to be covered was approximately 300 miles, contestants to ride 60 miles a day for 5 successive days regardless of weather, and over a prescribed route.

Each rider was required to feed and care for his own mount and equipment. It was stipulated that no horse should be allowed to carry a man less than 145 pounds and that together with this the animal must carry also the complete cavalry field service equipment weighing 100 pounds. Every horse entered was required to be either a pure bred animal, a cross bred or a grade horse, to be owned in the United States and to be at least four years old.

The awards of the judges were made on the following basis: Condition of the horse shall determine the basis of his ability to continue further under the same circumstances: his freedom from injury, blemish or unsoundness fairly ascribable to work in the test and from the usual indications of condition apparent to the judges. A marked or continual leaving of feed by any contesting horse shall count against his score of condition.

Six prizes were awarded as follows:

First prize, $600; Mounted Service cup; blue ribbon, Arabian Horse Club medal; second prize, $400, red ribbon; third prize $300, yellow ribbon fourth prize $200 white ribbon; fifth prize, $150, gray ribbon; sixth prize, $100, black and white ribbon

The final standing of the contest is as follows:

NOTE: The Derby of 1915-6-7-8 was run at Newmarket as the "New" Derby. The 1920 Derby was won in record time of 2 minutes 34 4-5 seconds; previous best time being Lemberg's, 1910, 2 minutes 35 1-5 seconds.

The Derby was instituted by the twelfth Earl of Derby in 1780. A year earlier the same racing peer had started the Oaks, named after his place at Banstead Downs—the Valley of Lambert's Oaks. Lord Derby won his own race in 1787 with Sir Peter Teazle, named thus in honor of his wife, who was Miss Farren, and had been acting as Lady Teazle in The School for Scandal, when Lord Derby saw her for the first time. On May 18, 1847, Lord George Bentinck—a real power in the political and racing world of those days—moved the adjournment of the House of Commons over Derby Day. This motion was moved each year by a private member, until in 1860 Lord Palmerston moved it as a Government measure "as a part of the unwritten law of Parliament." Sir Stafford Northcote abandoned it as a Government motion in 1879.

The Derby was run without a break from 1780 until 1914, and in 1915 the Epsom stands and course were put to other even more important uses. A substitute Derby which cannot count was run at Newmarket in 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918 on a straight galloping course. The Derby course on Epsom Downs is banded, and consists of two straights and a turn—the historic Tottenham Corner

RUTH'S HOME RUN RECORD.

"Babe" Ruth of the New York American League Club established a new home run record during the 1920 season, scoring fifty-four home runs. These circuit hits notted the club eighty runs, fifty-four being scored by Ruth and twenty-six by teammates on bases when he made his various drives. He failed to hit a four-bagger with the bases full, but on five occasions there were two men on the paths.

Of his homers, thirty-seven came against right-handed pitchers and seventeen off southpaws. He hit twenty-nine of his four-baggers at the Polo Grounds, New York, and the remainder while on the road. His complete record:

WAMBSGANSS'S TRIPLE PLAY UNASSISTED.

During the fifth game of the World's Series, played at Cleveland, Sunday, Oct. 10, Second Baseman William Wambsganss made a triple play unassisted—the first in the long list of World's Series games. A description of the play, written at the time, follows:

"Both Kilduff and Miller of the Brooklyn Club had singled to centre in turn at the beginning of the fifth inning and were perched on second and first, respectively, when Pitcher Mitchell came to bat. The Brooklyn hurler, who had previously relieved Grimes in the box, drove a hot liner high and to the left of second base.

Wambsganss leaped into the air and came down with the ball clutched in the gloved hand. For the fraction of a second he appeared to hesitate and it looked as though the play would take the usual course of a force out. Then Wambsganss realized the golden fielding opportunity that confronted him and before the startled spectators could grasp the play he had sprinted to second, and stepping on the bag, eliminated Kilduff, who was well on his way to third.

Miller was tearing down to the midway sack under the belief that the hit was an absolutely safe one, and it was a comparatively easy matter for Wambsganss to run up the base line, and, touching the oncoming runner, completed the triple."

SKIING.

The ski, or skee, is a Norwegian snow or ice shoe, used for sliding, being a sort of toboggan for the foot, and consisting of a long and narrow wodden runner, to which the shoe is slightly attached in front, leaving the heel free, after the manner of a snow shoe.

NATIONAL Ski Jumping Championship, held at Chippewa Falls, Wis., Jan. 29—Won by Anders Haugen, with 267 2-3 points; second, Henry Hull, 267 1-3 points. Amateur championship won by S. During the season Haugen also won the Norge Ski Club tournament at Cary, Ill., on Jan. 19, and at Dillon, Col., on Feb. 29 established a new record with a jump of 214 feet.

YACHTING.

THE thirteenth series of International Yacht Races for the America's Cup was held off Sandy Hook N. Y. July 15 to 27, 1920. The challenging yacht was Shamrock IV., owned by Sir Thomas Lipton, who challenged through the Royal Ulster Yacht Club of Belfast, Ireland. The defending yacht was Resolute, built by a group of New York Yacht Club members. The series was the longest in the history of the international yachting event. Two races were won by Shamrock IV.; three by Resolute and twice the yachts failed to finish within the six-hour limit, due to very light winds. One start was prevented by a southwest gale which it was decided endangered the lives of the crews. In all but one race the Shamrock IV. allowed Resolute 6m. 40s. handicap, due principally to the challenging yacht's greater sail area. It was Sir Thomas Lipton's fourth attempt to "lift" the America's Cup.

The amateur skipper of the Resolute was Charles Francis Adams of Boston; Sailing Master, Capt. Chris Christensen; First Mate, John Christensen; Second Mate, Gus Olsen, all Scandinavian born but American citizens. Capt. William P. Burton was amateur skipper of the Shamrock IV. The challenger was designed by C. E. Nicholson and the defender by N. Herreshoff.

A summary of the 1920 series for the America's Cup follows:

First race, won by Shamrock IV., Thursday, July 15, fifteen miles to windward and return in light southwest wind. The Resolute's throat halyards parted, dropping her gaff and letting her mainsail down as she was about to round the fifteen-mile turn a mile ahead of the Shamrock. The Resolute withdrew, the Shamrock finishing in 4.25.12, elapsed time.

Second race, called off Saturday, July 17, after yachts failed to cover a thirty-mile triangle in very light wind within the six-hour time limit. The Resolute was a half hour ahead when the race was called off.

Second race resailed Tuesday, July 20, won by the Shamrock. Thirty-mile triangular course. Shamrock won by 9 minutes 27 seconds elapsed time, 2 minutes 26 seconds corrected time.

Third race, Wednesday, July 21, won by the Resolute over windward and leeward course in light southwest wind. Had there been no time allowance the contestants would have sailed a tie. Each took 4 hours 3 minutes and 6 seconds to cover the course. The Resolute won by her time allowance, 7 minutes 1 second.

Fourth race, Friday, July 23, won by the Resolute, boat for boat, over thirty mile triangular course in squally weather. The Resolute, leading from the start, won by 3 minutes 18 seconds elapsed time, 9 minutes 58 seconds corrected time.

Fifth race, postponed Saturday, July 24, because of twenty-five mile southwester.

Fifth race, called off Monday, July 26, after yachts failed to cover thirty-mile windward and leeward course within six hour time limit.

Fifth race, Tuesday, July 27, won by Resolute over a windward and leeward course in light southwest wind. Resolute won by 13 minutes 5 seconds elapsed time, 19 minutes 45 seconds corrected time.

FISHERMEN'S SAILING RACE.

The first annual race between selected fishing schooners for the championship of the North Atlantic Fishing Fleet was held off Halifax, N. S., Oct. 30-Nov. 1. The competing schooners were the Esperanto, champion of the New England fleet, and Delawana, winner of the Nova Scotia title. The conditions of the regatta called for best two out of three races over a forty-mile course for a purse of $4,000 and a trophy cup. The contesting schooners and crews were required to compete under the same conditions prevailing during actual fishing expeditions. The schooners were comparatively evenly matched in general dimensions and number of crew. The Esperanto, representing the United States fishing fleet, won in two straight races, defeating the Delawana, of the Canadian fleet, on Oct. 30 and again on Nov. 1. Result:

	Course.	Winner.	Time.	Loser.	Time.	Winner's margin.

SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS IN 1920.

(Compiled by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C. Gilbert Grosvenor, President.)

ARCHAEOLOGY.

Neil M. Judd, Curator of American Archaeology, United States National Museum, headed the National Geographic Society's reconnaissance expedition at Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, believed to have been the centre of the densest population in North America prior to the coming of Columbus. W. B. Van Valin, field expert of the University of Pennsylvania, found the bodies of eight prehistoric Eskimos in excavating an ice-entombed village site near Point Barrow, Alaska; also dwellings and rude implements as well as clothing. Sylvanus G. Morley of the Carnegie Institution of Washington completed a reading of Mayan inscriptions, published under the title "The Inscriptions of Copan." He finds that the Maya Indians had a definite calendar. A small pyramid resembling those of the sun and moon at San Juan Teotihuacan, Mexico, was found in the same region. It bears inscriptions that indicate its pre-Cortezian origin and resembles those occurring on Chinese tombs.

G. Pellegrini described the discovery of a pre-Roman sanctuary at Magre (Vicenza), Italy, about a kilometer southwest of Schio, on an isolated hill. During the restoration of the church of San Francisco, at Ravenna, Italy, where Dante died in 1321, Don Antonio Rotondi found a fresco, believed to be a portrait of the poet, dating from the second half of the fourteenth century. The church is being restored for the celebration, Sept. 21, 1921, of the sixth centenary of Dante's death. The site of a palace of the middle Minoan epoch in the Island of Crete has been uncovered. Numerous objects of that period were found. The outside walls of the palace can all be traced, the building being nearly 400 feet long and 300 wide. The remains of a large Roman villa, having a system of double stairways leading to an upper storey, were found at Vilazzano, on the road from Sorrento to Massalubrense, Italy. The location of the villa suggests that it may have been that of Pollio Felix. In the excavation of peat for fuel, from beds that were formerly pools, at Solferino, Italy, it was discovered that prehistoric lake dwellers once lived in that region. Pile work, evidently located there before civilized man lived in Italy, was unearthed. Excavations at the supposed site of Edward the Confessor's Palace, in Windsor Great Park, England, by Capt. Vaughan-Williams, have revealed what is thought to have been the dedication stone of a Saxon shrine. The marks of a cross and what appears to be Saxon letters were found upon the stone. Deeper down were found the remains of a kitchen and banquet hall, and traces of what seem to have been Roman baths.

What is said to be the oldest written code of law extant has been found, in part, among the hitherto untranslated clay tablets from Nippur, in the University of Pennsylvania museum. Some believe that these tablets were text books used at the great University of Nippur. The laws on them deal with the responsibilities of hiring servants, with trespass on farms and orchards, harboring of slaves, rights of slave women, &c. One interesting statute provides that rentals must run for three years in case the owner has been forced to give up his property, due to mismanagement. The law provides that property might not lie idle, or be improperly used, if some one was willing to use it for public or private benefit. In general, these laws, which antedate the code of Hammurabi by at least a thousand years, seem to be the product of a civilization existing many generations before they were written. On Aug. 9 Sir Herbert Samuel formally opened the new British School of Archaeology at Jerusalem. From excavations made at Abu Shahrain (the ancient Eridu), 100 miles west-northwest of Basra, R. Campbell Thompson concludes that in addition to the Semites in the north of ancient Babylonia, and the Sumerians in the south, a third people, belonging to the same stock as those of Anau and Elam, lived in this southern district of Babylonia in ancient times. Discoveries made at Tell Obeid, close to the Biblical Ur of the Chaldees, include a basalt statue of a king who lived about 3000 B. C. Other excavations in Mesopotamia, conducted by officers of the British Museum, throw new light on the culture of the Sumerians.

ASTRONOMY.

Investigations into the variability of the radiation of the sun were prosecuted during the year by Prof. Charles G. Abbott of the Astrophysical Observatory of the Smithsonian Institution. Prof. Abbott published some of the results of these investigations, showing that the sun's radiation is not constant, but fluctuates from day to day through a range of between 5 and 10 per cent. By a study of the distribution of energy along the diameter of the solar image, the conclusion, reached in other ways, is confirmed that the sun is a variable star. Under the auspices of the Lick Observatory, Dr. H. D. Curtis published a descriptive list of 762 nebulae and clusters photographed by him with the Crossley reflector. This list included 23 examples of a new type of spiral, of which Dr. Curtis says: "Its main characteristic is a band of matter extending diametrically across the nucleus and inner parts of the spiral. Frequently the whorls in this type form a nearly perfect ring; in other examples the whorls appear to begin at the end of a cross-arm. The general appearance is that of the Greek letter 'phi,' and I have termed such objects 'phi-type' spirals for the lack of a better name." With the aid of an aniline dye, through which dry plates were sensitized for the lower spectrum, Mr. V. M. Slipher was able to extend the photographic spectra of the planets into lower wave-lengths than formerly were accessible. Several new bands and lines due to the selective absorption of Jupiter's atmosphere were revealed through observations of that planet's spectrum with the new plates.

M. Gimpel and M. Touchet of the Astronomical Society of Paris are said to have secured the first astronomical photographs in color. They attached a camera to the small equatorial telescope of the Paris Observatory and took pictures with exposures ranging from three to forty minutes throughout totality in the lunar eclipse of May 3. The history of the star T. Pyxidis, R. A. 9th Om. 32s., Dec. -31 deg. 5817 min. was recorded by the Harvard College Observatory. This star was discovered on photographs made in 1902 by Miss Leavitt, and was at first thought to be a nova. At that time its magnitude was 7.4. Four hundred photographs taken since then of the region occupied by it show that it was also bright in 1890, but that during the intervening years it was only of the 14th magnitude. This indicated a period of twelve years for the star, but the maximum expected in 1914 did not occur. It has become bright again after an interval of eighteen years, possessing at this time a magnitude of about 7, and appearing to have the early form of nova spectrum.

Observations upon the occultation by Saturn of the star Leipzig I., 4091, on March 14, 1920, at the Reid Observatory near Cape Town, Africa, showed that there was a very small decrease of light when the star was behind Saturn's ring, and that its light died out gradually before immersion, while on the reappearance it momentarily seemed to be within the disk of Saturn. The Journal of the British Astronomical Association says that from the fact that Saturn's ring is now turned almost edgewise toward us, it may be assumed that the particles of which this ring is composed are either very much smaller or much further apart than they have heretofore been supposed to be. That journal also concludes that the observations indicate that Saturn is a smaller globe than has been assumed, surrounded by an atmosphere of considerable extent.

Members of the Solar Section of the British Astronomical Association observed the sun with the naked eye on 302 days during 1919, and on 126 of these had been able to see sun spots without the use of the telescope. It was concluded that the frequency of visible sun spots is therefore much greater than generally supposed.

Before falling approximately five miles and landing without crashing, Major Rudolph W. Schroeder, Army test pilot, declared that at 30,000 feet he had found trade winds sweeping from west to east at from 100 to 300 miles an hour. "At the peak of my climb," said he, "where I hung with slightly upward progress for fifteen minutes, I found the winds blowing toward the east at the rate of 220 miles an hour. I had started 30 miles west of Dayton, my machine had a speed of 100 miles an hour, and as I steered westward it was literally travelling backward at 120 miles an hour, or 2 miles a minute."

A new method of photographing extremely faint objects was announced by Dr. Shapley of Mount Wilson Observatory. It consists essentially in shortening the effective focal length of the telescope through the placing of a short focal lens between the mirror and the plate. It is Dr. Shapley's belief that this device applied to the big 100-inch Hooker telescope on Mount Wilson will bring one or two fainter magnitudes into the field of study, with the result that light will be thrown on many matters bearing upon the question of stellar and nebular evolution. Reports from British Expeditions for the observation of the eclipse of the sun in 1919 showed that the rays of light from remote stars were deflected as they passed the neighborhood of the sun. These observations were in accord with the predictions of Einstein.

BIOLOGY.

The Katmai Expeditions of the National Geographic Society, under the direction of Robert F. Griggs, continued their studies of the revegetation of the raw mineral "soils" thrown out by the volcano. The zoologist of the expeditions, Prof. James S. Hine, of the Ohio State University, secured a collection of insects in Alaska in which many species new to science have been found.

Albert Thomson and George Olsen, members of the staff of the American Museum of Natural History, found in Nebraska fossil remains of the little pair-horned rhinoceros, while Frank E. Lutz gathered 20,000 insects for the museum in Colorado. The skeleton of a Ceratopsian (Horned Dinosaur) and the whole of one side of a Stereocephalus Tetus (the Armored Dinosaur), were found by W. E. Cutler while excavating in the Red Deer Valley, in Alberta, Canada. The Armored Dinosaur has massive plates of bone embedded in the skin, some of the plates being an inch in thickness. Mr. Cutler also found a fossilized skeleton of a Hadrosaur (duckbilled Dinosaur). Through the discovery of a nearly complete skeleton of the extinct marsupial, Nototherium Michelli, near Smithton, Tasmania, H. H. Scott and Clive Lord have reached the conclusion that the Nototherium, which was hitherto known only from fragmentary remains, was a marsupial rhinoceros. While no remains of the horn have been found, there are evidences of its existence. The specially constructed cervical vertebrae, the structure of the nasal regions, and the form of the nasal cartilage—all point to the conclusion that the animal possessed a horn resembling that of the rhinoceros. If such be the case this discovery affords a curious evidence of parallel evolution, for the true rhinoceros belongs to a group of animals structurally different from the marsupials, none of which, at the present time, possess anything remotely resembling horns, either nasal or otherwise. San Juan County, New Mexico, was the scene of the excavation of numerous fossil turtles, some of them not less than three million and others as much as seven million years old. The bony box-like shells are almost as perfect as when, during Tertiary and Cretaceous times, they were occupied by the bodies of living animals. Sixteen of the fossilized turtles are new to science.

In an expedition to Jamaica Capt. H. E. Anthony, associate curator of the department of mammals of the American Museum of Natural History, found animals, new to science, which must have existed 100,000 years ago, judging from the strata in which they occur. Some of them were embedded in limestone caves. There were several rodents larger than any others heretofore known, and a number of fossil terrapins, tortoises and crocodiles. Living organisms imprisoned in amber, and believed to be incomparably older than the microbes found in the papyri of Egypt, have been found by Dr. Galippe of the French Academy of Science. As soon as they were set free they manifested signs of life. They are very elementary in their make-up, but are interesting survivals of a period believed to antedate that of prehistoric man. The biggest collection of mammals ever brought out of Mongolia—1,300 specimens, weighing more than 8 tons—has been brought from that country by the second Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, under the direction of Roy Chapman Andrews. By timing the speed of antelope by automobile chase and speedometer records, it was scientifically demonstrated that an antelope can run at 60 miles an hour at top speed for 2 miles, then 50 miles an hour for 2 miles, and then drop to 35 to 40 miles an hour for an indefinite period. Mr. Andrews's next expedition to Mongolia will be to the southwestern part, where he hopes to get specimens of the "true wild horse," wild ass and wild camel.

Coral grows twice as fast in Samoan waters as in the Atlantic Ocean, and Prof. Alfred G. Mayor, director of marine biology of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, announces that a reef of an age estimated at 30,000 years has been found in American Samoa. Frederick F. Brewster, of New Haven, Conn., presented to the American Museum of Natural History a collection of 3,200 specimens of land birds from the West Indies and South America gathered by Rollo H. Beck, under the direction of Dr. Leonard C. Sanford. A large part of this material is new to the museum's collections, and much of it is contained in no other museum. One of the largest collections of mango varieties in the world has been secured by the United States Department of Agriculture, through its agricultural explorers and by exchange with the British East Indian departments of Agriculture. The trees are now in fruit at the department's plant introduction station at Miami, Fla.

An expedition under the auspices of the Miami Aquarium Association visited Andros, one of the Bahama group, to relocate and study the life habits of the flamingo, now extinct in the New World except on this one island. Members of the expedition were James A. Allison, President of the Miami Aquarium Association; Carl G. Fisher; Louis Agassiz Fuertes, artist and ornithologist; Norman McClintock, naturalist and bird photographer; Louis L. Mowbray, technical director of the Miami Aquarium; Charles Harrison Thompson; John H. Levi, and John Oliver La Gorce, associate editor of the National Geographic Magazine. The flamingos were found and motion pictures of them secured for scientific use, this being the first time in nineteen years that they have been seen by white men. The sponge fishermen of the island have made great inroads on the few remaining colony during breeding season and the species has been practically wiped out. Through the efforts of the expedition with the Bahama Government, the government has undertaken the birds' protection, and has also permitted the taking of specimens to Miami with the hope of their being re-established in the United States where they existed about a hundred years ago.

CHEMISTRY.

Oil, bitumen, and other hydrocarbons have been found in the tar sands of Alberta, Canada, and methods for their profitable extraction have been worked out. A member of the department of mines and metallurgy of the University of Wisconsin has developed an improved acid Bessemer process of steel making. Basic material is used to line the converter instead of the acid lining heretofore employed. Dr. Zimmer, of Charlottenburg, has worked out a process for the synthetic making of solid asphalt. Dr. Jaggar, of the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory, spent the year collecting volcano gases for study. It is his belief that when sufficient samples have been gathered to provide material for quantitative as well as qualitative study it will be possible to establish the relative importance of the various suspected sources of volcanic energy. The Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, already the largest institution of its kind in the world, has received an additional $10,000,000 gift from Mr. Rockefeller.

A new oil bearing plant of the lettuce family—Lactuca Scariola, var. Oleifera, which, under pressure, yields about 37 per cent. of edible oil, is being planted widely in Egypt and the Soudan. By alloying gallium with cadmium, the United States Bureau of Standards has been able to reverse the vapor pressure relation existing between cadmium and mercury, with the result that a cadmium vapor arc is produced, whose spectrum is practically pure. Employed in lamp construction it gives a light of great brilliancy and of superior technical properties. The experience of Major Rudolph Schroeder, of the United States Flying Service, on his famous altitude flight at Dayton, O., has led to the development of a new apparatus for heating oxygen at high altitudes. A delicate thermostatic interrupter is employed in connection with electric resistance coils attached to the oxygen generator. The apparatus heats the oxygen as it leaves the exhaust valve of the container and keeps it warm until it passes through the distributer. Dr. J. O. Arnold, formerly professor of metallurgy in the University of Sheffield, and also the inventor of Vanadium steel, announces the perfection of a new steel which is both cheaper and better. For the tungsten used as an alloy in the making of Vanadium steel Dr Arnold substitutes 6 per cent. of molybdenum. Although using only one-third as much alloy, the results are about one-tenth better than those in Vanadium steel.

Dr. Irving Langmuir, of the Research Laboratory of the General Electric Company has worked out a new theory of the structure of matter which involves new conceptions of force space, time, magnetism, energy and the general properties of matter. He urges that space and time have a structure analogous to that of matter. Instead of atoms, he proposes a new smallest known particle which he calls a "quantel." This particle consists of two parts one part positive and one part negative present everywhere in space, moving in all directions with the velocity of light, and capable of passing through matter At the meeting of the American Academy of Sciences Dr. Langmuir declared that this new theory answers to all existing knowledge of matter and harmonizes with the Einstein Theory of Relativity. Quantels according to Dr. Langmuir, constitute what has heretofore been known as the ether of space, and through them arise all the phenomena of light, electricity, mass and energy.

ENGINEERING.

Navy aeroplanes equipped with a radio compass have demonstrated that it is possible to locate other planes successfully regardless of weather conditions or visibility. The necessity of husbanding her coal resources has lead the French Government to plan for the utilization of the water power of the River Rhone It is proposed to erect a number of power stations between Comps, near Tarascon, and Genissiat, close to the Swiss frontier. The latter will be the largest with 200,000 h. p. Other important stations will be near Lyons, Valence, Montélimar, and Mondragone Dams and locks will be built so as to reduce to a minimum interference with navigation. Besides the utilization of water power, the project includes the building of irrigation works, the creation of river ports, and the improvement of navigation generally. It is proposed to produce nitrates from the air in Central Celebes and Sumatra, in the Dutch East Indies. A survey of the water power available indicates that there is a million horse-power awaiting utilization.

The Board of Water Supply of New York City is now engaged in the preliminaries of the work of impounding the waters of the Schoharie River and carrying them, through a tunnel eighteen miles long into the Ashokan Reservoir, thus providing additional Catskill water for the metropolis. The State of Illinois has appropriated $20,000,000 for the completion of the canal with which it is proposed to give Lake Michigan navigable connection with the Mississippi River. This waterway will utilize the Chicago Drainage Canal between Chicago and Joliet. It is estimated that such a canal will handle 10,000,000 tons of freight a year at a saving of about $5 a ton A State irrigation project in the Columbia River basin of Washington has been under preliminary survey by authority of the Legislature The project includes 3,000 000 acres of land with a rainfall ranging from five to ten inches a year. It is estimated that the increase in land values growing out of the development will be $640,000,000. Work on the Industrial Canal, 300 feet wide, 30 feet deep and 6 miles long, with which New Orleans is cutting her water distance to the Gulf of Mexico in half, is approaching completion.

A noiseless gun consisting of a rotating barrel, motor driven and firing a shot at every revolution giving it a maximum of 11,000 shots a minute was tested by the Government. Centrifugal force instead of high explosives is used as a propellant. Gen. George O. Squier anounced at the meeting of the National Academy of Sciences the perfection of his wired wireless system, which permits the transmission of as many as 40 distinct messages over one wire at a time.

GEOGRAPHY.

NORTH AMERICA.—The Katmai Expeditions of the National Geographic Society, under the leadership of Robert F. Griggs, discovered a spacious haven named Geographic Harbor in an area shown by the last previous chart as dry land, which will permit easy access to the New Katmai National Monument with its remarkable Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes. In the country north of the park they discovered Lake Grosvenor, Lake Coville, Lake Brooks, and Lake Grant, four large and very beautiful bodies of water ranging from three to thirty miles in length. The Salton Sea, in the Imperial Valley, California, is gradually drying up. It lies 169 feet below sea level, in the centre of the California date region. According to geologists, the sea has changed from sea to desert and from desert to sea fifty times or more within geologic history.

There was created at Washington, under order of President Wilson a Board of Surveys and Maps, whose task is to co-ordinate all the map services of the nation. The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey issued a new outline base map of the United States on the Lambert zenithal equal-area projection, with a scale of 1:7,500,000. Besides its property of equal area, this projection is said to have smaller errors of scale and direction than the polyconic projection maps so frequently used.

Earthquakes were numerous in the North American area during the twelve months ending Oct. 1 when this report closed. During 1919 there had been 101 separate shocks strong enough to be felt. The United States Weather Bureau now maintains a staff of 4,500 earthquake correspondents in the United States; the Georgetown University Seismological Station, under the direction of Father Tondorf, S. J., has a finely equipped laboratory for the recordation of earth tremors and a staff of correspondents throughout the world Juneau, Alaska, and vicinity were rocked by one of the heaviest quakes in years on Dec. 14, 1919. The shocks seemed to centre about Katmai Volcano. The area between Mexico City and Vera Cruz suffered a series of severe earthquakes in January. The one occuring on Jan. 3 seemed to centre in Mount Orizaba, where the Atlantic lowlands and the Mexican highlands meet. Teacele and Coaztlan, small villages about thirty-five miles from the volcano, were virtually destroyed. Business blocks and churches in Orizaba were badly cracked, while houses in Jalapa were thrown down. Later shocks burst asunder the small extinct volcano Cerro de San Miguel, creating a crater out of which came smoke ashes, flame and a lava stream the latter spreading over a considerable area and causing some two hundred deaths Mount Orizaba showed the effects of the quake, a new crater being opened up thereon. The unusual violence of the principal shock is shown by the fact that it changed the course of the River San Francisco, ruptured the water mains at Vera Cruz, and uprooted thousands of trees in a forest twenty-five miles from that city.

Interesting results of the George Huntington Williams Memorial Expedition to South America, sent out by Johns Hopkins University for the purpose of investigating the history of the continent and of the Andes Mountains in particular, have been made public by Curator Edward W. Berry, a member of the expedition Evidence was found tending to prove that South America was connected with the Antarctic regions by a mass of land that ages ago sunk below the sea and that the Andes Mountains were formed from 5,000,000 to 20,000,000 years later than many of the rock formations on the Atlantic seaboard.

The State of Minas Geraes, Brazil, was visited by a violent series of earthquakes on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. A break in both South American cables resulted from two earthquakes occurring in the South Pacific Ocean. Examination of the seismographic records at Georgetown University disclosed that both shocks were recorded: the first continued for 35 minutes with the centre of disturbance approximately 3,800 miles from Washington.

More than a hundred towns and villages were badly damaged and some completely demolished in the violent earthquake shock of Sept. 7 in the Province of Emilia, in the Apennine Mountains in west Italy. In the town of Fivizzano nearly all the houses were shaken down and 432 persons were killed. Other villages in the vicinity of the famous Carrara marble quarries suffered almost as severely. Volcanic phenomena at the summit of Pizzo d'Ucella, a mountain about nine miles northeast of Spezia, followed the earthquake. Enormous columns of thick, dark smoke arising from the mountain, assumed the characteristic shape of a huge umbrella or pine tree, often observed before, during eruptions At the same time profound rumblings were heard, there being more than 300 subterranean concussions on Sept. 7. All wells and streams near the mountain were impregnated with sulphur.

ASIA—A severe earthquake occurred through the island of Formosa on June 5, damaging buildings and causing many deaths. Several hundred persons were killed and thousands made homeless by an earthquake which destroyed Grakall and other villages within a radius of sixty miles near Tiflis.

AFRICA—A group of extinct volcanoes in the Bayuda Desert, half way between Merowe and Berber, have been discovered by Dr. Chalmers Mitchell in his trans-African airplane flight. T. A. Barns, the explorer, has headed an Entomological Expedition through the Belgian portion of Tanganyika Territory and the Eastern Congo and brought it to a successful termination. While camped at the height of 10,000 feet on the Virunga Mountain range, Mr. Barns shot a male specimen of the Kivu gorilla which weighed more than 450 pounds and measured 61 inches around the chest. Col. J. Tihlo has announced that the Tibesti highlands are an enormous triangular mass twice the area of Switzerland, having summits more than 10,000 feet high. Emi Kussi, the highest point of the region, is the largest of a series of extinct volcanoes.

OCEANICA—Plans made by the Bishop Museum, at Honolulu, and Yale University have been announced by Prof. Herbert E. Gregory, director of the museum, for an expedition into the South Seas, to ascertain the origin of the Polynesian race, held to be one of the two most important unsettled ethnological problems of to-day. The Hawaiians, Samoans, Tahitians, Tongans, and Maoris are a race belonging to the Stone Age, with evidence of Aryan origin. They live on the Pacific islands only. The appearance of the crater of Mount Kilauea, Hawaiian Islands, was completely changed in December, 1919, by the collapse of the extraordinarily high lava column. The column dropped 400 feet, and the pinnacles and crags which had been part of the volcano landscape for some time, fell into the depths, while the well known fire lakes were turned into molten maelstroms. A tidal wave swept over the French possessions in Oceanica in February, 1920. The losses were great on Makalea Island.

POLAR—After two years in the ice in the Arctic north of Europe and Asia, Capt. Roald Amundsen reached Nome, Alaska. Reprovisioning there, he set sail on Aug. 8 for the vicinity of Wrangell Island where he expected to lock his ship in the ice, with which he proposes to drift. He believes it will ultimately take him across the North Pole, or at least close enough to permit a dash to it. He took with him Sverdrup, Wisting and Olunkin. Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, returned, late in 1919, from Animassalik, the only settlement of any consequence on the east coast of Greenland. Part Eskimo himself, he has visited every tribe and clan in Greenland. He devoted his time especially to the study of the differences between the tribes on the western and eastern coasts. An expedition to North Point, which will complete the Danish exploration of North Greenland, is being made by Lange Koch. Aside from scientific purposes, the object of his expedition, which will probably last about two years, is to secure Danish sovereignty of all Greenland. The British Imperial Antarctic Expedition, under the leadership of John L. Cope, put in the harbor at Norfolk on Oct. 25, 1920, for the purpose of coaling for its two-year trip to the unknown regions around the South Pole. The party left England on Sept. 28, and from Norfolk expect to go to Deception Island in the Falklands. They will then embark on a smaller vessel to Hope Bay, Waddell Sea and Graham Land, from whence they will explore over 1,200 miles of unknown territory. The expedition is equipped with air machines and wireless apparatus with which they expect to communicate with headquarters in London.

GEOLOGY.

A party from the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution, co-operating with the Katmai Expeditions of the National Geographic Society, studied the volcanic phenomena of Mount Katmai and the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes. These studies have shown that the lava as it rose in the throat of the volcano had a temperature less than 1000°C; that it did not flash up in explosive form immediately on reaching the surface of the earth, but that it first melted up a very large amount of the rock of the old mountain—probably much more than a cubic mile of it—after which it exploded with terrific violence. The problem of accounting for the vast accessions of energy necessary to carry out observed transformations has not yet been solved. Subterranean outlets in Pamelia Lake, New York, were apparently widened through volcanic action, resulting in the draining of the lake to such an extent that the Forest Service undertook to close up the outlets in order to retain the water. According to investigations, there are 32,000,000 tons of coal in three sections of land at Lampman, Saskatchewan, Canada. These coal deposits are believed to be among the best of their kind in the world. An abundant supply of feldspar and leucite found within twenty miles of Denver in such quantity and situation as to permit of being mined by benching in the open, is being used as the raw material for the manufacture of potash in commercial quantities by electrolytic decomposition.

HELP IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS.

Drowning. 1. Loosen clothing, if any. 2. Empty lungs of water by laying body on its stomach and lifting it by the middle so that the head hangs down. Jerk the body a few times. 3. Pull tongue forward, using handkerchief, or pin with string, if necessary. 4. Imitate motion of respiration by alternately compressing and expanding the lower ribs, about twenty times a minute. Alternately raising and lowering the arms from the sides up above the head will stimulate the action of the lungs. Let it be done gently but persistently. 5. Apply warmth and friction to extremities. 6. By holding tongue forward, closing the nostrils, and pressing the "Adam's apple" back (so as to close entrance to stomach), direct inflation may be tried. Take a deep breath and breathe it forcibly into the mouth of patient, compress the chest to expel the air, and repeat the operation. 7. DON'T GIVE UP! People have been saved after HOURS of patient, vigorous effort. 8. When breathing begins, get patient into a warm bed, give warm drinks, or spirits in teaspoonfuls, fresh air, and quiet.

Burns and Scalds. Cover with cooking soda and lay wet cloths over it. Whites of eggs and olive oil. Olive oil or linseed oil, plain, or mixed with chalk or whiting. Sweet or olive oil and limewater.

Lightning. Dash cold water over a person struck.

Sunstroke. Loosen clothing. Get patient into shade and apply ice-cold water to head. Keep head in elevated position.

Mad Dog or Snake Bite. Tie cord tight above wound. Suck the wound and cauterize with caustic or white-hot iron at once, or cut out adjoining parts with a sharp knife. Give stimulants, as whiskey, brandy, etc.

Stings of Venomous Insects, etc. Apply weak ammonia, oil, salt water, or iodine.

Fainting. Place flat on back; allow fresh air, and sprinkle with water. Place head lower than rest of body.

Tests of Death. Hold mirror to mouth. If living, moisture will gather. Push pin into flesh. If dead the hole will remain, if alive it will close up. Place fingers in front of a strong light. If alive, they will appear red; if dead, black or dark.

COINAGE OF UNITED STATES MINTS.

THE mints of the United States established a record in coinage the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920, according to the annual report of Director Baker, made public Dec. 4, 1920. A total of 809,500,000 coins were executed, which, Mr. Baker declares, is a world's record. The figures show an increase of 446 per cent. in coinage over 1915, the last normal year. Public demand for smaller coins, particularly pennies, is reflected in the report, which discloses that more than 512,500,000 coins in the record output were one-cent pieces. Mr. Baker said that much modern equipment had been installed in all mints during the year, including electric furnaces of 1,000 pounds capacity at the Philadelphia and San Francisco Mints.

GOLD PRODUCTION OF THE WORLD.

The world's gold production in 1919, estimated at $365,166,000 by Director Baker of the Mint in figures made public was a decrease of about $18,500,000. Production in the United States was $60,333,000, Mr. Baker said, or about $8,000,000 below the production in 1918.

MONETARY STOCKS OF THE WORLD.

The monetary stocks of gold of the principal countries of the world were estimated at $8,339,185,000 at the end of 1919, and silver stocks at about $1,877,691,000.

THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN MAGICIANS.

ORGANIZED May 10, 1902. Incorporated April 3, 1908. Harry Houdini, President; C. Fred Crosby, (N. Y. Press Club), First Vice President; Wm. M. Linnett, Jr., Second Vice President; John Mulholland, Treasurer, 306 W. 109th St., N. Y. C.; H. Rea Fitch, Secretary; Council, Harry Houdini, Richard Van Dien, John W. Sargent, G. G. Laurens, Lionel Hartley, Francis J. Werner, Wm. Berryman, H. Rea Fitch, John Mulholland, Geo. W. Heller; Trustees, Francis J. Werner, Wm. R. Berryman, Leo Rullman.

PELLAGRA AND POVERTY.

THAT pellagra varies inversely with the family income in the cotton-mill villages of South Carolina is the conclusion drawn after a three-year study by the U. S. Public Health Service. This is the first reported study in which the long-suspected relation of poverty and pellagra is definitely measured. As the income fell the disease was found to increase and to affect more and more other members of the same family. As the income rose, the disease decreased and was rarely found in families that enjoyed the highest incomes, even though this highest was still quite low. Differences among families with the same incomes are attributed by the report to differences in the expenditures for food, intelligence of the housewife, and ownership of cows, gardens, etc. Differences among villages which were economically similar are attributed to differences in the availability and condition of food in local markets. A recent statement by one of the largest life insurance companies in the United States indicates that the food standards of Southern wage earners must have improved remarkably of late, for the death rate from pellagra has fallen from 6.7 per 100,000 in 1915 to 2.3 in 1919.

CHAULMOOGRA OIL AND TUBERCULOSIS.

The recent widely circulated statement that the U. S. Public Health Service had found that chaulmoogra oil was as efficacious in the treatment of tuberculosis as it had been shown to be in that of leprosy is said by Surgeon General Cumming to be unwarranted. Experiments made some years ago with the oil have no definite results. Recent experiments with the ester, or derivatives, have been begun because of hopes based on some similarities between the bacilli of leprosy and those of tuberculosis, but these have not proceeded far enough to indicate what results will be obtained.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

THE League of Nations Council, Aug. 2, 1920, adopted the plan of the Advisory Jurists' Committee for an International Court of Justice. The proposals are:

First—Each member of the League will nominate two candidates.
Second—The court will have eleven Judges and four Deputy Judges.
Third—They will serve nine years.
Fourth—In a case arising between a power having no Judge and one having a Judge the former will have right of representation. In case neither has a Judge on the bench they will be entitled to Deputy Judges.
Fifth—The court is open to all states, members or non-members.
Sixth—The court will be competent for all cases put before it by agreement of the two parties.
Seventh—The court will be competent without agreement of both parties if both are League members.
Eighth—The court can give judgment by default.
Ninth—Judgment is final, except in the case of the discovery of new facts by the League or a third party, on whom the judgment also is binding.

The committee passed a resolution for establishing a high court intrusted with criminal jurisdiction in international law to co-ordinate and unify all extradition and requisition laws, such as those relating to the former Kaiser and the German war criminal cases.

It was decided not to have compulsory arbitration between members and non-members. It was feared that such action would weaken an economic blockade, and there are means of other pressure at the League's disposal against non-members.

Then Suddenly

WINS BIG SUCCESS

Many a Man Who Is Barely Making a Living, or Is Looked Upon As a Failure, Has in Him All the Qualities Necessary to Make Him a Big Success.

TRUE—LIFE INSTANCES PROVE IT.

To say that all my notions on how to win success were shot to pieces by Harry Martin is to put it mildly. But let me tell you the whole story exactly as it happened.

Harry Martin and I were old school friends and we lived in the same neighborhood. For some reason or other Harry didn't seem to take hold in business. He'd get a job—often a good one—and would be very enthusiastic over his future. Then he'd begin to complain of it, and in a few weeks would switch to another.

It got so that every time we met Harry, we'd say: "Where are you working now?" And nearly always Harry would tell with great enthusiasm about a new job he had just started in. Then in a few weeks it would be the same story all over again—Harry had a new job!

One day I met Harry on the street and shot my usual question at him. "Where are you working now?" Very much to my surprise he answered: "Same place—getting on fine—been there eight months and got a dandy raise." He seemed to be almost as surprised as I was over his change in fortune. I wished him the best of luck and went on my way.

Business took me out of town for nearly a year and I didn't see Harry until the next summer. He rushed into my house one evening, his face all aglow with enthusiasm. "Just been made head of my department—another good raise—twenty-seven men under me—come around to see me some time!" he shot out. Of course we were delighted to hear the news and showered him with congratulations.

I dropped in at Harry's office some few days later. Sure enough, there he was the head of a big department. Everyone seemed to have the greatest respect and admiration for him, and he surely was wrapped up in his work. The general manager passed by and Harry introduced me. From the way the general manager treated Harry I could see that he had made a big hit and was looked upon as a valuable man with a big future.

What I couldn't quite get into my mind was the reason for Harry's sudden change in fortune. How was it that he had floated around for years and had all sorts of good jobs and never held them, and then suddenly took hold and won quick, substantial success with every indication of a big future?

So I came right out and asked Harry. Boiled down, this is what he told me: "I had been fired six times, I sat down and took stock of myself. Something was wrong with me. I came to the conclusion that I really hadn't known any of my previous jobs to make good; therefore my employers naturally I had never before earned my salaries. As soon as I found the the remedy—for some way of getting what I lacked. I then re- the bunch, you included, had spent some of your evenings I remembered, too, that I had made fun of you fellows.

But, believe me, I now take back everything I said—you fellows were wise and I was the boob. I wrote to the American School and started their course on the very day that I started on a new job. This job didn't pay much to start, but it offered possibilities. My course helped me wonderfully and I began to realize the satisfaction of enjoying my work and giving real value for the salary I was paid. It didn't take the boss long to catch on, and as my work proved more valuable my pay increased—that is the first time in my life that I ever got a raise. Well, to make a long story short, they kept on promoting me until now—two years from the time I started—I am head of my department, and, best of all, I'm still going and going strong."

Harry Martin's case is typical of thousands of men and women who are trying to do work for which they are not prepared. As a result they either barely make a living or else fail altogether. Now take identically the same people and have them prepare for the line of work for which they find themselves most fitted and you will soon see a wonderful difference. SUCCESS COMES QUICKLY; they find sheer joy in the work that was formerly a drudgery; they find the work easy to do and they win prompt and substantial success as a result.

EVERY NORMAL MAN AND WOMAN is equipped by Nature with the necessary qualifications for success. The reason why more people do not win success is because they attempt to do work for which they are not prepared just like Harry Martin. But put them at work for which they are prepared— then success comes easily. In most cases you find that the unsuccessful dabbled at all sorts of things, and therefore usually failed. Then by chance, or as in Harry's case, by analyzing themselves, they wake up and prepare for the work for which they find themselves most suited, and big success comes.

For the last 26 years we have been at the task of making successes out of failures and near failures. Under our guidance thousands of men and women prepared themselves for their chosen work or profession and invariably made good. Underpaid mechanics and clerks became successful engineers, accountants, lawyers, bankers, etc. Why should you not succeed where others have succeeded? They were only average men and women. You can do what they did. Why should you not have a real job—a big income? You surely are not below the average in brains and ambitious, are you? Take that first step and make a check against the job you want. We will show you how to be successful—how to get into the big job, the big money class. You will be under no obligation when you send the coupon, it will cost you nothing but a two-cent stamp. Write or print your name and address and send the coupon in to-day.

The Foreman of To-Day

The Foreman Is the Key-Man in Industry

Upon the foreman's ability or lack of it depends not only the success of his department but the success of the whole concern. This vital fact was very forcibly brought home to industry during the strenuous days of the war. To-day industry is realizing the great need for able foremen and is therefore paying them greatly increased wages.

Good Foremen Are Made, Not Born

In the past the foreman was chosen because of seniority but to-day the foreman is carefully picked not only because of his practical experience in shop and factory production but especially because of his knowledge and ability in

MANAGEMENT SUPERVISION INSTRUCTION LEADERSHIP

A Committee of Men

Representing some of the largest firms in the country, who are responsible for the selection of foremen, who have been through the mill and succeeded, these men have worked out a plan whereby foremen, and those who desire to rise to that rank, can become thoroughly efficient in a few months.

What Is Your Goal?

There is no mystery about getting ahead. It's just a plain case of having the ability to handle the required work. A foreman is picked because of his knowledge of the plant operations—his ability to handle the work of the department—to instruct the old as well as the new men as to their duties—to supervise and last but not least he must be a leader of the men in his department. ARE YOU QUALIFIED RIGHT NOW? It is a real man's job, one that you'd enjoy as soon as you are familiar with the duties, one that pays the right man big money. Write or print your name on the coupon and send it to-day. We will give you, without obligation on your part full details.

AS PURCHASING AGENT FOR HUMAN MATERIAL

The Federal Board of Vocational Education in its Bulletin No. 50 states:

"It is economical for a plant of 200 workers to have a separate employment department." Immediately we grant the truth of this statement the magnitude of this great field is absolutely staggering.

Consider for a moment the care with which the ordinary purchasing agent of raw material is selected—yet his buying responsibility is less than one-fourth the actual cost to the company of production. Three-fourths of the production expense is wages paid to the workers—in short, three-fourths of the production expense is human material. Is it any wonder therefore that companies are waking up to the fact that efficient employment management is badly needed?

It has been estimated that the minimum sum for replacing the average workman is $50. Now it is quite evident that in a plant of fairly good size this item will in a short time amount to a considerable sum, and yet the greatest portion of this sum is needless expense. With proper employment methods, dismissals, quits, transfers, etc., may be reduced to a very low figure, thereby saving the company thousands of dollars. This is the work of the employment manager. He is paid a real salary because he actually saves thousands of dollars for his firm. Take for an example the Westinghouse Company of East Pittsburgh. Here it was found that one man had been hired 31 times in 15 years. The cost of rehiring this man 31 times meant a waste of $1,550. This case is typical in proving the value of the employment manager to his firm.

Without wasting the best part of your life in study and preparation, without the disappointing experience of years of hard grind before you can get a foothold in a profession, such as medicine, law, etc., you are offered one of the greatest opportunities of the age. Naturally, it is hard for you to realize what a wonderful chance this is. We have therefore prepared a 100-page booklet explaining the field of employment management, the demand, the opportunity and the reward. The facts and data in this booklet were compiled by nationally known experts on employment methods. We shall be glad to send you this booklet without obligation to you. Just fill out the coupon and send it in.

This work has been prepared for those who have not had the time nor means to take an Electrical Course in a Technical School. It is intended for self-instruction. It is the most understandable book on Electricity ever put in type, and is of a real service in the acquirement of trustworthy knowledge of all phases of Electricity. This standard work is now thoroughly revised and brought up to date.

Swoope's Lessons in Practical Electricity

An Elementary Text Book. Sixteenth Edition, Rewritten, Revised and Enlarged. By HARRY NOYES STILLMAN, Instructor at the Spring Garden Institute, Philadelphia, and ERICH HAUSMANN, E. E., Sc. Better Your ENGLISH In 15 Minutes a Day will improve your command of English almost at once. Business demands men and women who can talk and write English without making mistakes. The words you use, the way you use them, your grammar, spelling, punctuation — tell people what you are. A command of clear, crisp, vigorous English convinces the world of your worth. It is one of the most valuable assets you can have.

Sherwin Cody's Remarkable New Invention

The Great Secret Years ago, business men came to Mr. Cody with the question, "Why can't someone teach mature men and women to speak and write good English?" The systems then in use failed completely. Lessons were needlessly long and complicated. Hundreds of impractical rules had to be learned. Mr. Cody determined that all old methods were wrong. And after many years of experimenting he found a way to teach good English by making the student form the habit of correctness, and achieved amazing results.

By a comparative test, students of Mr. Cody's course improved more in 5 weeks than students of other methods in years.

100% Self-Correcting Method

On Oct. 15, 1918, Mr. Cody was granted a patent on his unique device. This method corrects the one weak point of mail-instruction by placing an instructor at your elbow every minute. It assigns and corrects all your lessons in spelling, punctuation, grammar, reading and conversation. It grades your papers and shows you exactly what progress you are making. You write the exercise assigned, then see just how Mr. Cody would correct it. Progress is almost unbelievably rapid. It is like a fascinating game.

Stenographer to Private Secretary

From $8.00 a week to $40.00

The Chart of a New Way Typist's Success

Most stenographers get only $15.00 to $25.00 a week simply because they lack speed and accuracy on the typewriter. No matter how good you are at shorthand, you can never expect the really big salaries unless you have speed—real speed—and accuracy on the typewriter.

EARN $35 TO $60 A WEEK! Are your eyes chained to the keys? Is your speed low? Is typewriting hard for you? Is your work distigured by erasures and errors? If so, is it any wonder that you are not earning more? All this can be quickly and easily changed by a wonderful new method of gaining finger speed and control—the New Way in Typewriting.

READ THIS TESTIMONIAL.

"I attribute this to the benefits that I received from the Tulloss New Way System, which enabled me to write speedily and accurately both transcription tests and the typewriting. I received appointment in July, with an increase of $200 over my old salary, and my hours are from 9 to 5. I have been repaid many times over in both money and time for all the course cost me."

JAMES B. KERRIGAN.

LEARN BY MAIL—ONLY TEN EASY LESSONS Like every great idea, the secret of the New Way in Typewriting is so simple that you wonder why it was never thought of before. Yet the results of the new method are amazing. No matter how low your present speed, no matter how weak or inaccurate your fingers now seem to be, this new method based on special Gymnastic Finger Training will quickly bring you expert accuracy and speed. It's all in the fingers—nothing more. Every hand has the same muscles and nerves and can be trained to the same dexterity. Every student receives absolute guarantee of money refunded in full if Course does not bring promised results.

NEW WAY BOOK—FREE If you are ambitious to get ahead—if you want to make your work easier—if you want more money in your pay envelope—don't wait a moment before sending for our booklet, telling all about this wonderful method and what it has done for thousands of others. This new method is bringing such marvelous results to others—is proving itself to be so sure a means of quickly increasing salaries—that you will be doing yourself a big injustice if you fail to write for it at once.

RUPTURE

Every day we receive letters from happy men and women telling of the freedom they have gained from long standing cases of rupture, by the use of the Schuiling Rupture Lock.

Says He Was Cured

Matthew Beeman, of Idaho, Ohio, wrote us:

"I was ruptured for ten years, had worn other trusses without effecting a cure. But I wore the Schuiling Rupture Lock for eight months and effected a cure which seems to be permanent. For six months I have not used any Lock and no symptoms of return of the rupture.

"I cannot recommend the Schuiling Rupture Lock too highly, and advise anyone suffering from rupture to use it."

And Falling Hair

Get a Small Bottle of DANDERINE

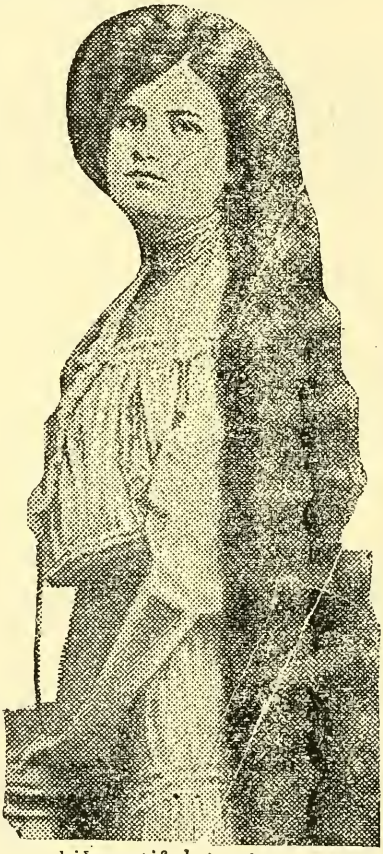
And Double the Beauty of Your Hair



To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits every one who tries this.

Arriving on the job—it's easy with a Cyclone Gasoline Traction.

Wealth and Health in the Well Drilling Business

A COUNTY engineer in the Middle West had been a salary drudge for years. Routine and office work had seriously impaired his health and nerves. He wanted work outdoors and to be his own boss.

Four years ago, without any previous experience in well drilling, he bought a Cyclone Gasoline Traction Well Drilling Outfit and started in the water well contracting business. He chose as a field of operation a farming district in the Corn Belt of Illinois.

The farmers in that locality wanted wells from six to eight inches in diameter. A good supply of water was found at depths ranging from 175 to 250 feet. The price paid per foot for the wells was $2.50, the farmers furnishing the necessary pipe and casing. With the Cyclone Drill from 40 to 50 feet could be drilled per ten-hour day. The daily operating costs of the drilling outfit never exceeded fifteen dollars.

From the above figures it is evident that this driller's net profits were in excess of eighty dollars per day. In four months' time the drilling outfit had paid for itself, leaving a comfortable living besides. Later a second drilling machine was purchased and the installation of pumps and complete water supply systems added to the business.

To-day this driller is in the best of health and is more than financially independent. His success is typical of many users of Cyclone Drills.

The purpose of this advertisement is to give you an insight into an interesting, pleasant and profitable occupation. Well drilling as a business pays a higher return than any other in proportion to the capital invested. There is an opportunity for well drillers in all parts of the country. Write for a copy of our Bulletin, "Drilling for Profits," and further information on the well drilling industry.

ATTENTION

HAVE YOU ANY JEWELRY YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE REMODELED INTO NEW AND ARTISTIC DESIGNS?

Your old jewelry will have added attractiveness because of its newer design and still retain its sentimental value.

ARE YOUR DIAMONDS SECURE IN THEIR SETTINGS?

Diamonds should be examined periodically, as a loose claw or worn-out setting, if neglected, may result in the loss of a valuable stone.

WOULD YOU LIKE A PLATINUM SETTING?

Or perhaps you think it too expensive. WHITE GOLD gives identically the same effect at half the cost.

DOES ANY OF YOUR JEWELRY NEED REPAIRING, REPLATING OR ENGRAVING?

Send us your small repairs, you will be surprised how we will improve them.

HAVE YOU ANY OLD GOLD, SILVER, BROKEN JEWELRY, ETC., YOU WISH TO DISPOSE OF?

We always estimate the cost of repairs or amount we will pay for old gold, etc., and advise you, in the meantime holding it until we hear from you.

Don't Wait 10 Years for That Big Job

EVERYWHERE in business today big jobs and high salaries are seeking trained men—men who have specialized knowledge—men who can make decisions—men capable of directing others.

The difference between the low salaried man and the high salaried executive is knowledge and training. One performs the mechanical details of business without understanding their significance. The other is trained in fundamental underlying principles and has a firm grasp on business as an institution.

The executive is not made by title alone. He can only rise to the top as he increases his knowledge and training and his ability to apply that knowledge.

That is just what LaSalle Extension University is doing for men in all walks of business life—helping them to acquire the specialized knowledge and training that fits them for bigger jobs and higher salaries.

LaSalle enrolls the young man just starting on a business career; it gives the man already started an added impetus. Its large staff of 450 business experts and specialists will help you train for promotion and increased salary during your spare time without interference with your present work.

LaSALLE MEN ARE PROBLEM TRAINED

Men occupying important positions are paid for their ability to successfully handle business problems. Earning power is based upon knowledge, and is in direct ratio to one's ability to apply what he knows. The mere possession of knowledge means nothing. The men who succeed have learned the knack of making their knowledge produce. Business education that fits men to do things must be based upon methods that develop constructive thinking. Every LaSalle member is "Problem Trained." He learns to do by doing. He becomes practised in the application of principles by working with problems lifted from the everyday experiences of successful business men. He is required to work out actual business transactions just as if he were the man on the job. It will be well worth your while to investigate this new and effective method of fitting men to do things—the method which has made LaSalle training a cashable asset with every man who has acquired it.

ADVISORY SERVICE

LaSalle members are privileged to obtain without charge at any time the aid of LaSalle's large staff of more than 450 business authorities and specialists drawn from every department of business. Put this great organization to work for you and your interests. Let them help you with your daily problems. They will not only train you for the bigger job, but will help you make good on the job when you get it.

This distinctive service, available to each member every business day of every year, is not paralleled by any other institution.

To Employers

The person who wears this LaSalle button is preparing for higher responsibility — and is worth watching.

Large industries and firms thruout the United States are availing themselves of the free service of the LaSalle placement bureau to reach high-grade men of experience plus training. We may be able to put you in touch with the right man for the job if you'll write us.

Send the Coupon

Indicate with an X on the coupon below the particular kind of executive training in which you are interested. We will send catalog and full information about the LaSalle "Problem Method" of training at home by mail, the free consulting privileges to members, the moderate cost, and our extended payment plan. We will also send you a copy of the famous book, "Ten Years' Promotion in One"—a book which tells how men with LaSalle training have gained, in one year, promotion which men without this training have not realized in ten. It has proved an inspiration to more than 230,000 ambitious men—it is FREE. Mark and mail the coupon NOW.

Psychology

Is the science which treats of the mind, its functions, conditions of activity, development and essential nature. The controlling factor in every situation is mental, and science has now demonstrated and verified by exact observation that are the result of correct thinking. The evidence of this important fact is now so conclusive that it no longer admits of any argument whatever. I will send this evidence to any address without cost or obligation of any kind.
